Final push for donations to auditorium underway

Donations for the Lincoln High School Auditorium Improvement Project are still being accepted. In fact, organizers make a point of saying that donations are always welcome, but if you want to see your name on the official published list of donors, you'll have to get your donation in by Feb. 21.

Jean Larson, who leads the fundraising effort, said the improvements, which are largely complete now, exceeded her expectations. "It's a huge improvement," said Larson of the auditorium. Larson said she hasn't heard any negative comments about it. She believes it is tasteful and elegant and the Art Deco style, befitting of the space and origins of the auditorium.

To date, $283,000 in private donations has been raised for the project that costs about $500,000. Improving the comfort level in the auditorium was a major selling point. In fact, the fundraising goals were based on the cost of refurbishing and padding the wooden chairs – $200. The main purpose of the project, however, was to bring the auditorium up to code. That has been accomplished.

Larson said she is still holding out hope that they will be able to raise enough funding to purchase about 36 folding chairs that can be used to fill in vacant spots.

The auditorium improvement project resulted in the elimination of two rows of seating. In certain situations, folding chairs could be used to fill vacant spots.

At this point, Larson wants to make sure that everyone, who wants to donate to the project and be acknowledged for their gift, has an opportunity to donate to the project. Donations can be sent to Independent School District 564, School District Service Center, 230 LaBree Ave. S., Thief River Falls, MN 56701. For more information, call the School District Service Center at 681-8711 or Larson at 681-1800.

Applications being accepted for cultural workshop

Applications are now being accepted for the Northwest Minnesota Foundation's cultural competency workshop to be held March 21-22 at Northland Inn in Crookston. The session begins at 4:30 p.m. March 21 and concludes at 4:30 p.m. March 22. Registration for residents in NMF's 12-county service area is $25 and includes materials, meals and accommodations at the Northland Inn.

This two-day workshop has been designed to help people who interact with clients and co-workers to understand, accept and respect cultural differences. Effectively managing and benefiting from diversity poses a significant challenge to many organizations. The subject matter focuses on the questions around cultural diversity and competence today. Cultural competency will be defined and its significance and necessity within an organization will be explained.

Okokon Udo, Ph.D., is recognized as an international presenter for cultural competence (the ability to effectively respond to the challenges posed by changing cultural diversity within an organization or a community).

Since 1996, approximately 450 northwest Minnesota residents have attended NMF's diversity program. Individual participation is welcome; however, community or organizational teams of three or more people are strongly encouraged. Application forms are available by calling the NMF at 1-800-659-7859. An application can also be downloaded off of www.nwmf.org. Applications must be received by March 1.

Local Chamber Orchestra offers musical valentines

If the saying is true, "Music is best when it is played on the heart strings," then the Musical Valentines which the Lincoln High School Chamber Orchestra will be playing on Valentine's Day should be all heart.

For the past five years, youthful minstrels of the Lincoln High School Chamber Orchestra have serenaded delighted audiences in their homes, at workplaces, in nursing homes, and in restaurants. Last year, they even had the priviledge of playing to a bride and groom at their wedding reception.

Whether it is to a spouse, sweetheart, grandparent, child, or friend, the orchestra believes that there is no better way to say "I love you" than through music. Their Valentine's Day repertoire includes: "My Heart Will Go On," "Unchained Melody," "The Rose," "Stand By Me," "Moon River," and "Love Me Tender."

Hiring these young musicians to deliver a musical valentine on Feb. 14 is as easy as calling 681-6970. The proceeds will be used to help the orchestra finance a music-saturated trip to Minneapolis this spring where students will continue to learn about, perform, and experience excellent music. But the trip is not the only recompense the students will have for their efforts. Knowing that they had a part in making Valentine's Day very special for someone is the musicians' greatest reward, and that is truly music from the heart.

Kiwanis International celebrates 90th anniversary

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Kiwanis International, represented locally by the Thief River Falls Kiwanis Club, celebrated its 90th year of existence on Jan. 21. Little out of the ordinary was done to celebrate the 90th anniversary, but the feat was recognized during the club's Jan. 25 breakfast meeting at the Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls, with each club member receiving a happy birthday cupcake.

"Cupcakes go over real big at a breakfast meeting," Kiwanis Club President Barb Natvik jokingly said.

TRF Kiwanis Club

The Thief River Falls Kiwanis Club was chartered Sept. 26, 1977 by 31 local businesses and professionals. Since then the club has sponsored or participated in several community projects, including the KTRF Hole-in-One, National Night Out, the Bike Rodeo, crowd control for local sporting events, delivering Meals-on-Wheels, science fair judging, awarding of a $100 scholarship to a Lincoln High School senior, donating books to newborns at Northwest Medical Center, assisting area Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops, purchasing Phonics Phones for Goodridge and Challenger Elementary Schools and other community projects.

Natvik described the club as a service organization that is committed to providing services around the community. She added that group does hold some fundraising functions with the intent to use the money raised for future projects.

The club currently has 27 members and works in association with the Thief River Falls Golden K Club and Lincoln High School Key Club. Natvik said the purpose is to improve the quality of life for children and families worldwide. The club's vision reflect its goals for helping children and families. "We will be the world's premier organization engaging adult and youth volunteers to improve the quality of life worldwide."

Kiwanis International

The birthdate of Kiwanis International is recognized as Jan. 21, 1915, but its roots date back to August 1914. Two Detroit business men, Allen S. Browne, a professional organizer and Joseph C. Prance, a tailor, decided to develop an organization [illegible] provide both fel[illegible] [illegible] features, and they wanted this group to be like no other organization.

A history bulletin on Kiwanis states that the group was originally known as The Supreme Lodge Benevolent Order Brothers, but its growing membership grew tired of belonging to an organization known as BOB. The name was shortly changed to the Indian name "NunKee-wan-is," and a short time after that it was shortened to Kiwanis. Early translations were thought to mean "We trade," but a more thorough translation revealed a truer meaning: "We have a good time - we make noise."

After only six months, the group had amassed more than 200 members. The corporate charter was returned by the state of Michigan on Jan. 21, 1915, which is the recognized beginning of Kiwanis International.

Future Kiwanis projects

Starting with the Lincoln High School graduating class of 2006, the Kiwanis Club will annually award a $1,000 scholarship to a graduating senior. The scholarship is the result of a year and a-half of planning. The Thief River Falls Kiwanis Club set a goal to raise enough money within its membership to secure an annual scholarship that would be presented to a senior each year. Through various fundraising efforts, the Thief River Falls Kiwanis Club now boasts a dedicated scholarship fund of $10,000.

Another project that the Thief River Falls Kiwanis Club is pursuing, is a establishment of a park at the old Northrup School site. The club is working with the city of Thief River Falls and other organizations to make a park possible. Natvik said fundraising efforts for the park, which includes the purchase and installation of new playground equipment, will continue this summer. The club is hopeful that park will be completed in 2006.

A feature story appearing in the Feb. 2 edition of The Times titled "Strip mall adds color and businesses to Thief River Falls," incorrectly stated that Cell Tech Communications was an authorized dealership of Cellular 2000. It should have stated that Cell Tech Communications was an authorized dealership of Cellular One. The Times apologizes for any inconvenience this may have caused.

Kierah Kimbrough scores 55 points as Badger/Greenbush-Middle River girls remain unbeaten...

Gators win double-overtime shootout against Grafton 72-70

Huge numbers by Kierah Kimbrough enabled Badger/Greenbush-Middle River to remain in the unbeaten ranks Saturday as the Gators ventured into North Dakota and came out a 72-70 double-overtime winner against Grafton.

Kimbrough scored 55 points and grabbed 20 rebounds as the Gators extended their season-long winning streak to 20 games.

Kimbrough broke her own single game school scoring record with a figure that ranks second on the state scoring list – behind only a 58-point night by Kay Konerza of Lester Prairie in 1982. And she did it even after picking up her fourth foul early in the fourth quarter.

"Kierah had an exceptional night," offered Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neibauer. "We needed all 55."

Grafton led 12-9 at the end of the first quarter. Badger/Greenbush-Middle River took a 26-21 lead into intermission and had a 40-36 third quarter edge.

A Badger/Greenbush-Middle River miss on the front end of a bonus-free throw opportunity with two-tenths of a second on the clock left the game tied at 51-51 at the end of regulation time.

Grafton scored on an offensive rebound to end the first overtime, tying the game at 59-59.

It was a 70-70 tie when the Gators called a time out in the final seconds of the second overtime. A play was designed to put the ball in the hands of Lynsey Roppe, who was given two options: look for Kimbrough, or if that didn't pan out, to take the shot. Roppe went with Plan A, threading a pass between defenders to Kimbrough, who scored the game-winner with four seconds showing.

"Lynsey made a major league pass," said Neibauer. "It was a great play."

Grafton tried to offset Kimbrough's scoring with four double figure scorers – a group featuring Jaren Mondry with 17 points, Kristi Anderson 15, Jillian Robideau 11 and Dawnielle LaBonte 11.

"Grafton has a good team," noted Neibauer, "but our defense was terrible. Seventy points! That's way too many."

The Gators shot 50 percent from the field (28/56) and were 16-for-28 at the free throw line, where the Spoilers were 14-for-18.

Overtime win gives NCTC division lead

■ Northland men edge Vermilion

First place in the Northern Division belongs to Northland following the Pioneers' 81-77 overtime victory over Vermilion in Friday night Minnesota Community College Conference men's basketball.

The two teams came into the game with matching 5-2 MCCC records.

With four games remaining – two at home and two on the road – the Pioneers' Rick Nikunen likes his team's chances at winning the division for the first time in his seven years as the Northland men's coach. "It's a different feeling knowing we're right in the hunt," he added. "But we've got to take it one game at a time. The guys were reservedly excited. They know what they accomplished, but they know there's lots of work to be done yet."

Northland led 42-36 at halftime. Vermilion tied it 67-67 when Antony Anderson scored with 23 seconds remaining. But he missed a a free throw that would have completed a go-ahead 3-point play.

Northland controlled the rebound and called time-out to set up a play. Those plans went out the window, however, when the Pioneers turned it over with 7.1 seconds left.

Vermilion's opportunity to win it in regulation time failed on what appeared to be an ill-advised 3-point attempt.

"Inside the last two minutes, both sides had opportunities, but neither one could capitalize," noted Nikunen.

Controlling the tip to start overtime, Northland went down and scored and dictated play the rest of the way.

The Northland offense featured Cyrin Shaffer with 24 points, Juwaun Howard 21, Jason Koch 17 and Mike Howard 14. Anderson led the visiting Ironmen with 28 points. Aaron Overby had 22 and Jameel Koonce netted 17.

Vermilion beat Northland 70-57 three weeks earlier in Ely.

Northland was 30-for-65 from the field (46 percent) and 16-for-26 at the free throw line. Vermilion went 30-for-84 from the floor (36 percent) and 11-for-14 at the line. The Pioneers finished with a 50-46 rebound edge. They also had more turnovers, 15-10.

It was the fourth straight win for the Pioneers, who are 15-7 overall. They host Central Lakes Thursday at 8 p.m. and will play Itasca Saturday at 3 p.m. in Grand Rapids.

The final week of the regular season will find Northland playing Wednesday, Feb. 16, at Rainy River and Saturday, Feb. 19, at home vs. Hibbing.

TRF girls end basketball losing streak

Saddled with a six-game losing streak, it was understandable that Thief River Falls girls high school basketball coach Jeff Loe was still apprehensive even with a 13-point lead at the close of the third quarter in Monday's game against East Grand Forks. And his concerns appeared justified when the Green Wave chopped the difference to just five points midway through the fourth quarter. The Prowlers did hold on, however, and Loe was able to breath a sigh of relief when the horn finally sounded on a 52-41 home court victory.

Thief River Falls created a little separation in what had been a back-and-forth affair when Nichole Gryskiewicz scored three baskets in the final 59 seconds of the third quarter to give the Prowlers a 42-29 lead. She scored on a drive to start the mini-burst, followed that with a steal and a fast break lay-up, and then put an exclamation point on her performance by swiping an East Grand Forks in-bounds pass under the Thief River Falls basket that she immediately turned into an highlight film reverse base line lay-up

Roseau forward Alex Lundbohm reached behind Thief River Falls goalie Lance Klaven and tapped the puck into an open net during Thursday's boys high school hockey action at the Ralph Engelstad Arena. Klaven had made a swiping glove save on the play, but the puck bounced away and landed in the crease, where Lundbohm was standing. A 37-save performance by Klaven helped the Prowlers beat the Rams 4-3.

East Grand Forks wins by 20 vs. Prowler boys

East Grand Forks turned an eight-point halftime led into an 18-point third quarter advantage and went on to beat visiting Thief River Falls 69-49 Friday in boys high school basketball.

The Prowlers fell behind 17-9 in the first quarter, but were still within 32-24 at halftime before the scoreboard difference shot to 56-38 in the third quarter.

"It went from and 8-point game to 18 in a hurry," remarked Thief River Falls coach Chris McLean. "We didn't defend as well as we needed to in the second half. They hit a couple of three's and really took off on us."

Nate Rambeck scored 17 points, Nick Mertens 16 and Nick Beste 14 for the highly-regarded Green Wave, a 75-47 winner when the two teams met in Thief River Falls back on Dec. 10

Paul Sjoberg and Matt Stuckey led the Prowlers with 15 and 14 points, respectively.

Thief River Falls shot 43 percent from the field (21/49) and went 6-for-13 at the free throw line. East Grand Forks shot 59 percent from the floor (30/51) and had a 5-for-8 free throw night.

"They (Green Wave) ran their offense so well and were getting the

Lakers' early edge turns into 6-3 loss

Regrouping after falling behind 3-0 at the start, Thief River Falls beat Detroit Lakes 6-3 Saturday in Section 8A boys high school hockey.

Jake Bergquist scored a quick 27 seconds into the game; Ben Bergquist made it 2-0 at 9:06 and 58 seconds later Jed Harms upped the difference to 3-0.

"We were disappointed in the way we came out of the chute," admitted Thief River Falls coach Scott Bergland. "We were not in it mentally at the start."

But the Prowlers' alarm clock went off after the third Detroit Lakes goal.

Alec Holen got one back before the close of the first period. Cody Bottem cut the difference to 3-2 just 1:59 into the second period and Michael Forney tied it a mere 14 seconds later.

It was the first of four straight goals scored by Forney as the Prowlers improved to 14-7-1.

Thief River Falls out-shot Detroit Lakes 53-23. The Prowlers were without starting goalie Lance Klaven, injured in a snowmobile accident earlier in the day. He is expected to be sidelined for a week to 10 days. In his absence, Brady McIntyre was called on to handle the Prowlers' netminder chores. "Brady played well," said Bergland. "Detroit Lakes' goals were all good goals."

Prowlers skate past Spoilers on Monday

Five different Prowlers scored goals as Thief River Falls picked up a 5-2 Monday boys high school hockey win over North Dakota foe Grafton-Park River at the Ralph Engelstad Arena.

Corey Horien supplied the Prowlers with a 1-0 first period lead. A second period goal by the Spoilers' Chris Midgarten was matched by Robby Philipp as Thief River Falls took a 2-1 lead into the second intermission.

Jordan Swanson made it 3-1 and the Kory Kezar goal upped the difference to 4-1 before Mitch Flaten scored a second Grafton-Park River goal.

Thief River Falls added a final-minute goal by Alec Holen.

The Prowlers improved to 15-7-1 and the Spoilers went to 14-5.

A make-up contest on a Monday night, squeezed into a busy stretch of games on the eve of key regional match-ups for both teams didn't lend itself to a memorable encounter, admitted Thief River Falls coach Scott Berglund. "It wasn't a great hockey game," he said. "I don't think either team played particularly well."

Thief River Falls goalie Brady McIntyre stopped 19 shots. Grafton-Park River netminder Tony Kringstad finished with 22 saves.

The Prowlers, after hosting East Grand Forks in a Tuesday Section 8A showdown, finish the regular season at home Friday vs. Fergus Falls.

First round Section 3A tournament games will be played Tuesday, Feb. 15, at the site of the higher seeds.

The tournament quarterfinals, semifinals and championship game will be played at the Ralph Engelstad Arena starting Feb. 17.

Shorthanded Prowlers swim in Panther Invite

Illness, injuries and scheduling conflicts kept several key members out of the Thief River Falls boys high school swim team line-up Saturday when the Prowlers participated in the Panther Invitational at Park Rapids.

Still, Thief River Falls, coach Lacy Knott liked what she saw. "The younger swimmers really swam well," she said. "The team has seen a lot of dramatic time drops in the last month, as well as swimming safely without DQ's – so that's very encouraging with such a young team."

Detroit Lakes won team honors with 547 points, followed by Perham with 449, Park Rapids Area 439, Minnewaska/Morris 438 and Thief River Falls 234.

Among the Thief River Falls time drops, pointed out Knott was a 14-second improvement in the 200-yard freestyle for Cody Reese, who also had a personal-best 6:46 in the 500.

Ben Dahl, mentioned Knott, shaved six seconds off his time in the 100 backstroke and also turned in a solid 500.

Thief River Falls, after a Tuesday double-dual at home against Moorhead and Bemidji, will finish the 2004-05 regular season with an appearance at the Taconite Invitational at Aurora Saturday.

The Prowlers will compete in the 2005 Section 4A swimming and diving championships will be held Thursday and Saturday, Feb. 24 and 26, at Grand Rapids.

Robbie Anderson scored 16 points and Tomas Loberg had 13 for the Eagles, who led 44-29 through three quarters.

Kevin Klasen had a 16-point game for the Gators.

"They dictated the game in the first quarter," said Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson. "We made some adjustments and played some pretty good defense over final three quarters."

Grygla-Gatzke was 24-for-51 from the field (47 percent), while Badger/Greenbush-Middle River struggled through a 19 percent 12-for-63 shooting performance. The Eagles were 12-for-19 at the free throw line, where the Gators went 10-for-18.

the buzzer.

Those points created quite a buzz in the huddle, but Loe wasn't ready to immediately put the game in the win column. "I wasn't confident with the lead," he admitted. "We still had a lot of game to to play."

East Grand Forks kept Loe on edge by out-scoring the Prowlers 11-3 to pull within 45-40 after a Amanda Wickersham free throw with 4:42 remaining.

"We wanted to win so bad, we were putting pressure on ourselves," said Loe. "We were forcing things."

The East Grand Forks comeback was put on hold when Shawna Rogalla hit a free throw and Gryskiewicz hit a short jumper from the side to make it 48-40 with 2:35 left.

Rest of the points came at the free throw line - one by Ally Evavold of the Green Wave, then a pair by the Prowlers' Becca Larson and singles by Rogalla and Gryskiewicz.

Gryskiewicz finished with a game-high 21 points, while Rogalla, Larson and Jessica Gustafson added eight points each. Wickersham led the Green Wave with 13 points. Savannah Mack added 10 points to the East Grand Forks attack.

The first Thief River Falls victory since Jan. 8 put the Prowlers at 7-12. They beat East Grand Forks 54-31 back on Nov. 30.

It was a near-stalemate in the first half when the lead changed hands 10 times, and there were five ties to go along with Thief River Falls leads of 12-9 and 26-24 at the breaks.

Thief River Falls shot only 26 percent from the field (15-57). But the Prowlers took advantage of East Grand Forks fouls to score 21 points at the free throw line (on 31 attempts).

"Those were big," acknowledged Loe. "We haven't been making our free throws. If we don't hit those, we don't win."

East Grand Forks was 12-for-40 from the field (30 percent). The Green Wave went 13-for-25 at the line.

Thief River Falls out-rebounded East Grand Forks 33-30 in the make-up game from an earlier weather-forced postponement.

The two teams combined for 48 turnovers: 29 charged against the Green Wave; 19 for the Prowlers.

Northland maintains spot in division race

A fifth straight win – a 75-46 Friday home court victory over Vermilion – kept Northland tied with Rainy River in the Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division women's basketball standings.

A balanced Northland offense included Chelsey Fering with 15 points, Rochelle Nelk and Kamae Larson 12 each, Lisa Hardy and Alisa Costin 8 apiece.

The Pioneers led 36-20 at halftime against a team they beat on the road earlier this winter, 75-55.

"First half, we didn't play overly well," offered Northland coach Missy Majerus, "but they did what they had to do to win a game we needed to win."

Gena Jerich led Vermilion with 17 points.

It was the fifth straight win for the Pioneers, who are 6-2 in the Northern Division, where they share second place, a game behind Itasca. Northland hosts Central Lakes Thursday at 6 p.m. before heading to Grand Rapids for a 1 p.m. Saturday showdown with Itasca.

Northland and Rainy River will meet Wednesday, Feb. 16, at International Falls. The Pioneers close out the regular season at home Saturday, Feb. 19, vs. Hibbing.

Prowlers get a win

A 27-10 first quarter lead carried Thief River Falls to a 61-44 Saturday boys high school basketball win at Roseau.

Matt Stuckey scored 28 points, Paul Sjoberg 14 and Jeremy Sich 10 as the Prowlers snapped a six-game losing streak. It was their first win since Jan. 4.

"We played a great first quarter," reported Thief River Falls coach Chris McLean. "We took really, really good shots.

The Prowlers were up 40-25 at halftime and carried a 52-34 lead into the final quarter.

Ben Bosch scored 14 points, Adam Gumeringer 13 and Stephen Sjaaheim 12 for the Rams, who managed to keep the score respectable by drawing 27 free throw opportunities. They made 15 of them.

"Defensively, we weren't moving our feet," said McLean, explaining the Prowlers' penchant for fouls.

Thief River Falls enjoyed a 63 percent 26-for-41 shooting night from the field. The Prowlers were 7-for-13 at the line.

Shooting so many free throws limited Roseau to 15-for-37 shooting from the floor (41 percent).

McLean cited Sjoberg's work on the boards as the Prowlers out-rebounded the Rams 29-20.

Thief River Falls turned it over 19 times; Roseau 15 times.

It was a make-up game from an earlier weather-related postponement.

Fergus Falls third quarter tops TRF

Fergus Falls began the second half with a 14-0 run and went on to beat Thief River Falls 57-46 Saturday in girls high school basketball.

The Prowlers led 15-13 at the end of the first quarter and were within 27-24 at halftime before the visiting Otters took over. Fergus Falls carried a 43-30 lead into the final period.

Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe said it was again a case of too many turnovers (23) and poor shooting (29 percent) that cost the Prowlers as they fell to 6-12.

"We had a hard time getting into a consistent rhythm on offense," explained Loe, who said the Prowlers also had trouble on defense down the stretch. "Once they got up on us in the fourth (quarter), we didn't defend the half court as well as we should."

Shawna Rogalla led the Prowlers with 16 points. Casey Engelstad had a 9-point, 9-rebound game. Hannah Draxten scored 26 points and Kristin Hohman had 12 for the Otters.

"Hannah Draxten was hard to stop," said Loe. "She is an impressive freshman."

Thief River Falls was 14-for-48 from the field and 14-for-23 at the free throw line. Fergus Falls went 24-for-54 from the floor (44 percent) and 6-for-12 at the line. The Otters finished with a 32-29 rebound edge. They turned the ball over 19 times.

Hunters harvest 55 prairie chickens

Hunters harvested 55 birds during this past fall's prairie chicken hunt, the state's second since 1942, according to the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

Despite difficult hunting in wet, rainy weather, 73 percent reported flushing five or more prairie chickens during the five-day season and 46 percent of hunters harvested at least one bird in the two-bird limit.

"It's difficult to say why the harvest was lower in 2004. Obviously, weather played a role," said Mike Larson, a DNR wildlife research biologist. "I'm sure the population hasn't changed that much in a year, and I'm glad most hunters were satisfied with the hunt."

During 2003 hunters harvested 123 prairie chickens. Interest in this past fall's hunt was high as 749 applied for 100 permits through a lottery held last August. The hunt, open to Minnesota residents only, is held in seven zones in northwest Minnesota.

Prairie chickens once lived throughout the prairies of western and southern Minnesota, conspicuous on their spring booming grounds and popular with the state's hunters. However, the bird's population plunged because of loss of habitat and the season was closed after 1942. In recent years, Minnesota's prairie chicken population has increased thanks to grassland habitat restoration programs and the Conservation Reserve Program.

The hunt, which is held in part to build support for preserving prairie chicken habitat, allows for a total harvest of less than 5 percent of the prairie chicken's breeding population, estimated to be greater than 4,000 birds during the spring.

Applications for the 2005 hunt will be available in June. The application deadline will be July 29 with the prairie chicken hunting season opening Oct. 22.

Deer hunter banquet scheduled Feb. 26 at Shooting Star Casino

Minnesota Deer Hunter Association's 18th annual state habitat banquet will be held Saturday, Feb. 26, at the Shooting Star Convention Center in Mahnomen.

The organization will celebrate MDHA's 25th anniversary by giving away more than 40 firearms, hunting trips, hunting gear and other items as raffles prizes, auction items and door prizes.

All proceeds from the banquet will be used in funding habitat projects throughout Minnesota for deer hunters, wildlife management, and hunter access.

Tickets to the 4:30 p.m. banquet are available at MDHA's state headquarters in Grand Rapids, or by calling 800-450-DEER. Space is limited.

The MDHA is a non-profit, non-partisan organization composed of approximately 20,000 members and 61 chapters throughout the state "dedicated to the conservation and betterment of deer and deer hunting in Minnesota."

Hunters harvest 55 prairie chickens

Hunters harvested 55 birds during this past fall's prairie chicken hunt, the state's second since 1942, according to the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

Despite difficult hunting in wet, rainy weather, 73 percent reported flushing five or more prairie chickens during the five-day season and 46 percent of hunters harvested at least one bird in the two-bird limit.

"It's difficult to say why the harvest was lower in 2004. Obviously, weather played a role," said Mike Larson, a DNR wildlife research biologist. "I'm sure the population hasn't changed that much in a year, and I'm glad most hunters were satisfied with the hunt."

During 2003 hunters harvested 123 prairie chickens. Interest in this past fall's hunt was high as 749 applied for 100 permits through a lottery held last August. The hunt, open to Minnesota residents only, is held in seven zones in northwest Minnesota.

Prairie chickens once lived throughout the prairies of western and southern Minnesota, conspicuous on their spring booming grounds and popular with the state's hunters. However, the bird's population plunged because of loss of habitat and the season was closed after 1942. In recent years, Minnesota's prairie chicken population has increased thanks to grassland habitat restoration programs and the Conservation Reserve Program.

The hunt, which is held in part to build support for preserving prairie chicken habitat, allows for a total harvest of less than 5 percent of the prairie chicken's breeding population, estimated to be greater than 4,000 birds during the spring.

Applications for the 2005 hunt will be available in June. The application deadline will be July 29 with the prairie chicken hunting season opening Oct. 22.

Deer hunter banquet scheduled Feb. 26 at Shooting Star Casino

Minnesota Deer Hunter Association's 18th annual state habitat banquet will be held Saturday, Feb. 26, at the Shooting Star Convention Center in Mahnomen.

The organization will celebrate MDHA's 25th anniversary by giving away more than 40 firearms, hunting trips, hunting gear and other items as raffles prizes, auction items and door prizes.

All proceeds from the banquet will be used in funding habitat projects throughout Minnesota for deer hunters, wildlife management, and hunter access.

Tickets to the 4:30 p.m. banquet are available at MDHA's state headquarters in Grand Rapids, or by calling 800-450-DEER. Space is limited.

The MDHA is a non-profit, nonpartisan organization composed of approximately 20,000 members and 61 chapters throughout the state "dedicated to the conservation and betterment of deer and deer hunting in Minnesota."

F. Myrtle Vagle · 436-2133

The weather in northwest Minnesota changes so quickly from one extreme to another that it can prove the old adage, that only a new comer or a fool would attempt to publish his results! I take a look at my barometer, and if it has changed the past 24 hours, I reset it to its present reading. If it moves toward fair or rain, then I know that I can't do anything about it. In olden times, many had different ideas to predict the changes in the weather. It was believed that if the crickets chirped so many times in 15 seconds, just add 37 to that number and you would know the high temperature for the day. Others believed if the ants were running uphill fast, it determined weather conditions. A lot of good that would be now with a couple feet of snow on the ground and if that goes, we don't have any mountains around here for the ants to run on. But, we have the woodchuck coming out this week and it's more reliable.

The main street is being cleared of snow today. They are using several trucks and many other pieces of heavy equipment. By tonight, they will have it all done. As I watched them, I wondered if the drivers were as happy as they were when they were operating their Tonka trucks building roads in sandboxes? They have done a good job today, just like they did 30 or 40 years ago.

On Tuesday, three brothers, Merlin, Gary and Kenny Madsen, sons of Edwin and Esther Madsen of Davenport, Iowa, and their uncle Orville Madsen of Milwaukee, Wisc., came to visit in this area. They were guests of Donnie, Marlys and Greg Lefrooth and the best treat was at Irene's Cafe to dine on potato dumplings, the rare treat in Minnesota! There they visited with their schoolmate, Shirley Lefrooth. Shirley visited with Elsie Lefrooth later in the day and so did all the Madsons.

On Wednesday evening, Greg Lefrooth took Merlin to say goodbye to Elsie and he had orders from his sister Gladys Nelson to see the one they call the Ladybug that writes the news. Pearl Thompson and I were at Elsie's place and we had a nice visit and caught up on the happenings. I will say that since they use that name for me, I am reluctant to throw them out when I find one in the house.

Merlin has a handsome grandson who recently went to Iraq on duty. He says the food is excellent; lobster tail and steak for supper but 18 other guys in a tent smells like a college dorm. Remember to pray for them over there.

The snow and ice has kept Judy Kleinvachter at home lately, but being resourceful, she spends her extra time crocheting and watching her TV. On Sunday, she was a dinner guest at Vance and Kelly Lefrooth's home. Guests at her home this week were Marie Steffen, Pat and Rebecca Larson, Bance, Kelly, Amanda and Jessica Lefrooth, June and Karl Kasprowicz and Betty Pietruszewski.

Sunday afternoon, Isaac and Betsy Thompson, Pearl Thompson and Elsie Lefrooth had dinner at my house.

It's great to be back home again and keep an eye on all the goings on. It's not easy to wish to be in two places at once, but it's fun wherever.

WorkForce change is good for TRF and Minnesota

Business services specialists program will help the entire community

Starting a new business or expanding can be a difficult, time-consuming and very stressful undertaking. One local businessman said that jumping through all of the hoops was even more discouraging than the substantial financial risk he took in expanding his business.

Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development recently trained a new corps of business services specialists who are to serve the needs of local businesses across the state. These specialists, located at local Minnesota WorkForce Centers, can provide the local business leader with information and assistance on a wide variety of subjects, such as entering and competing in the international market, recruiting and retaining qualified workers, acquiring permits, applying for state economic programs, providing labor market information, training to upgrade skills to remain competitive, starting a new business or expanding your current business in Minnesota.

In the past few years, the focus of government regulation has shifted from establishing boundaries within which to operate, to finding ways to assist business respond to the needs and demands of the public. Though the shift may seem slight or even one of semantics, the shift can make a real difference for business leaders. It certainly eliminates the perception that government is deliberately creating obstacles.

The real good news is that local business can now find that kind of assistance in Thief River Falls at the WorkForce Center. You don't have to look outside of this community, or listen to endless computer-generated voice mails to navigate through more rules and regulations. There are real people at the end of the telephone line, and it's right here in Thief River Falls.

We hope business leaders can take up the state's offer. If helpful, it will allow businesses to get on with the business of doing business.

In the news release issued to media last week, local Business Services Manager Laurie Panek was quoted saying, "Successful businesses mean more jobs and a better way of life for individuals and communities across Minnesota."

By working with local business leaders, the WorkForce Center will improve the business climate in the community of Thief River Falls, and the way of life for many residents in this region.

Fraternal groups, like Kiwanis, improve TRF

Congratulations to Kiwanis International and the local chapter on the organization's 90th anniversary.

A history bulletin on the Kiwanis, which was shared with me by representatives of the local unit, states that "There has always been a need for good fellowship and service. As far back as the beginning of time, there was a need for camaraderie and the desire to support communities. The history of Kiwanis and how it began is, in large part, the story of how fellowship and service developed within an organization."

Perhaps this is the story of how many fraternal organizations started.

The local organization was chartered on Sept. 26, 1977. Today, it also continues to serve the community through The Golden K Club and Lincoln High School (LHS) Key Club. It serves the community by sponsoring many events like National Night Out and the Bike Rodeo; delivering Meals on Wheels; and participating in many other activities. Three years ago, club members committed the organization to establishing a park at the former Northop School site, and they are continuing to work toward this goal. A year-and-a-half ago, the club set a goal to raise money within their membership to secure an annual scholarship for a LHS senior. It recently achieved this goal, and the first scholarship will be presented to a deserving student from the class of 2006.

Kiwanis is one of many organizations in Thief River Falls that performs many important and valuable services. From the example they have set, it is clear that many citizens believe in and support this community. It is also clear that we are better off because of them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why hasn't Minnesota banned smoking?

To the Editor:

Only 18 percent of the residents of Minnesota still smoke, 26 percent have quit and 56 percent have never smoked. Eighty-two percent don't smoke today. These statistics are from the most recent study by the Minnesota Health Department.

Isn't it incredible that with this 82 percent of non-smokers we still poison the air in restaurants and workplaces? Hopefully this will end in 2005 when the state of Minnesota joins other health-conscious states like New York, California, Florida and other states with smoking bans in restaurants and work places statewide. My personal objective is to help get smoking banned statewide and help addicted smokers quit. Banning smoking would help motivate them to get rid of this devastating addiction, and stop young people from getting hooked, which has always been the objective of tobacco companies.

Second-hand smoke kills 63,000 Americans each year. Gov. Tim Pawlenty has vowed to sign a smoking ban if it passed by the Legislature. He described smoking as a "dying habit." Many cities in Minnesota aren't waiting for the state to act. On March 31, 2005, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Hennepin County, Ramsey County, and Bloomington will put smoking bans into effect. With these high population metropolitan cities joining Rochester and others where smoking bans already are in effect, nearly half of the people in the state will live in smoke-free cities, so it is natural for the entire state to adopt bans.

Employers should be anxious to level the playing field statewide and protect their employees who are forced to work in this dangerous environment. I became an early pioneer in a smoking ban in 1987 when I owned a suburban newspaper group in the Twin Cities. Among our 150 editorial, advertising and production employees in our modern plant in New Hope, there were some smokers. The non-smokers would repeatedly ask me why we couldn't ban smoking in the building. I was majority owner with one partner, so we had the power to take action. In November 1987, we sent out a directive banning smoking in our building effective January 1988. This was 17 years ago when there was no solid evidence like there is today that second-hand smoke kills. Although the evidence did not exist, we did witness a case that sent up a red flag. A commercial artist in our advertising department was a chain smoker. His wife had never smoked a cigarette. She died of lung cancer.

My oldest brother was an addicted smoker. He later suffered with emphysema and it killed him. He was hooked up to an oxygen tank but was so addicted he would leave the tank in his bedroom and go into the kitchen to smoke. During his final days at the nursing home in Aurora, he told me, "Roy, don't ever let your kids start smoking." None of my daughters, or grown granddaughter, has ever smoked.

Powerful tobacco interests will be talking to your state representatives and senators. They have big money to spend. Your legislator must be made to understand that they were elected to represent you and protect your health. Contact your legislator and instruct him or her to get a smoking ban passed. I'm thrilled to learn that the senior citizens association AARP, medical groups, bar and restaurant unions, and heart, lung and cancer research organizations are all backing the smoking ban legislation.

Penas and Hackbarth: A common sense proposal

ATV citations: Let's look at the real facts

by Tom Hackbarth, and Maxine Penas

During the past several legislative sessions, the Legislature has acted aggressively to address all-terrain vehicle (ATV) and other off-highway vehicle (OHV) issues on public and private lands. Penalties for improper use of ATVs were increased and updated to allow for restitution by riders who intentionally damage public lands.

Enforcement funding was dramatically increased and a system for trail development was instituted to allow for use of ATVs on designated trails only. These actions were accomplished by the Legislature working with responsible statewide OHV groups.

Unfortunately, a proposal put forth by Sen. John Marty (DFL-St. Paul) and Rep. Paul Thissen (DFL-Minneapolis) threatens to undo the balance incorporated in these past legislative actions.

They noted in their commentary that most of Minnesota's OHV owners are conscientious and responsible. We agree. They also argued that it is not just a handful of "bad apples" who are responsible for the damage. After citing that more than 3,000 tickets and warnings were issued to OHV operations, they go on to indicate that a "significant number of irresponsible riders speed, tear up wetlands, endanger themselves and others and defy state laws."

Let's dig a little deeper. After looking at the facts by reviewing the citations and warnings issued by Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) [illegible] officers in 2004; the authors' claims are not substantiated.

For example, there were a total of 982 actual AT[illegible] citations written in 2004. In addition, there were 1,640 warnings given out. Obviously, if it were as bad as indicated by the writers, any reasonable person would have to surmise that conservation officers would have written all of the tickets as citations, not as warnings.

Now let's review those citations. Of the 982 citations, the largest category, 330, were written for failure to display or possess a valid registration. Clearly, this one-third of the citations had nothing to do with speeding, tearing up wetlands, or endangering themselves. They just failed to register their ATVs.

The next highest group of citations was 150 for operating on an improved county road. Again, no damage to public lands. Next, came 125 citations, probably to parents, who allowed their children to operate ATVs illegally.

Regarding specific claims made by Sen. Marty and Rep. Thissen, there were a total of [illegible] citations for operation in a closed area, five for excessive speed, 12 for careless or reckless operation, 28 for trespassing on posted or ag lands, 14 for operating on a non-ATV designated trail, and two for damage to property.

Considering there are more than 200,000 ATV operators in Minnesota, does this sound like a problem that is out of control or in need of punitive fines and wholesale forfeiture of machines?

To put this in some reasonable perspective, last year, snowmobile operators were issued a total of 1,277 violations, and 1,234 warnings, which appear to us to be very comparable to ATV violations. No one is calling for forfeiture, nor should they, of their snowmobiles.

More than 99 percent of OHV operators are responsible, law-abiding riders. Unlike the Marty-Thissen proposal, OHV groups this session will offer a common sense legislative alternative that does not turn all ATV riders into criminals.

Stumpf:

Governor's proposal promotes work to welfare

by Sen. LeRoy Stumpf

Under the latest budget plan unveiled by Gov. Tim Pawlenty, more working Minnesotans will lose their health care coverage. Our state was once noted as a model for health care, but the governor appears to be taking us on a march to the bottom.

Under the governor's latest proposal, more than 41,000 working Minnesotans' health care coverage is on the chopping block. Pawlenty is trying to hide behind the buzz phrase "welfare, healthcare," but people should have a true understanding of what MinnesotaCare is and determine for themselves if this is "welfare."

MinnesotaCare is an affordable health care program for working Minnesotans. The 145,000 Minnesotans who utilize MinnesotaCare are either working, or are the children of working parents.

Many people throughout Minnesota are struggling to make ends meet, raise families and carry health insurance on wages they earn as laborers, farmers and nursing home workers. MinnesotaCare makes it possible to work for $8 an hour and still have health care. To receive MinnesotaCare, workers pay their premium, as with any other health coverage. Single adults pay up to $208 per month for MinnesotaCare. How is it "welfare" when these hard-working people are helping to pay their own way?

By cutting the health care coverage to 41,000 Minnesotans, the governor's plan increases the state medical assistance costs by $100 million. This proposal falls in the category of "a pound foolish and a penny wise."

For those who have chronic health problems and will not be able to survive without MinnesotaCare, the governor's proposal allows people to spend down all their assets and impoverish themselves in order to receive Medical Assistance. The end result will be that as people are required to spend their savings and sell other family assets at the same time the quality of their health care will deteriorate.

It doesn't make sense to require people to go onto welfare just so they can have health care. They should work and pay taxes, not take advantage of taxpayers. I support efforts to move people from welfare to work, but the governor's proposal reverses the trend by sending people from work to welfare.

Request includes $40 million for flood control

Senator Norm Coleman (R-MN) has announced $40 million was included in the president's Fiscal Year 2006 budget proposal for the Grand Forks, N.D./East Grand Forks flood control project.

Coleman said he has heard from East Grand Forks Mayor Lynn Stauss and other area officials about the importance of this project and wrote the president directly about this matter back in December 2004. These funds would ultimately go to the Department of Defense's Army Corps of Engineers to construct levees and floodwalls set back from the river, forming three "rings" around both communities. The design level of protection is equivalent to the peak discharge experienced during the 1997 flood.

The president's budget proposal will now be considered by the Congress, where Senator Coleman will work for the inclusion of these funds in the final Fiscal Year 2006 Appropriations bills.

"I'm pleased that the president supports providing these funds for flood prevention in Grand Forks and East Grand Forks," Coleman said. "I've witnessed the destruction flooding has done to that region firsthand, and I have long been committed to ensuring that we have the infrastructure in place to prevent that tragedy from ever happening again. As the appropriations process continues, I will work hard to ensure these important flood prevention funds remain in the final appropriations bills we will ultimately pass."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

THE NEWS, JOHN W. EASTMAN, PUBLISHER THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA FEBRUARY 9, 1905

The Review Sold

"The THIEF RIVER FALLS REVIEW was this week sold to Frank E. Packard of the PRESS, and today's will be the last issue of that paper. Mr. Packard has sold a large portion of the material in the REVIEW office to other printers in this section, a large portion of which will be taken by the NEWS, and will greatly improve our facilities for doing work.

"The REVIEW has existed a little over a year, long enough to demonstrate the fact that there was not room locally for three papers. It has proven a money-losing proposition to the owners from the start. The field having already been covered by two papers, it was almost impossible for it build up any circulation."

To Locate in Thief River Falls
Finch-Smith Company of Crookston to Open Up a Wholesale House Here

"The new distribution freight rates received by Thief River Falls have had the result of inducing the wholesale firm of Finch, Smith and company of Crookston to locate a branch house here. For the present, a warehouse has been rented for temporary purposes and the wholesale house will be run as a branch of the Crookston house for a short time.

"The Finch-Smith company, however, has purchased the ground formerly occupied by the Methodist church on the East Side and will erect a large wholesale house upon the same in the near future. When this is done, a new company, independent of the Crookston house, will be formed and one of the largest wholesale houses in the northern part of the state will be established. The location selected by the company was thought to be by far the best in the city, as it affords excellent shipping facilities over both the Great Northern and Soo lines."

To Open Up Saturday
The Real County Seat War Will Then Be Commenced

"On Saturday of this week the petition to be circulated for the removal of the county seat from Red Lake Falls to this city will be circulated. For one week the local men will have a clear field, but on February 18 the Red Lake Falls people will commence the circulation of a remonstrance against the petition. It will require 60 percent of the voters at the last general election, but in order to be on the safe side, an effort will be made to secure a much larger percentage, [illegible] yet the committee having the matter in charge has made a rough canvass and the members figure that they can secure nearly as many signers to the petition as there were votes cast at the last general election.

"It seems to be the impression that Red Lake Falls will not fight the matter of having an early vote taken upon the matter, but desires to have the vote taken this summer. The people down there feel that they will win if they can hold the election soon, as the city of Thief River Falls is growing at such a rapid rate and the chances are that during the next few years our population will greatly increase. As a matter of fact this city does not care when the vote is taken and it is probable that the matter will be settled at an early date."

Rebates for Energy Star appliances offered

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Thief River Falls utility customers will again be able to receive rebates for Energy Star appliances. The Thief River Falls City Council approved an energy conservation program at its Feb. 8 meeting.

The rebates are offered as a result of a state requirement. The city utility is required to spend 1.5 percent of its electric sales revenue on energy conservation programs, Utilities Director Arlo Rude said.

Power sales revenue is budgeted at $7,485,982 for 2005, meaning city conservation spending would be $112,290. If the city spends less than 1.5 percent on energy conservation programs, it has to pay the difference to the state.

Under the program, utility customers are able to receive rebates for Energy Star appliances, including dishwashers, clothes washers, refrigerators, and home air conditioners/heat pumps. The rebates are $75 for dishwashers, $100 for clothes washers, $100 for refrigerators, and $150 for home air conditioners/heat pumps.

If a utility customer purchases an Energy Star dishwasher, clothes washer and refrigerator at one time, the person receives an additional $25 for a total of $300 for all three appliances.

Utility customers are required to have receipts, model numbers and Energy Star information from the appliances to receive the rebates.

"As long as funding is available, rebates will be available," Rude said.

Grants are provided for the replacement of windows as well. A minimum of $100 per window will be given to eligible utility customers. Those utility customers who spend between $200 and $300 on a window will receive 50 percent back in the form of a grant, Rude noted Feb. 14. Utility customers cannot receive more than $150 in the form of a grant for a window.

Last year, utility customers were able to receive rebates for 10 windows. This year, they are limited to receiving rebates for five windows. "A lot of people have applied for rebates," Rude said.

Grants are also provided for home insulation improvements, and rebates are given for geothermal systems.

For commercial/industrial utility customers, financing is also available for energy conservation projects. Those customers with electric heat or other large electric loads may receive low-interest loans. Those loans will be determined on an individual basis, Rude said.

In addition to the loans and rebates, the city is donating $10,000 to the Inter-County Community Council. That money will be used for energy savings improvements in low income homes in the city.

City Council approved the Sanitary Sewer Policy. Rude said the city had sanitary sewer policies in the past, but this latest policy is similar to one written by the League of Minnesota Cities.

The policy states, "The city will attempt to clean every city sanitary sewer line under 10 inches every five years, considering budget restraints."

The policy also outlines city employees' actions after they have discovered a problem area, defined as an area with minimum sanitary

Meeting location changes

Thursday meeting on Beltrami Island trails at the Gardens

Anticipating a large public turnout, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is changing the location of the public meeting to discuss proposals for Beltrami Island State Forest. The meeting will now be held at The Gardens Arena, 707 Elk Street NW, Warroad, on Thursday, Feb. 17 from 6 to 9 p.m.

DNR Deputy Commissioner Mark Holsten and Assistant Commissioner Brad Moore will be among the DNR representatives in attendance to listen to the public input.

Following 2003 legislation, the proposal recommends changing Beltrami Island's forest classification from "Managed" to "Limited" and designating some 530 miles of forest roads and trails open to various types of motorized uses. Leaving the forest classified as "Managed" was not a legal option.

The new designation would mean that forest trails in Beltrami Island would be closed to motor vehicle use unless posted open. Forest roads (both maintained system roads and minimum maintenance roads) would be open to both highway-licensed vehicles and all three types of off-highway vehicles (OHVs) unless they are specifically posted closed. OHVs include all-terrain vehicles (ATVs), off-highway motorcycles (OHMs) and off-road vehicles (ORVs), such as four-wheel-drive Jeeps and trucks.

DNR staff are urging the public to take a look at maps of its proposed changes before the public

County agrees to contribute to road project

Wants portion of $15,000 contribution to go to ditch improvement

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

At its Feb. 8 meeting, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners agreed to contribute up to $15,000 toward the city of Thief River Falls Barzen Ave. improvement project, specifying that a portion of the money it planned to contribute would be used for improvements on County Ditch (CD) 70.

Barzen Ave. is a north-south gravel road, adjacent to CD 70 and the Arctic Cat and Digi-Key properties. For Digi-Key employees, the road is the only access to a 1,000-car parking lot.

Barzen Ave. is maintained by the city of Thief River Falls and CD 70 is maintained by Pennington County. Improvements, which include rebuilding of the road with an aggregate base, flattening the slopes of CD 70 and paving to a nine-ton designation, will cost an estimated $150,000 to complete.

Pennington County Engineer Mike Flaagen and Commissioner Don Jensen represented Pennington County at a joint meeting with officials from Digi-Key, Arctic Cat and the city of Thief River Falls. The Jan. 4 meeting was held to discuss a request by Dig-Key for bituminous roadway improvements. During that meeting Digi-Key offered to pay $75,000 for improvements (half of

Veterans' chief concerns involve compensation and healthcare

Tuesday, Feb. 8, Pennington County Veterans Services Officer Steve Stone presented his annual report for 2004 to the Pennington County Board of Commissioners.

Stone said that 1,854 veterans, living in Pennington County, were contacted in 2004, up from 1,500 in 2003.

Veterans were contacted through 783 face to face meetings, 1,071 phone meetings, and 831 through mail service.

Stone said that veteran's main interest areas dealt with:

- Information and application for VA compensation.
- Information and application for enrollment into the VA healthcare system, including calls to the VA Hospital in Fargo to set appointments and to seek other information from the hospital.
- General questions pertaining to the VA.
- Calls to the VA telephone medication refill system to check on the status and to refill veteran's prescriptions.
- Ordering of documents.

The board approved the purchase of two dozen 12- by 18-inch flags as requested by Stone on behalf of the Thief River Falls VFW and American Legion clubs. The flags will be used for patriotic ceremonies.

50,000th Steiger tractor sold

TRF resident celebrates Steiger tractor milestone

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Thief River Falls resident Doug Steiger recently celebrated a milestone. The 50,000th Steiger tractor was sold Jan. 20.

When asked if he ever thought that many Steiger tractors would be sold, Doug said, "I never really thought about it."

Doug Steiger

Breckenridge residents David and Mark Yaggie, father and son, respectively, purchased the tractor, which was manufactured by the Case New Holland plant in Fargo, N.D.

The Yaggie family has used Steiger tractors for a number of years. Doug remembered a conversation he had with David's father, Leo, after selling him a Steiger tractor. Doug told him the tractor would lead him to expand his farming operation, Doug said. Leo replied his farming operation wouldn't get any larger. Apparently, Leo was wrong.

The Yaggie family is among many Steiger tractor customers. The roots of Steiger tractors go back to about 48 years ago.

At the time, Doug and his brother Maurice were custom combining. They left their father, John, behind to plow. They soon realized John needed a more powerful tractor to plow the fields on their farm near Red Lake Falls.

Doug, John and Maurice figured it would cost $20,000 to buy a new tractor, Doug recalled. Yet, they determined it would cost them $10,000 to build their own.

The Steigers talked about their two options with E.O. Peterson, president of Union State Bank. E.O. encouraged them to build the tractor, and his bank loaned them the money.

"That was one of the first people on the outside that caused this tractor to be built, so we went about getting ready to build," Doug said.

The three Steigers combined their talents – John's blacksmithing skills; Maurice's diesel mechanics, welding and steel fabricating talents; and Doug's ability to draw plans for tractors. In the winter of 1957 and 1958, the Steigers created a 20,000-pound machine with a Detroit Diesel engine. It was assembled out of used parts and created in their barn.

They were soon building tractors for neighbors, mostly with used parts, said Doug, whose brother and father have since passed away.

Their company continued to grow in the early 1960s after Doug met implement dealer Earl Christianson at the Winter Show in Crookston. "He persuaded us to build them out of new parts and sell them," Doug said.

They began building the tractors out of new parts and built five different models of tractors in their barn. Earl marketed the tractors, and the company continued to grow.

The Steigers were at the forefront of a revolution in the tractor industry. Their company focused on providing tractors for producers farming large tracts of land. Major tractor manufacturers soon learned of

Former TRF man pleads guilty to bank robbery

A former Thief River Falls resident has pled guilty to a Sept. 15 bank robbery in Shelly.

Jack Nomeland

Jack Warren Nomeland, 51, Duluth, pled guilty Feb. 8 in U.S. District Court, according to a press release from the U.S. Attorney's Office in Minneapolis. He remains in custody without bond. A sentencing date has not yet been set.

Nomeland allegedly admitted that he walked into Bremer Bank and held a teller's arm while demanding money. The teller gave him $3,254, and Nomeland fled the scene in an older-model station wagon.

No weapon was displayed during the robbery, Special Agent Paul McCabe said in an October interview. Nomeland was arrested Oct. 12 in Waseca County while he was sleeping in his vehicle. A sheriff's deputy did a license check of the vehicle, determining that Nomeland had a warrant out for his arrest in connection with the Shelly robbery.

Nomeland had no permanent address in Thief River Falls when he lived here, but he stayed with acquaintances here and sometimes lived in his vehicle, McCabe said.

Avoiding money order fraud

A new counterfeiting scheme has allowed scam artists to cash in thousands of phony money orders, and Americans are footing the bill. There are ways to protect oneself.

According to U.S. postal inspectors, the scam begins when a victim is contacted by someone through an Internet chat room or online auction site. The person claims to have financial problems and need help cashing money orders. The person "in need" often claims to be living in another country (usually Nigeria), but the person can cook up the scheme from any location.

Victims are lured into the scam when they are told they can keep some cash from the money order as payment for cashing it and wiring the difference to the scammer. The person then mails the victim a counterfeit money order with instructions for the victim to deposit it in his or her bank account and wire the money back to the con artist. Victims usually learn the money order is counterfeit when he or she attempts to cash it or when his or her bank account takes the hit for the full amount of the money order after the bank refuses payment on the bogus deposit.

Legitimate money orders have security features that help distinguish them from counterfeit notes. For a full list, visit www.usps.com/missingmoneyorders/security.htm.

Knowing the signs of an authentic money order helps. Postal inspectors also warn that most lures promising quick and easy money are cast by fraudsters, and if an offer seems to good to be true, it probably is.

10. Tom & Diane Kolstoe – 37 cows, 84 percent in milk, 56 pounds of milk, 2.0 pounds of fat, 1.7 pounds of protein in supervised testing with 98 percent of test-day milk sold.
11. Kevin & Beth Roppe – 41 cows, 85 percent in milk, 54 pounds of milk, 1.9 pounds of fat, 1.7 pounds of protein in supervised testing with 107 percent of test-day milk sold.

15. Hamrick Farms Inc. – 65 cows, 83 percent in milk, 50 pounds of milk, 1.7 pounds of fat, 1.6 pounds of protein in supervised testing with 106 percent of test-day milk sold.

The herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butterfat is averaged out over all the cows. This gives the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month. If too many cows are included in the herd, then the average for the month may be low even though the cow that is milking produces a lot of milk.

Gordon and Adelle Skjerven were named Oakland Park Nursing Home's Valentine King and Queen on Monday. The former Viking residents have been married for 56-1/2 years. Their coronation was part of a Valentine's Day program at the home.

In Loving Memory of Lance Bugge

Aug. 20, 1970 - Feb. 18, 2004

It's been a year since you decided that your plate was too full – with no room for dessert. All that you wanted in life was never to be. You gave all you could, and even though you were loved, and very much loved by so many it didn't seem like that to you. If you only knew. So when you went down that last hunting trail, body and mind frail, you left in a very peaceful and contented state of mind. That is our only comfort, knowing you were ready to meet your maker face to face at the Pearly Gates. Although it's been a very difficult year for us, we know you aren't struggling to make all things right down here for so many. We'll never forget the hugs, kisses and "I love you" when we'd part. Special moment never to be forgotten. So now, when we don't have you here to do all the good for us that you did, just know that we'll never forget you and we'll miss and love you forever.

Let's get back to the basics with youth

by Ann Walter
U of M Extension Service

It's not complicated to offer the support and opportunities youth need – we just need to get back to the "basics."

But are these basics different for youth of various ethnic and socio-economic backgrounds, or of varying family structures? Not really. Research shows that the basic needs are the same for all. The difference may come in the strategies necessary to meet these needs for youth at different developmental stages.

Eight needs, first developed by University of Minnesota researcher Gisela Konopka in 1973, serve as the foundation for positive youth development. Konopka and other researchers found youth have the need to:

1. Feel a sense of safety and structure. This environment encourages honesty, trust and respect among all youth and adults.

2. Experience active participation, group membership and belonging.

3. Develop self-worth through meaningful contribution. Young people feel free to contribute and their contribution is accepted, acknowledged, and appreciated.

4. Experiment to discover self, gain independence and gain control over one's life. Youth are encouraged to try new things and learn about themselves. They discover and practice their interests and skills, test their independence and take control of their lives.

5. Develop significant positive relationships with peers and at least one adult.

6. Discuss conflicting values and form one's own. Youth have a safe place to talk with other youth and adults about values and topics that are important to them. All beliefs and questions are respected and taken seriously.

7. Feel pride of competence and mastery. Youth experience success by completing activities appropriate for their stage of development and preferred style of learning. Youth set goals and celebrate accomplishments.

8. Expand one's capacity to enjoy life and know what success is possible. Youth are offered new experiences and opportunities to enjoy life. They learn and grow from successes and failures.

All learning experiences are more powerful when tied to one or more of these basic youth needs. We all need to carefully look at the time we spend with young people and see if we are intentionally striving to meet their basic needs. If we do, we will be effectively preparing and promoting youth for their future roles.

For more information about youth development, contact Ann Walter, community youth development educator, University of Minnesota Extension Service Regional Center, Albert Lea, toll-free (888) 241-0718.

Courage Center establishes programs and Camps Fund with NMF

Northwest Minnesota Foundation has established a component fund that will serve the needs and interests of people with physical disabilities, helping them to lead healthy, independent, productive and empowered lives.

The Courage Center Programs and Camps Fund will be used to provide financial support for programs, projects, activities or services that further the mission of Courage Center to empower people with disabilities to reach for their full potential in every aspect of life. Funding priorities will be for activities that are conducted in northern Minnesota, sponsored by Courage Center, that benefit people living here.

The fund was established by Courage Center from a partial bequest of the Ray Hellekson estate. Hellekson made annual gifts to Courage in support of Courage North. Hellekson was a Bemidji resident and turkey farmer. He was a member of the United Methodist Church, the Elks Club, the Lions Club, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, Sons of Norway, the National Rifle Association and the Bemidji Trap Shooting Club.

Hellekson served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He was a first lieutenant in the Army 29th Division, 116th Infantry Regiment. He received two Silver Stars, a Bronze Star, three Purple Hearts, and from the French government, a Bronze Cross. He received four Bronze Stars for being involved in four major campaigns, which took him through France and Germany. He was also awarded a Bronze Arrowhead for leading 30 men in the first wave of the amphibious landing on Omaha Beach, where his division suffered heavy casualties.

Following the war, he worked in Greenbush, where he met Neena Johnson, whom he married in 1947 in Grafton, N.D. The couple moved to Bemidji in the early 1950s to begin farming and stayed the remainder of their lives. Preceded in death by his wife, Hellekson passed away in August 2003.

For more information about grants made from this fund or to make a contribution, please contact Ritchie Houge, director of development, at 218-759-2057 or ritchh@nwmf.org.

Two power outages were reported last week in the city of Thief River Falls.

A power outage was reported Thursday at 8:15 a.m. along Highway 32 North, according to Utilities Director Arlo Rude. The power outage, which resulted from a broken cut-out near KTRF Radio, affected five businesses. Power was restored at 8:45 a.m. Friday.

Another power outage was reported Friday at 10:45 a.m., Rude said. The power outage affected 102 customers, which included Greendale Manor. A squirrel had caused that outage. Power was restored at 11:10 a.m. Friday.

January blood drive response impressive

Thief River Falls has really demonstrated that it is a town with a heart, said Lisa Moellenkamp, donor recruitment representative of United Blood Services.

At the January 19 and 20 blood drive, 144 people volunteered to donate blood, and 122 were able to give. Twelve of the donors were first timers.

Moellenkamp said, "This is a clear example of concerned people in this area responding unselfishly to a great need - the need for blood. You can all feel proud that these volunteer donors are your friends and neighbors."

Sarah Engelsrud coordinated the blood drive which was sponsored by the Women of Today. Others who assisted with the drive were: Linda Fellman, April Scheinoha, Stacy Myhrer, Julie Adolphson, Kathy Davis, Allison Miramontes, Roxane Gilbertson, Heather Rathgeber, McDonalds, SuperOne, KTRF Radio, Thief River Falls Times, and Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce. Space to hold the drive was provided at the Eagles Club.

United Blood Services is this area's nonprofit blood service provider. Patients in area hospitals need more than 1,250 units of blood every week.

"On behalf of the patients who benefited, United Blood Services appreciates all the thoughtful people who volunteered to help others by giving of themselves," Moellenkamp said.

Deer Park Garden Club holds February meeting

The February meeting of the Deer Park Garden Club was held at the home of Loraine and Jim Hamann, east of Trail.

The following guests were: Hank Thompson and Marlys Kangus of Erskine, Marcy Useldinger of Clearbrook, Jennie Svendsen of Trail and Marge Nelson of Goodridge.

Members present were Lana Nelson, Helen Chervestad, Loretta Stucy, Marilyn Stanley, Michelle Prestebak and Ethel Wiseth.

Vice president Loraine Hamann presided at the meeting in the absence of Norma Hanson. The Garden Club Creed was said in unison. Stucy read the minutes of the January meeting. The treasurer's report was given by Wiseth.

It was noted that a gardening workshop will be held at Northland Community and Technical College on Saturday, Feb. 26, from 8:45 a.m. to 4 p.m. The theme of the program is "Spring Alive in '05." "Starting Seeds and Gardening Under Lights" was the afternoon topic, given by Hamann. She provided instruction and shared her knowledge and expertise on lights, location, stuff, soil fertilizer and getting started. She also provided a design of an easy-to-build "Seed Starting Rack."

She showed the group the two racks she used in her basement that were equipped with fluorescent lights that could be adjusted as the seedlings grow, a digital timer that turns the light on and off. She said when the plants are ready to be hardened off, they need tender loving care before they are put out into the real world.

Hammond showed a tray with some seed that had already germinated. When the seedlings have a couple sets of leaves, they are ready to be transplanted into individual pots.

A shutterbug enthusiast snapped a bunch of pictures for the garden club's history book.

Her thriving collection of house plans added a decorative addition to her home.

On March 8, there will be a 1 p.m. meeting at the home of Loretta and Ed Stucy.

50,000th Steiger tractor sold

the Steigers' ingenuity and followed their example. Eventually, all tractor manufacturers had tractors similar to those that the Steigers created.

The Steiger Tractor Company continued to grow as a result of the standard components the Steigers used for their tractors. It eventually grew to the point where the Steigers sold 52 percent of their interest to a group of investors, Doug said. Those investors, who included Erling Falk, Bob Johnson, Bob Kelly, Les Melroe, Ken McIntyre, and Bob Terry, moved the company to Fargo, N.D., in 1969. By the time the company had moved, it had built about 125 tractors in the barn and employed 20 people.

Later, Les became a large investor, taking the company to the next level. During the years of Chairman Gene Dahl and President Jack Johnson, the company experienced its final large growth and construction of most of the present plant.

Doug had the longest tenure on the board of directors and served as chairman from 1969 to 1970. He continued his service on the board until the company was sold to Case.

In 1986, during a recession, the company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. That same year, the company was purchased by Tenneco. Tenneco is the parent company of Case New Holland, which now manufactures the Steiger brand. The tractors now cost over $200,000 each.

sewer backup, a blockage, grease accumulation or a shallow slope. Once city employees discover a problem area, they will try to clean that sanitary sewer twice a year for the first year. In the event there are no further problems, they will try to clean that area one time during the second year and then place that area on a regular schedule the third year.

Throughout the city, television camera inspections of sanitary sewers will occur on an as-needed basis. Sanitary sewer lines will also be inspected if they are located along streets where street maintenance projects are planned. If it were possible to do so, those lines will be inspected before the projects begin.

Miriam Buchanan, CEO of Greater Minnesota Property Management, appeared before the council.

GMPM manages 117 apartments in the city, including 77 at the Summerfield Place properties and 40 (equaling 144 bedrooms) at Campus Court Apartments, Buchanan said. It manages the properties for the Northwest Minnesota Multi-County Housing Redevelopment Authority (HRA).

Year-end expenditures are projected at a total of $568,000 for some of the northern Minnesota properties that GMPM manages, Buchanan noted. The Summerfield properties, which resulted from a partnership between the HRA and city, are included in that total.

GMPM may do some refinancing for those northern Minnesota properties, Buchanan said. Remarking that both Summerfield properties are 10 years old, she noted that there is not going to be enough money for appliance repairs, replacements and flooring.

Combining the two Summerfield properties over the last four-and-a-half years, Buchanan noted the vacancy loss was 3.5 percent.

"Even though the occupancy is really high, it's not the solution to all," she said.

GMPM also manages Campus Court Apartments in Thief River Falls. Challenges still exist at that complex, Buchanan said. She noted GMPM has put in security cameras and has been completing criminal background checks on tenants.

City Attorney Paul Ihle asked about Campus Court's occupancy rates.

The complex had an occupancy of 87 percent during the fall semester, Buchanan said. If a tenant didn't meet the criteria, he or she was rejected from renting an apartment.

For the second semester, Buchanan said that the complex's occupancy rate was down 4 percent.

The council approved the hire of Ginger Alby and Vern Wittenberg as patrol officers effective Feb. 15 and Feb. 22, respectively.

Police Chief Kim Murphy noted Alby and Wittenberg will replace two police officers – Gerry Hanson and Ken Lorenz – who have left the department for other positions.

The next council meeting is scheduled Feb. 22 at 5 p.m. at City Hall.

County agrees to contribute to road project

the improvement cost), while Arctic Cat, city of Thief River Falls and Pennington County would each be expected to pay $25,000 to cover the remaining cost.

Arctic Cat representatives indicated that they saw no immediate benefit to the company for improvements, but agreed to contribute $25,000, the estimated cost difference between a seven-ton and nine-ton designation.

Six days after reluctantly agreeing to take part in the improvement, Arctic Cat's commitment was retracted. A Jan. 10 letter from Vice President of Operations Ron Ray to Thief River Falls Public Works Director Ron Lindberg, stated that Arctic Cat had no real interest in doing the project at this time. Ray's letter stated that Arctic Cat developed the majority of its plans based on using the Brooks Ave. entrances for both trucks and automobiles. Ray continued, saying that improvements to Barzen will increase the traffic going onto Highway 59 at the Barzen Ave.-Highway 59 junction.

Though Arctic Cat's participation in the project is unclear at this time, the Pennington County Board continued with plans to participate. Pennington County's main involvement in the improvement would be re-sloping CD 70. CD 70 drains from north to south along Barzen Ave. and east along Greenwood Street. Overgrown vegetation and debris caused the ditch to flood in May 2004 and improvements in 2005 were already planned. Within the unanimously carried motion, Pennington County agreed to pay up to $15,000 to be used for the Barzen Ave. improvement and re-sloping of CD 70. Pennington County was initially expected to contribute $25,000, but commissioners felt that $15,000 was a more fair contribution.

A public meeting to discuss all 2005 road projects will be held Thief River Falls City Hall on Thursday, Feb. 17, beginning at 7 p.m.

John Schmidt, coordinator of Pembina Trail RC&D presented the organization's annual report. In 2004, Pembina Trail contributed to the Marshall County Trail; sponsored an organic short course for ag. professionals; worked with representatives from community industries and power suppliers to explore alternative sources of energy; continued its participation in the dead animal project, collecting nine truckloads with 351,000 pounds of animal carcasses; as well as participating in other projects and conferences.

Board approves outlet fee resolution. Commissioners from both Pennington and Red Lake Counties met on Feb. 4 regarding Red Lake County Ditch 13. The resolution supports a proposed act, which would allow an outlet charge to be assessed to Pennington County for drainage into RLC CD 13. Both boards feel that the one-time outlet fee is the most appropriate way to resolve the drainage issues involving RLC CD 13.

Sheriff's items

- The board approved the resignation of Sheriff Department employee Ginger Alby.
- The board approved Sheriff Department advertisement for a permanent part-time overnight dispatcher, the position previously held by Alby.
- The board approved Sheriff Mike Hruby's request to instate Mark Buggeman as full-time dispatcher/jailer.
- The board approved advertising for a part-time clerical position in the Sheriff's Department.
- Hruby updated the board on the progress of the county's 911 radio project. Dispatch activity and records have moved to a temporary location. Work on the dispatch portion of the project began last week. If every thing goes as planned, the project will be completed by the end of February.

Engineer's items

- The board approved ditch cleaning petitions for CD 31, sections nine, 16 and 21 in Mayfield Township and JD 25-3, sections 34, 27, 22, 15 and 10 in Bray Township.
- The board approved bridge repair over CD 21 in section 28 of Rocksbury Township.

The next meeting of the Pennington County Board of Commissioners will be Feb. 22, beginning at 5 p.m.

Fish and fun at Knights of Columbus Fishing Derby

About 300 people participated in the Annual Knights of Columbus Fishing Derby in Thief River Falls Sunday, Feb. 13. The event took place between 1 and 3 p.m. near the Eighth Street bridge.

Outside temperatures in the 30s made fishing relatively comfortable. There have been times in past years, when temperatures dipped well below zero degrees Fahrenheit. Maybe that contributed to the turnout. Of those who turned out for the event, the oldest was Lloyd Larson, 84, the youngest was Rachel Blowat, eight months, and the one who came from the furthest distance away was Gerald Fox of Dell Rapids, S.D.

With so many lines in the water, it may have been disappointing to some that only four fish were caught. Travis Wiskow caught the first fish, a 7.5 ounce northern pike. Three other fish were caught, all were northern pikes, and all were larger. The largest fish was caught by Troy Wiskow, a one and one-half pound northern pike. The second largest fish, a one-pound northern pike, was caught by Lee Nieland. Ashley Michealbust caught a three-quarter pound northern pike.

While it's called a "fishing derby" to many people, that's not always what a fishing derby is all about. To some, it's about visiting with friends. To others, it's an opportunity to do something with the entire family. To even more, it's about taking a chance at winning lots of door prizes, and some large cash prizes.

Too many door prizes to note were awarded this year, but cash prize winners, this year, included: $200 to Mitch Semanko and $100 each to Doug Williams, Kevin Iverson, Murray Dicken, Beverly Melenchenko, and Martin DeHaan. The winner of a Terry Redlin print was Dave Berg.

...What? Oatmeal?

Now that the Christmas cookies are gone, the New Year's party leftovers have been eaten, the Super Bowl snack bowls are empty, and (hopefully) the Valentine's Day candy box contains nothing but papers, it is time for all of us to get back to eating properly. What better way to start eating properly than to start the day with something that tastes good and is good for us, too. How about oatmeal? Before you moan and groan, wait and see what follows.

Oatmeal has become my breakfast of choice in my old age. The first half decent breakfasts I remember were milk and toast with jelly, preferably grape jelly. Crisp cereals with milk replaced that, and they became cooked cereals like Cream of Wheat and Coco Wheat. All good, substantial breakfasts. Then, I thought I would try oatmeal. I liked it - a lot - and am still eating it. And here is a story by a Scottish gentleman who likes his oatmeal, too, and can tell us how to cook it properly.

How to Eat Oatmeal by Dean Allen

When it comes to mornings, I am a confident coffee-drinker, cigarette-smoker and pill-swallower; I am also a task-avoider, phone-ignorer and a staunch advocate of delayed rising. In negotiating the vast expanse of time that falls before noon, I am also preoccupied with breakfast.

With the exception of kedgeree* and white cake muffins, I like all known forms of breakfast, but I like oatmeal most.

There's no point pretending that oatmeal is anything but a dour grain stigmatized by centuries of Scottish poverty and the feedbags of horses. But it must be eaten - for health and spiritual well-being - and it must be eaten right.

What you will need: a coffee cup, a clean cotton cloth, a bowl, a spoon, a heavy-bottomed pot (with lid) and a stove, water, salt, brown sugar, cream, and, of course, oatmeal: none of this 'quick' folderol in a cardboard tube or (for heaven's sake!) instant nukable crap in foil packets with flavourings (sp) of fruit and spice. You will need oats. Rolled oats. You can buy them bulk, or in a bag, for not much money. You will need already to have consumed some of your morning coffee: this is careful work and you can't make oatmeal in a haze.

Decide how many souls deserve your oatmeal this morning (it may only be you), and with the coffee cup measure out (cold!) water from the tap: two cupsful (sp) for each person, into the pot. When the water is measured out, dip your cup into the pot and steal some back. Onto the fire. Between your thumb and forefinger, take a pinch from the ramekin of sea salt beside the stove and add to the water. (Should you not have a ramekin of sea salt beside the stove, you don't deserve oatmeal.)

While the water heats, carefully dry out the coffee cup with the cloth, making sure not to leave a hint of moisture behind. Just as the water boils, add oatmeal, one cupful per person, in a gentle, rocking side-to-side pour (had you not dried the inside of the cup, there would be a sticky mess of oat crumbs inside, but because you did there's only a dusting of oat flour, see? So much better.)

With your spoon, stir. Turn the fire down to its weakest point, leave off the lid and go open the paper. Do not set a timer or consult the wall clock, because you are honing instinct. When all water has been absorbed, after, say, two front-page articles, turn off the fire, put on the lid, and read one more front-page article.

Note, as you scoop into the bowl, how the oat grains have puffed up to a lovely fat creamy consistency. Sprinkle brown sugar on, then pour cream (do it the other way around (and) you don't deserve oatmeal).

Kedgeree is a traditional Scottish dish, which originated with a Scottish regiment serving in India in Victorian days. It is made with smoked haddock, basmati rice, hard-boiled egg, onion and Indian spices. It was often served with scrambled eggs or mashed potatoes.*

PARENTING TIPS

Helping Your Child Communicate

Children who can translate their thoughts and ideas into words are more likely to be successful in school. Friendships and relationships often depend on the ability to express feelings. Learning to communicate is critical for success throughout life.

Of course, children don't learn to communicate all at once. Children must learn to crawl before they can walk, and they must babble and gurgle before they learn to speak. In fact, learning to communicate is a lifelong task.

As a parent, you can do a lot to foster your child's ability to communicate. Most experts agree that the most important thing is to talk with your child. "Conversations" are important, even if your baby does not understand all the words. Besides the fact that he will learn by hearing your words, he will also enjoy the attention you give him. As you listen to your child and exchange conversation he will learn that it is important to both speak and to respond to what the other person has said.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Have "conversations" with your child. Even the young child who is not yet speaking can make sounds and will attempt to "talk" to you.

It's a busy time

The middle of winter is a busy time for our students, just as all other times of the year are as well. Our eighth graders just completed the required Minnesota tests called the BSTs. That stands for the Basic Skills Tests in reading and math. We don't get those results until mid-April. Also students at many grade levels recently took some computer-based Northwest Evaluation Association tests in reading and math as well. We receive instant feedback on those, so students and teachers have that information to help plan for the rest of the year or to help evaluate the semester that was just completed. There are various reasons for taking those tests and various uses for the results. With all the testing in schools these days, any month could be called a testing month. That will increase as the state mandates more tests in the future. Also the federal government may increase the number of tests mandated for No Child Left Behind in the future. There is talk of those tests being mandated in the high schools, but that has to pass Congress first.

In addition to all the tests, we have many students involved in academic co-curricular activities as well. We have math league, knowledge bowl, spelling bee, and others either in season or just completed. As always, our students are performing quite well. You read about them in The Times nearly every week. Many of these students are also involved in music and other fine arts activities and in sports as well. Our students certainly are busy. We expect a lot from them, and they produce. We are in the middle of some winter concerts and we have musicals coming up shortly. We are also at or near the end of winter sports seasons so you have the opportunity to see students perform in those arenas as well. We need to support our young people in all their efforts and encourage them to do their best. Our students balance academics with the arts and sports and also their family and personal lives with volunteerism efforts, church youth groups, and even jobs. I don't believe most students in other parts of the world are nearly as active, learning on so many fronts all at the same time. It may be overloaded at times, but it seems to be the way of our culture in this present age.

The Legislature is in full swing and many educational proposals are being discussed in St. Paul. The governor has a proposal that is an inch thick. Both the Senate and the House of Representatives will be outlining their proposals shortly as well. First they need to react to the governor's proposals, then the Democrats and Republicans alike will produce their own. I would be surprised if we see a final product before midnight of the final night of the session - but we can hope. I think it is quite interesting that some of our politicians complain that the school funding formulas are too complex - that the average man on the street cannot understand them. Then they proceed to write new proposed formulas that are longer and more complex than the former ones. I personally do not think that complexity is necessarily the most important issue, but rather that equity is the most important. With all the school funding questions and discussions this past fall during our referendum campaign, one issue seemed important to many people, myself included, and that is that the state should consider that public school funding should be a state responsibility. Hopefully, any changes made will not continue to shift more of the responsibility onto the local schools to pass more referendums, but rather have the state pick up the slack to adequately fund general education and pay for inflation as well.

We are currently working on the budget for the 2005-06 school year. As we promised last fall, our use of the new referendum money will be to balance the budget and maintain our current programs. If there is revenue beyond that we will be careful to only fund new programs or additions that we feel we can sustain over time and are backed by research or data as proven to be reliable and/or beneficial to students. This process of budget assessment will continue for the next couple months - or until the Legislature completes its work. The Legislature is currently working on issues and formulas for both the 2005-06 school year and the 2006-07 school year.

Some people have been asking about our school calendar for the next school year as well. We are also working on that at this time. Our plan is to start school with students on Sept. 1 again next year as allowed in state statutes. All the particulars have not been completed, but the proposed calendar will be presented to the school board in late March. There are bills in both houses of the Legislature currently that propose that all schools in Minnesota be required to return to a post Labor Day start. Time will tell how that progresses as well. If you have any ideas or suggestions for school funding issues, school calendar issues, or any other laws or statutes, I urge you to call or write Sen. LeRoy Stumpf and our representatives, both Maxine Penas and Bernie Lieder. They would all be happy to hear from you. Thanks for all you do to help our children and young people.

Strangely enough

Earlier last week, a 4-year-old Michigan boy took his mother's car on a joy ride to a video store at about 1:30 a.m. He successfully maneuvered the car a quarter mile from his house to find that the store was closed. On his drive home, he hit two parked cars and then backed up into an occupied police car, ending the toddler's first real taste of crime. No charges were filed, but the story raises a question: what was he thinking?

One may answer such a question assuming that the 4-year-old boy wanted to show his true punk spirit to his fellow kindergartners by stealing his mother's car, cruising town for chicks, hitting the video store, returning the car safely and slipping back into his SpongeBob SquarePants pajamas without his mother suspecting a thing. However, he could have just been a little kid with a crazy idea that sounded good at the time.

Everyone has had that kind of idea before. The kind that sounds so good in your head. I can remember being a toddler and unrolling an entire roll of toilet paper to make a hut village for the imaginary people that lived in the floor. It sounded completely humanitarian on my part until my mother found out. She apparently did not find my hut village to be such a kind act. Again, it seem like a good idea at the time, but now as I look back on it, I can truly see the stupidity of the whole thing.

It's not only children that make poor choices. Many adults make bad decisions that make them shake their heads later. If having strange ideas weren't common, there would be no material for "America's Funniest Videos" or reality TV.

Making bad choices is the human condition. If one could not express oneself and do whatever it is that sounds good at the time, life would be difficult to live. If we never did anything foolish, there would be nothing to laugh at in the future and lessons would be difficult to learn. So, [illegible]

Mexico City is a mix of past and present

Unlike the disorienting trans-Atlantic plane trip across several times zones to Europe, the quick one-and-a-half hour flight from Dallas, Texas, to Mexico City does little to prepare one for a trip back through the ages.

Mexico City was a teeming Aztec city when the Spaniards arrived in the early 1500s. The conquistadores under Hernan Cortes subdued the natives in the most brutal fashion, demanding, amongst other things, that each native produce a certain amount of gold per month or be cut open and eaten alive by dogs.

Later, in a fit of guilt for their inhumanity, the Spaniards sent monks to convert the natives. Using the riches the Spanish stole, the church built ornate cathedrals, monasteries, cloisters, basilicas and seminaries all across Mexico.

To build their buildings, the Spanish destroyed Aztec pyramids and cities and used the bricks. Just 20 years ago, the remains of seven Aztec pyramids dating from the 1300s were found in the shadow of the Mexico City cathedral. The Spanish had used what they could and buried the rest.

So, Mexican cities and towns are filled with historic old buildings which give the place an Old World charm, however brutal and unjust its foundations.

During the late 1500s, almost all of the native population which had survived Spanish brutality was killed by European diseases. So, within a few years after sending missionaries, the Spanish found there was barely anybody left to convert. Or do the work.

Although most are well-maintained, many buildings from the 1500s and 1600s, particularly in smaller towns, have stood unused for hundreds of years. Some have been transformed into gardens. Others into luxury hotels. Yet more have disappeared for good.

Over the centuries, Spanish blood intermingled with native blood - as well as with the blood of imported slaves - to the extent that over 50 racial distinctions were once recognized in Mexico apart from the native tribes.

Tour guides deny it, but one's prestige is still linked to race in many Mexican minds. A stooped old gray-haired man I talked to had one thing to report to me in his broken English: "My grandfather was Spanish!" he said adamantly, as if to make sure I didn't mix him up with the rest of the riff raff.

But Mexico City isn't just history. Today, it is a teeming metropolis of 23 million people ranked as one of the most architecturally interesting cities in the world.

From the early Spanish church buildings, layered in gold, to the broad 19th century avenues, modeled after Paris, to modern skyscrapers and basilicas with designs as strange as they are grand, a person has a hard time walking down the street in Mexico City without staring up.

But one must not stare up while walking. "Stop, then look" should be the motto of every American tourist in Mexico, for one thing Mexico does not have is an Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). The sidewalks aren't necessarily level - or free of bottomless pits.

We might deride OSHA and all the suing lawyers in this country, but one thing they have accomplished is making the sidewalks relatively predictable.

In Mexico City, most manholes are square and are covered, but only partially, with the round, wooden ends of electric wire spools. We tried to keep our noses down, but at least twice I tripped and went sprawling while looking upwards at some architectural wonder.

Unfortunately, an older member of our group fell into the uncovered corner of a manhole, broke his elbow and had to be shipped back to Florida.

Not everything on the streets of Mexico City was so primitive. In fact, one innovation impressed me so much that I think we ought to introduce it here.

As we walked down one street, we saw that part of it was blocked off for construction. But what did they use to block off the street? Ugly orange pilons?

No, the barrier at the edge of traffic which kept cars out of the construction zone was formed by a row of several dozen defunct computer monitors.

Leave it to the Mexicans to come up with a use for those things.

Making 2005 a great year

by Mark Berg
Farm Business Management

Recently, in this column, Rick Morgan, Farm Business Management instructor in Moorhead, wrote about "system management." From his article, it becomes clear that farming is a system, that is, all things are connected. All things influence the outcome of another. Farming is not only the work and inputs connected with producing crops or raising livestock, but also, as Morgan emphasized, our planning, our goals, how we think, etc.

Dan Millman said, "By expanding our deepest beliefs about what is possible, we change our experience of life." When we think back to the settling of this countryside, in the late 1800s, we find this to be true. Many pioneers were certainly visionary. In system management, it is very important we have a picture of where we want to be and how we want to live.

When the pioneers came onto this prairie, they did not see what was there. They saw what was not there. They saw farms, towns, railroads, roads and families. Guess what we had 20 years after the pioneers' arrival – the farms, towns, railroads, roads and families they created out of very little but a dream, a vision.

2005 lies before us like the fresh untracked snow outside my office window. What we will do with 2005? In the living of our lives, we are only limited to the degree of the clarity of the vision we hold of our ideal farm business, of our ideal lifestyle. A problem exists when we have no idea, no picture of the future, except the day-to-day jobs we will face each day.

In managing a farm, we know that seeing isn't believing, believing is seeing. Just like the pioneers, to the degree our vision is clear, our vision will be achieved. To the degree we believe in our goals, our goals will be achieved. This makes operating our businesses fun and makes success possible.

So here we are with this untracked snow, this fresh, new year. Take some time to envision how you want your world to be, how you want your year to turn out. Your vision is the promise of what you will, at last, unveil.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: My wife and I farm together. For taxes our self employment income has been recorded just under my Social Security number with the idea that it would make my future retirement higher and she would then receive benefits through me. Is that a good idea?

A: As the saying goes, life is full of choices. Self employment provides more means of reporting earnings than that of an employee and you need to discuss them with your financial advisors. Strictly from a Social Security coverage point of view several pitfalls loom with your current reporting that you two need to consider. Does she have a job outside the farm that is earning her Social Security coverage? Do you have minor children? Social Security coverage is for survivor and disability benefits too, not just retirement. With all earnings posted to your record, no insured status for her, not only for future retirement but for current survivors and disability coverage, is being built. Without her own insured status no benefits would be payable to her or on her record. This would be very important if something fatal or disabling happened to her, especially if you two have children since child benefits are payable up to at least age 18 and possibly longer. SSA benefits certainly do not replace the person yet SSA work based income from those benefits is a major help.

Perhaps you purchase insurance but SSA coverage has other advantages including benefits not ending after a set amount of funds are paid out, being portable with other jobs and building her own retirement.

Retirement benefits are computed by using 35 years of a persons work record so higher earnings to her over years will provide her own SSA retirement. Of course, less earnings to you will reduce your own eventual retirement benefit and any potential survivor or disability benefits payable on your record. On the other hand, if your overall earnings continue to be higher than hers, she will get a larger widow's benefit one day if you die first.

Any future benefits payable as a spouse to either of you will depend on the amount of her eventual retirement compared to the amount of yours. Consider downloading benefit calculators from the SSA Web site, www.socialsecurity.gov. With them, you two, and your financial advisors, can compute different benefit opportunities under the various SSA benefit types for each of you using different salary forecasts. After you do all that, you two should direct your tax preparer to credit her with Social Security coverage.

Boys high school hockey...

TRF host to 8A tournament

Opened a year ago, the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls will play host to its first Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament beginning with quarterfinal doubleheaders at 6 and 8:15 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Feb. 17 and 18.

Single semifinal games have 7:30 p.m. start times Saturday and Monday, Feb. 19 and 21.

Championship game Thursday, Feb. 24, also has a 7:30 p.m. opening face-off.

Warroad is the favorite. The defending champions are the top seed in the 2005 tournament and the No. 1 ranked team in the Class A state polls. Warroad has won seven Section 8A titles in the past 12 years.

Host Thief River Falls is the No. 2 seed.

The tournament got under way with a pair of Tuesday first round games at Park Rapids and Hallock.

Starting Thursday, all Section 8A tickets will be sold at the Ralph Engelstad Arena. There will be no advanced ticket sales until the championship game. That information will be made available immediately following the semifinal games.

The general admission tickets, priced at $5 for adults and $3 for students in grades K-12, can be purchased at either the east or west arena doors. There are no reserved seats.

Arena doors will open at 5 p.m. for the quarterfinals; 6:30 p.m. for the semifinals; and 6 p.m. for the championship game.

Officials remind fans that Section 8A policy forbids the use of noise makers of any type at tournament games. No food or beverage can be brought into the arena.

The Section 8A champion will move on to the 2005 Class A boys state hockey tournament March 2-5 at the Excel Energy Center in St. Paul.

In state tournament play, the Section 8A winner will draw the Section 1A champion as a 2 p.m. Wednesday quarter foe. Top four seeds in Section 1A are Albert Lea, Mankato East, New Ulm and Marshall.

Gators win another close one

It was another down-to-the-wire finish for Badger/Greenbush-Middle River Thursday as the Gators edged Northern Freeze 46-44 in girls high school basketball at Karlstad.

It was the 22nd straight win for Badger/Greenbush-Middle River, but the Gators' second two-point decision in their last three starts. The previous Saturday the No. 3-ranked team in the Minnesota Class A state polls was a 72-70 double-overtime winner against Grafton.

Liz Schenkey got the winning bucket this time. With the game tied at 44-44, the Gators held the ball for a final shot – a 6-footer by the 5-9 freshman with two seconds on the clock.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River led 13-12 after one quarter and had a 28-23 halftime edge before opening up a 40-28 third quarter cushion.

Up 15 and on a 3-on-1 break early in the fourth quarter, the Gators missed a lay-up, then watched as the Northern Freeze kicked off a comeback with a 3-pointer.

"We had a poor fourth quarter," confessed Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Neibauer. "We turned the ball over down the stretch."

The Gators were 12-for-15 at the free throw line. The Northern Freeze sabotaged an upset bid by making just 10 of 21 foul shots.

Nordics' second half defense seals 60-35 win over Goodridge

Marshall County Central's defense gave up just 14 second half points as the Nordics beat Goodridge 60-35 in Thursday boys high school basketball rescheduled from an earlier weather-related postponement.

The Huskies fell behind 10-5 in the first quarter, but were down just 23-21 at halftime. The Nordics opened up a 38-27 third quarter spread.

"We played some pretty good defense in the second half," reported Marshall County Central coach Jake Rantanen.

Early foul trouble forced the Nordics to play zone in the second quarter, but a trio of 3-pointers by the Huskies prompted Rantanen to abandon those plans.

Jay Maurstad scored 23 points, Nick Haven 11 and Dustin Monsebroten 10 for the Nordics. Cole Scheef and Dustin Isaak scored 11 and 10 points, respectively, for the Huskies.

Marshall County Central was 25-for-56 from the field (45 percent) and 8-for-14 at the free throw line. Goodridge went 14-for-37 from the floor (38 percent) and 4-for-7 at the line.

The Nordics dominated the boards, 31-11. They did not give up an offensive rebound.

Goodridge topped the turnover figures 16-6.

RLCC has strong first half, but falls off pace vs. RLF after halftime

Red Lake County Central stayed with Red Lake Falls through the first half, but the Mustangs lost ground and the game to the favored Eagles in the second half of Thursday's girls high school basketball match-up at Plummer. Final score was 61-44.

The Mustangs trailed only 15-11 after one quarter and were still within 26-20 at intermission. But the Eagles opened up a 48-30 third quarter spread.

"We played pretty well in the first half," confirmed Red Lake County Central coach Rick Koivisto. "The kids worked hard. We were pretty pleased with the effort."

Red Lake County Central shot 63 percent from the field, but 27 turnovers limited the Mustangs to 30 shots. They made 19 of them.

Red Lake Falls didn't miss much, either, with a 57 percent 25-for-44 shooting night.

Swenson turned in a personal-best times of 52.96 in the 100-yard butterfly and 2:01.52 in the 200 butterfly while placing 14 and 11th, respectively in those events during the Feb. 4-5 University of Minnesota Challenge in Minneapolis.

Currently, Swenson has the third fastest time in the MIAC in the 100 butterfly and the sixth fastest conference time in the 200 butterfly.

Illness trims sports coverage in today's Times

Results from weekend and Monday sports activity that would normally appear in today's edition of The Times are missing because Sports Editor Mike Lundgren was down with the flu bug Monday.

Although Lundgren was back at his desk Tuesday, he had neither the time nor the energy to compete two days worth of work before the press day deadline arrived.

Wal-Mart pledges to match $1 million in donations to Salvation Army

The Salvation Army has announced that Wal-Mart Stores Inc. made a matching gift commitment to benefit The Salvation Army's National Red Kettle Christmas fundraising campaign. The Wal-Mart & Sam's Club Foundation matched customers' contributions to The Salvation Army's red kettles located at more than 3,600 Wal-Mart stores, Supercenters, Neighborhood Markets and Sam's Clubs nationwide. The matching gift commitment will continue through Christmas Eve. Wal-Mart Stores Inc. pledged to match all customers' donations up to $1 million. The contributions will serve needy families in more than 9,000 communities across the country.

"The matching gift commitment made by Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is a welcome and much-needed gift, especially for The Salvation Army in Minnesota and North Dakota," said Major Daniel Sjögren, The Salvation Army's northern divisional commander. "All donations to our red kettles are used in the areas in which they are received, and Wal-Mart's commitment to matching those donations will enable us to extend our services to even more people throughout Minnesota and North Dakota."

"The Red Kettles are an enduring symbol of the holiday season and represent people helping people," said Betsy Reithemeyer, vice president of corporate affairs for Wal-Mart Stores Inc. "We hope our customers join us in donating what they can to benefit an organization that does so much in our communities to serve families in need. The Salvation Army Red Kettles and bell ringers are truly a holiday tradition worth keeping."

The $1 million pledge solidifies Wal-Mart's ongoing commitment to helping The Salvation Army supports needy families in local communities throughout the year. The Salvation Army works with Wal-Mart on many activities, including disaster relief efforts, feeding the hungry and providing resources to address needs within the communities they serve.

Donations to the Red Kettles stay local, supporting programs in the communities in which they were received. In 2003, $93 million was raised nationally—through kettle donations. This includes over $12 million raised from kettles in front of Wal-Mart and Sam's Club stores that helped The Salvation Army provide assistance for about 33 million people throughout the United States.

The Salvation Army provides food for the hungry, companionship to the elderly and ill, clothing and shelter to the homeless, opportunities for underprivileged children, relief for disaster victims, assistance for the disabled and many more services year-round.

The Salvation Army northern division provides services throughout Minnesota and North Dakota. In 2003, The Salvation Army northern division served over 647,000 meals; provided disaster assistance to over 21,000 people; provided over 4,000 nights of emergency shelter for teens; counseled 5,348 inmates and provided over 56,000 clothing, household, prescription and transportation vouchers to help people in Minnesota and North Dakota. The Salvation Army in Minnesota and North Dakota is made up of nearly 99 percent volunteers. The Salvation Army has been in existence since 1865, supporting those in need in his name without discrimination.

Job vacancies in Minnesota holding steady

Minnesota job seekers are competing for the same number of employment opportunities as last year, according to the latest Minnesota Job Vacancy Survey (MJVS) released recently by the Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development (DEED) Labor Market Information Office. Job vacancies in the state are up less than 1 percent from one year ago to 50,127 or 4.3 job vacancies for every 10 unemployed people.

Despite nearly flat growth overall, a number of industrial sectors in the state are showing strong hiring demand. Manufacturing, which began to show hiring growth one year ago, had another strong performance with production vacancies up 35 percent. Vacancies in the transportation and material-moving sectors were up 66 percent over last year. Business and financial, as well as computer and mathematical, occupations continued to strengthen with twice as many job vacancies during fourth quarter 2004 compared to last year.

"The survey is encouraging as it shows a job market that is holding steady overall and even gaining strength in many sectors," said DEED Commissioner Matt Kramer.

Major findings from the latest MJVS are available online at www.deed.state.mn.us/lmi/publications/jobvacancy.

President's budget request includes $40 million for flood control

Senator Norm Coleman (R-MN) has announced $40 million was included in the president's Fiscal Year 2006 budget proposal for the Grand Forks/East Grand Forks flood control project.

Coleman said he has heard from East Grand Forks Mayor Lynn Stauss and other area officials about the importance of this project and wrote the president directly about this matter back in December of 2004. These funds would ultimately go to the Department of Defense's Army Corps of Engineers to construct levees and floodwalls set back from the river, forming three "rings" around both communities. The design level of protection is equivalent to the peak discharge experienced during the 1997 flood.

The president's budget proposal will now be considered by the Congress, where Coleman will work for the inclusion of these funds in the final Fiscal Year 2006 Appropriations bills.

"I'm pleased that the president supports providing these funds for flood prevention in Grand Forks and East Grand Forks," Coleman said. "I've witnessed the destruction flooding has done to that region firsthand, and I have long been committed to ensuring that we have the infrastructure in place to prevent that tragedy from ever happening again. As the appropriations process continues, I will work hard to ensure these important flood prevention funds remain in the final appropriations bills we will ultimately pass."

Don't try this at home...

When life imitates art, kids often pay the price

from the staff at Gillette Children's Specialty Healthcare

Jeremy (not his real name) lay in a bed in the intensive care unit, hooked up to life-sustaining machines. His young brain was swelling, shutting down his body and causing irreversible damage.

Four hours earlier, Jeremy and his friends had been watching a movie in which people were "car surfing." Car surfing is a stunt whereby one person stands on the trunk or hood of the car, and the driver cruises down the road trying to shake the person off. Jeremy fell from a moving car and slammed, headfirst, into the pavement.

Kids often imitate the seemingly glamorous behavior they see in the media. They try a few holds while watching wrestling, or they fight light-saber duels with sticks after viewing "Star Wars." The stakes are higher, however, when young people imitate activities shown on the "Xtreme Sports" channel or in programs such as "Fear Factor" or "Jackass: the Movie."

Adrienne Barnwell, Ph.D., is the lead psychologist at Gillette Children's Specialty Healthcare in St. Paul. She notes, "Vicarious learning is an efficient way to find out about the world, but reality shows short-circuit the danger. Rather than showing actual consequences, these shows demonstrate that there are no risks. You watch as professionally trained people ski off cliffs, drive cars at high speed, or jump from a moving boat - with no negative consequences - and you figure it's OK for you to try." Real-life results are much less positive. In fact, children who copy such stunts often sustain broken bones, lacerations, and spinal-cord and traumatic brain injuries.

"Although it takes a split second for a child to be seriously injured, the effects can last a lifetime," says Mark Gormley Jr., M.D., a pediatric rehabilitation medicine physician at Gillette. He too, has seen kids seriously injured while mimicking stunts they've seen in the media. In the past year alone, Gormley treated six children who were injured while car surfing.

"Many people with traumatic brain or spinal-cord injuries face lifelong medical care," Gormley adds. Following such injuries, young people might face difficulties interacting with friends, concentrating, learning and thinking. They often need help eating, dressing and bathing. Some have trouble talking, swallowing and breathing.

Caution: Don't Try This at Home

Accidents rank as the leading cause of death among children and young teens - and many are preventable. But simply telling children not to copy the behavior they see on screen doesn't work. Nor does the warning: "Professional driver on a closed course; do not attempt."

Regardless of cautions, young people engage in reckless behavior as if they were invincible. They believe nothing bad will ever happen to them. Barnwell notes, "Kids lack a clear sense of personal vulnerability, unless they've been abused. The concept of being badly hurt or killed isn't something they even consider."

In large part, that's because the part of the brain, which houses reason, judgment and intellect, isn't fully developed until adulthood. Constance McCleod, Ph.D., L.P., and a Gillette psychologist, explains, "Formal operational thinking - the ability to think about all the unseen variables that can come together to create a bad outcome - doesn't even begin until around age 12." Which means those who wind up in the trauma or burn unit after imitating stunts might not have been capable of fully understanding the ways in which a stunt could go wrong.

In addition, much of what looks like risk-taking results because kids have inaccurate or incomplete information. Says McCleod, "A boy who dunked tennis balls in gasoline, lit them on fire and played tennis with them thought he was being extremely careful. He told me, 'Dr. Connie, I only used a little bit of gasoline.' He didn't know that it's the fumes, not the gasoline, that ignite and burn." Similarly, many children and teens don't understand how dangerous a motor vehicle can be. "Most car accident victims we see at Gillette are there because they didn't understand physics," McCleod says. "They don't know how much force it takes to turn and stop a mass of steel. There's huge gap in their understanding."

Beyond that, some kids are naturally impulsive risk takers who leap before they look. Says Barnwell, "I worked with a boy who defined courage as 'doing something other people would be scared to try - like jumping out a window.'" Other kids, who are particularly susceptible to peer pressure, view risky behavior as a way to get attention and look cool. They often have a hard time resisting a dare.

Attentive - Not Overprotective

All that said, parents might be tempted to lock the door and never let their kids out of the house. Not a great option, given that overprotected children tend to become shy, withdrawn, demanding, socially immature, and not much fun to be around. As much as possible, children need to be free to explore and try new things. Children learn about their own strengths and weaknesses - they become strong, independent and confident - when they experience success and failure.

"It's the parents' job to provide information, guide and supervise, because at any given moment the brightest kid in the world can make the wrong choice," says McCleod.

How best to do that?

- Children spent about six hours a day in the classroom and about three hours watching television. In addition, they regularly view movies and play video games. Talk to your kids about what they're watching or playing.
- Don't dismiss the dangerous stunts your child sees in the media. Discuss what could happen if the stunts go wrong. Explain why they shouldn't attempt everything they see on TV.
- Point out the consequences of bad decisions. Discuss the ways in which a serious injury can change lives. Arrange for kids to talk with other adults in the community (e.g., firefighters or emergency room doctors) who have firsthand knowledge of the consequences of dangerous behavior.
- Children are impressionable and need good role models. Ask whom they look up to and why. Tell them about the people you admire.
- Be attentive, not overprotective. If your kids want to do something, try to find a way to do it safely. "You can go to the Boundary Waters alone as soon as you complete a lifesaving course." "You can shoot a gun if you take gun safety."
- Provide safe opportunities for children to explore and try new things. Supervised activities - such as sports, hiking, biking, camping and swimming - provide the excitement and challenge most kids need.
- Every time you leave your teenagers home alone, review your rules and expectations. Post a phone number near the telephone where you can be reached. Remind them what to do in an emergency. "In case of fire, get out of the house. Then call 911."
- If your child is repeatedly involved in risky and dangerous activities, consider talking with a professional counselor.

Free, cheap e-file options now available for Minnesota

Thinking about filing your 2004 tax returns? The Minnesota Department of Revenue's Web site features several free and low-cost options for electronically preparing and filing your return. The options became available recently.

About 54 percent of Minnesotans who filed a paper tax return last year qualify to e-file their Minnesota and federal tax returns free this year through third-party software companies. Those who qualify for free e-filing are taxpayers who, in 2004, were:

- 25 or younger,
- 61 or older,
- a qualifying taxpayer for the federal Earned Income Tax Credit,
- an active-duty member of the military, with a W-2 from the military, or
- a taxpayer with total household income of $35,500 or less.

For taxpayers who do not meet one of these requirements, there are options as low as $5.95.

To find out if you qualify for free e-filing, or to find a low-cost option that works for your tax situation, go to the department's Web site at www.taxes.state.mn.us

You must go to this Web site to find an Internet software provider that provides the free or low-cost electronic filing services for both federal and Minnesota returns.

So, why e-file? If you are expecting a refund, you'll get your refund faster with e-file. Last year, the average time to process a refund from an e-filed return was two days. Ninety-seven percent of taxpayers received their refund within five days. Paper returns take up to 30 days until April 1. After that, it could be up to 90 days. If you owe, you can pay your tax electronically, even if you pay estimated tax throughout the year.

E-filing is easier than filling out a paper return. Most software asks questions and uses your answers to fill in the return. It does the preparing and the calculating. You only need to enter the information from your tax documents.

There are other ways to e-file, as well. You can also e-file by buying tax preparation software for your computer and transmitting the returns via your Internet service, or by asking your tax preparer to e-file for you. Many tax preparers are already required by the state to e-file the returns they prepare.

The Minnesota Department of Revenue expects about 2.4 million income tax returns this year, and estimates that about 70 percent of those will be electronically filed. Last year, the department received about 62 percent of returns electronically. That success made Minnesota the best in the nation for the percentage of population that e-filed.

Approximately half of Minnesotans file their state return before April. But about half wait until the days just before the April 15 deadline.

Filing requirements

You must file a Minnesota income tax return if you are a Minnesota resident and you are required to file a federal income tax return, or if you are a part-year resident or nonresident of Minnesota and you have a Minnesota gross income of $7,950 or more. Your 2004 Minnesota return must be postmarked by, brought to, or electronically filed with the Department of Revenue no later than April 15, 2005.

Resources

If you have tax questions, you can find a lot of information on the Department of Revenue's Web site at www.taxes.state.mn.us. You'll find fact sheets, forms, contact information and answers to frequently asked questions.

For elderly, disabled and low-income tax payers, Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) sites will open in February; call 651-297-3724 to find one near you.

Our taxpayer assistance line at 651-296-3781 is staffed from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and 9 a.m. to noon on Fridays.

If you're not e-filing your return and you need forms, they are available on the department's Web site at www.taxes.state.mn.us. You can also get them at libraries (or the post office only if your community has no library), or call the department's automated phone system at 651-296-4444 to order forms.

Strandquist Community News

F. Myrtle Vagle • 436-2133

The weather in northwest Minnesota is getting confused with time according to the calendar, making folks think it is spring the first days of February. But after a short-sleeved weekend of sunshine that melted the snowbanks quite a bit, I settled back and when I saw two degrees below zero this morning on the thermometer, Fahrenheit out here and Celsius in Canada was 34 below zero. Perhaps we may have six more weeks of winter, if the woodchuck or groundhog as it is sometimes called, can be relied upon to predict the season. Around here it did see its shadow for awhile in the afternoon last Wednesday.

A number of folks in the area have had the flu for a couple of weeks, have had a lot of coughing and had too much pain in their joints. The flu shots we were given didn't allow us to skip the flu because this was another kind. With all the different kinds there are, it is impossible to know for sure which it will be that we become infected. It seems to let those who had their flu shots last fall do get off easier. I'm glad to see some going back to work.

Judy Kleinvachter went to Thief River Falls to visit her brother Elmer Holmstrom who has moved from Newfolden to be nearer to medical help. On Tuesday, she took June Severson with her to Strandquist to enjoy those delicious potato dumplings at Irene's Cafe. In spite of this extremely cold weather she still has a lot of company to share her coffee and the many things she keeps baked all the time. Some of her visitors this week were Marie Stoffen, Claudia Berggren, A.J. Erickson of Roseau and Kelly, Amanda and Jessica Lofrooth.

Guests for a delicious Sunday dinner at Pearl Thompson's home were Isaac and Betsy Thompson, Elsie Lofrooth and I.

Jim and Cindy Wetterlund of Grand Forks took Morris and Hazel Anderson to Grand Forks on Sunday and brought them home again Monday evening after they were done with their doctor's appointments.

After listening to a group about all the jobs that have moved out of the country to foreign countries, I was wondering if wages were not the bigger reason. Some bookkeepers were paid as high as $60.00 per hour in plush offices and in a foreign not so nice circumstance? It would take the wisdom of Solomon to try to settle some of these problems. Or maybe if some had gone through the "Thirties" when we had the depression and there were very few jobs to be had and many strong men worked for their board and room. Or if they had the wisdom our uncles Tom and Andrew used to settle the wages raise they were asked to give for cutting wood. "When you feel you have cut for the agreed amount, chop your axe into the stump and go home." End of discussion. The worker found sun-up to sun-down was a very short day in the dead of winter!

Debate over public and private data

Taxpayers and residents have a reasonable expectation that personal, private or confidential information about them will be kept just that - personal and private. Government officials who come into contact with that sort of information shouldn't use that information for fodder during a gossip session at the local cafe.

Last week, Thief River Falls City Council approved a confidentiality agreement it wants city employees to sign. It's in the best interest of the city and city employees because in the course of conducting city business, employees may come into contact with sensitive information about local residents that should remain personal and private. Disclosure and misuse of private and confidential data is a serious matter, and one that would rightly deserve disciplinary action.

On the other hand, confidentiality agreements have been misinterpreted to prohibit access to all public information. Public access to government records, meetings, documents, plans and decisions help keep public officials accountable to the people who elected them into office. It's a cornerstone of democracy, so it's absolutely essential that we distinguish between public and private information. Unfortunately, the disciplinary provisions in confidentiality agreements have either been used to threaten, intimidate or prevent government employees from doing their jobs, or misinterpreted by employees.

We're not the only ones who are concerned about access to public data.

"Public access to government records and meetings is a key to accountability of officials who serve us. Access is a true cornerstone of our democracy," said Don Lindley, executive editor of the Daytona Beach News-Journal.

"Easy access to the documents, memoranda, budgets, plans and decisions of government at all levels ensures that citizens of any social, economic or political stature can monitor the effectiveness, the efficiency and the veracity those elected or appointed to do the people's bidding. And when that access is blocked—or even hindered in any way—the community suffers," said Jim Witters, managing editor, The Daily Commercial, Leesburg.

These quotes were easily obtained for an obvious reason. During this local discussion, news media across the nation are preparing for Sunshine Week. Opening a dialogue about our right of access to government information is the focus of Sunshine Sunday and Sunshine Week: Your Right to Know, which kicks off March 13, 2005, and continues through the following week. In the weeks to come, I'm sure you'll hear a great deal about why it's important to keep public information public.

The difference between public and private data is an important distinction to make. Unfortunately, it isn't always something you know when you see it. It's much more difficult than that. The challenge locally, then, will be defining for city employees what that difference is, and providing ongoing training on the distinction between public and private data that will serve this community for years to come, and keep local government accountable to its citizens.

Burdens grow with budget deficits

During a poorly attended townhall meeting in Thief River Falls on Saturday, Feb. 5, Sen. LeRoy Stumpf and Rep. Bernie Lieder discussed with local government officials some of the issues that they and local government will face during this current legislative session.

The issues, some of which included education, meth use, local government aid and crime, are serious issues that will have to be addressed. Unfortunately, the message we're hearing back, is that local government will have to continue to tighten its belt. To taxpaying citizens that means more mandates, and less help. It also means taxpayers can expect higher taxes because local governments will be under even greater pressure to raise taxes to provide necessary services.

Why are so many people shocked? When we look back all the signs were there: there was a huge budget deficit, businesses were complaining about high taxes, and people we're being told that they would have to start paying more for the services they enjoy.

On the other hand, there's no need to say that were keeping to our No New Tax pledge. The fact is, taxes have gone up, local government has been tightening its belt. Citizens and taxpayers are enjoying fewer benefits.

Citizens probably realize by now that truth was a casualty of this budget war a long time ago. What they want to know now is, whether the burden being shared by everyone? Is it fair?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for inspiring us. You are TRF-ic

To the Editor:

My wife, Beverly, and I had the privilege of being a part of the Thief River Falls community during the month of December 2004. We were not former residents returning home nor were we simply visitors "passing through." During the church seasons of advent and Christmas, I served as a volunteer interim pastor at Trinity Lutheran Church in Thief River Falls.

The two of us, who reside in the Washington, D.C., area, were simply overwhelmed by our Thief River Falls experience. What a wonderful community you are! Let me offer a number of specific examples and you will come to know why we feel as we do.

Literally within minutes of our arrival in Thief River Falls, we, by chance, met your mayor, Dale Wennberg. His welcome was so sincere that it threatened to melt all of the ice in The Ralph. The people of Trinity Lutheran encouraged us in our ministry by means of a remarkable combination of seriousness and fun. The Lincoln High School Choral Department's concert "One World, Many Voices," was simply stunning in terms of its artistry; the students and the director equally talented and dedicated. Our tours of Arctic Cat and Digi-Key were informative and impressive in many ways. We enjoyed viewing the "Christmas Train" as it wheeled into the Thief River Falls station. The Ralph Engelstad Arena was an ideal place for the World Junior Hockey Championship's exciting games. The hospital and nursing homes gently caring for the ill and the elderly. The perfect Christmas setting was at the Evergreen, in terms of mood and food. Our meals at China King were so remarkably delicious. My fellow pastors were so welcoming at their weekly scripture study meetings. We could continue this list for a long while. And, yes, we were indeed, significantly impressed by The Times, as well.

Yet, it took our return to our home and a bit of time for reflection before our Thief River experience truly "dawned on us" and came to be understood for what it was. It all seems to come down to one word, "quality!" The community of Thief River Falls seems to have a unique understanding of competence and confidence in terms of that which it undertakes, whether it is remembering its history, enjoying its present or looking forward to its future. We are certain that you are dealing with unresolved issues; of course, how could it be any other way? Nonetheless, as individuals and as a community, you seem to possess a unique ability to infuse a true sense of quality into essentially all that you do.

And so, our final words to you are, "Thanks for inspiring us!" You are TRF-ic!

Let's continue to pressure the DNR, Legislature

To the Editor:

The momentum is there. Let's keep it building. I am talking about the movement to get the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to remove travel restrictions on various roads, trails and ditch dumps that enter into certain lands under the jurisdiction of the DNR. I am so pleased to see the respective county boards passing resolutions demanding that all signs, cables, etc. be removed from these routes. I know of township boards that are writing letters to their legislators and DNR personnel with the same intent.

However, now is the time for individuals to write. We can't just sit back now and feel that the county and township actions will do the job. More help is needed. If you are able to talk about it, you are able to write about it. Don't depend on someone else to do the job. It doesn't have to be fancy or long (I get carried away on mine), just to the point. In this case, numbers mean a lot.

The following are addresses to send your letter to: (If you are in a legislative district different than Senate District 1 and Representative District 1A, send it to your legislator's address). Commissioner Gene Merriam, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155-4037; Gov. Tim Pawlenty, 130 State Capitol, 75 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155; Paul Swenson, regional director, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, 2115 Birchmont Beach Road NE, Bemidji, MN 56601; Rep. Maxine Penas, 535 State Office Building, 100 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155; and Sen. LeRoy Stumpf, Room G-24, State Capitol Building, 75 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155.

We can do it together. Thanks.

The real motive of the Livestock Task Force

To the Editor:

"It is way past time to set the record straight. Throughout the past 13 months, certain groups have repeatedly claimed that the primary motive of the Governor's Livestock Task Force (LTF) was to "take local control away" from township governments. They used such scare tactics simply to get free media attention and to drum up new memberships to their organizations. Members of these groups sat in on our discussions throughout this past year and know that we have stated from the very first meeting of the original LTF to the end that our goal was not to reduce or eliminate the local powers, but to determine what issues were having a negative impact on our state's livestock industry and find solutions to those problems. Our subsequent recommendations vindicate the LTF from their false and misleading charges and, hopefully, will cause some to question the credibility of our accusers.

The latest charges that we closed the doors of the last meeting in order to "lock out dissenting opinion" is simply more of the same garbage typical of what has been disseminated. Initially, we wanted the meeting closed so that Gov. Tim Pawlenty would be the first to see the recommendations. Later, however, it was decided to open the meeting to the public after all.

Senator Dille has proposed an end to the "feedlot wars," and has asked groups such as Land Stewardship Project and MNCOACT to come together with those of opposing viewpoints in "peace and harmony," rather than expending time and energy battling one another. I agree with the senator. It's time these groups quit spewing their poison across the state, stop misleading the public, and try to find common ground with those whose opinions differ from theirs.

Sincerely,
Lisa D. Hegredahl
Governor's Livestock Task Force and Local Siting Subcommittee

Heavy-handed DNR. What will the they try to do next?

To the Editor:

Here's just another example of the "heavy-handed" under-handedness of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and their lack of concern shown toward the taxpayers and residents of Lake of the Woods County. Recently, the County Ditch Authority repaired [illegible] County Ditch [illegible] 2004. By [illegible] when the drainage system was constructed in 1963. The DNR's response, written by Paul Swenson, regional director, was that they will not pay ditch assessments for projects located within consolidated conservation (con-con) areas.

According to Minnesota Statute, a county cannot use general fund monies generated from tax levies to pay for repairs of [illegible] ditch system. [illegible] budgets are taking their potshots at farmers and rural residents?

In fact, the DNR has refused to pay their share of assessments in other northern tier counties, such as Roseau (state auditors have written the same amount up for each of the last 10 years), Koochiching, Marshall and Beltrami counties. They create more and more wetlands in the northern tier, which reduces the amount of tax generating lands [illegible] DNR wants its [illegible] of Lake of the Woods [illegible] passed on to the owner of the drainage system. Would one suppose that the rest of the beneficiaries along the ditch would then have to pick up the DNR's share of that bill too?

Furthermore, the DNR now wants to close off access to several trails in Lake of the Woods County to all-terrain vehicles and, in essence, deny several property owners access to their own lands and state land. What's next?

Sincerely,
George Swentik
On behalf of the Lake of the Woods County Board of Commissioners

Rep. Davids

E20: A fuel for the future

"E20 is a visionary solution that creates a foundation of economic security and encourages other states to make similar choices to keep our economy strong."

by Rep. Greg Davids

To the surprise of few, the debate towards moving Minnesota toward 20 percent ethanol gasoline content has begun. Minnesota is no stranger to this ethanol discussion, yet it seems like the same cast of opponents keep reappearing to scream that the sky is falling.

Many of you know of the advantages of ethanol: a homegrown fuel; and important environmental fuel component that keeps our air clean; an unparalleled success story of rural economic development; and a critical factor in decreasing our dependence on foreign oil.

I don't want to diminish any of these important components as a reason to support ethanol and Minnesota's move toward E20. But I do want to focus on why it is so important for our state's future to adopt the 20 percent blend of ethanol.

Those who remember the initial ethanol research and the way it was introduced into our fuel supply know it was viewed as a "fuel extender" during the energy crisis of the early 1970s. This past hardship is one of the reasons I'm so honored to carry the governor's E20 proposal. Respected experts are telling us that we are heading for another energy crisis, as we are currently seeing oil futures at an all time high. The U.S. Energy Information Administration has forecasted demand to steadily grow as supply continues to be static. Even within the next decade, the reductions signal rising gasoline prices. A Wall Street Journal article on Sept. 9, 2004, has experts telling us that "limits to global oil production will mean that demand for oil will have to be curbed, and alternative sources of energy found." The spotlight could not be shining any brighter on ethanol as an answer to fill this growing gap between supply and demand.

We owe it to Minnesotans to have an honest discussion on this point. What will be the price of a gallon of gas in 2012 - the year a 20 percent "fuel extender" requirement would take effect? Suffice to say the cost won't be hovering around the $1.90 mark any longer.

Minnesotans continue to see a rising portion of their household budgets going towards home heating and automotive fuel costs. We need public policies that take decisive action today to prepare for future oil demands.

The 20 percent ethanol "fuel extender" requirement is just as important today as it was 30 years ago. I am proud of the governor's vision and will happily help push for this legislation, which will keep public policy focused on solving unavoidable future problems.

E20 is a visionary solution that creates a foundation of economic security and encourages other states to make similar choices to keep our economy strong. But most importantly, it helps avoid what many Minnesotans were forced to endure during the 1970s: an oil crisis.

State Representative Greg Davids is the chairman of the Minnesota House Agriculture Policy Committee.

"Italians are to be employed as section hands on this branch of the Great Northern in the future. They are to receive 13 cents per hour, while other labor will only be paid 12 1/2 cents per hour. The reason for the discrimination is explained by Roadmaster Regan, who says that the Italians will contract to work the whole year at this price, while others do not do this. At present, the Great Northern has about 500 Italians working in North Dakota as section hands and is importing a number more."

Band Social

"Everybody and his wife attended the band social at the Hotel Markham last Saturday night and they took all of their children along. It was about the liveliest, noisiest crowd seen here for some time, all evidently coming for a good time. Supper was served in the dining room and the boys succeeded in getting in nearly forty dollars, which will go toward buying new instruments. The band played several selections and very agreeably satified the crowd.

"The Boys' Band was organized last November, securing the instruments owned by the village and starting under the Instructions of Joel G. Winkjer. The average age of the members is about fifteen years and they have had only three months' practice. They were without a leader Saturday night but still did much better work than it was expected they could under the circumstances.

"Prof. Onstad, the leader of the Red Lake Falls Band, has been secured as instructor and made the first of his weekly trips here last Tuesday. He informs us that the boys have undoubted musical ability and with hard work, he expects good results.

"Several new members will be added a soon as the new instruments arrive. The following is the personnel of the band and the instruments they play: tuba, Arthur Hall and Christ Sandmoen; bass, Victor Brink; Baritone, Ole Lund; Trombone, Neil Dahl and Jalmer Guttormson; Tenor, William Lindahl and Iner Benson; Alto, Hugh Shannon, Alton Jackson and Robert Jackson; cornet, Mauritz Brink, Eddie Whaley, Albin Hellberg, John Rolland, Carl Lund; clarionet, N. C. Skeie, Elmer Burkee, Albert Hall, Eddie Dahl and Theo Winkjer; piccolo, Clair Jones; snare drum, George Hall; bass drum, Charles Sandmoen."

Horse Crosses Soo Bridge

"THIEF RIVER PRESS: Yesterday afternoon the horse belonging to J. J. Crowe hitched to a sleigh succeeded in breaking away and ran at high speed across the Soo bridge. A number of spectators watched the event with interest expecting to see the horse go through and at least break a leg. When about at the center of the bridge, the horse stumbled, breaking loose from the cutter which caused the latter to tumble over the side of the bridge and down onto the ice below. Aside from a few scratches, the horse escaped unhurt but the sleigh was badly damaged."

Hazel Happenings

"Iver Rolstad is laid up with a sore hand.

"James Kenney, the elevator man, took in fourteen loads of wheat and two loads of flax Saturday.

"Quite a number of young people from here attended the dance at Charles Carlson's place on the reservation Saturday evening.

"Considerable excitement was caused here on Monday when it was reported that a black rabbit could be seen engaged in securing its daily food of poplar bark in a grove just north of the section house. Plans were at once laid and preparations put into execution to secure this most valuable freak. Tom Bartlett, who has the reputation of being an expert with a gun, shouldered his weapon and marched boldly forward, determined that said rabbit should be his prize. When sighted, Tom let go with both barrels at once, then ran forward, and picked up what proved to be only a piece of tar paper which the wind had lodged against a tree and did somewhat resemble a black rabbit."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

THE NEWS, JOHN W. EASTMAN, PUBLISHER FEBRUARY 16, 1905
THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA

Hard Work
Not An Easy Matter To Make the Survey to Warren

"Anyone but a civil engineer would say that the building of a railroad from this city to Warren would be an easy undertaking, but Chief Engineer Hankerson is having considerable trouble in locating the line. While the country appears to be very level to the eye, such is not the case, and, to make the matter worse, it is discovered that most of the swampland is, in reality, the highest land passed through, so that, in some instances, cuts will have to be made where the average person would think that fills would be required. This means that the Soo will have to do considerable draining of the land and a well-known railroad man told the NEWS that the building of this road would be of more benefit to the farmers than all of the ditches they have ever constructed in that section."

Branching Out

"H. Fant, the local telephone man, on Tuesday of this week, started crew of men at work building a telephone line to Plummer. The line will be extended to Brooks also. Mr. Fant also announces that a number of rural lines will be run out from Plummer to Garnes, Equality and Lambert. Mr. Fant will soon have quite a telephone system. He now has a line to Roseau county and one extending out on the reservation."

Are We Growing?
What Will Be the Population of Thief River Falls in June?

"What will the population of Thief River Falls be when the census is taken next June? There is no doubt but that the population of the city has more than doubled since the census was taken in 1900. At that time we had 1,819 people here, and the general opinion seems to be that the census this summer will be between 3,500 and 4,000. There are people, however, who believe that we will be quite near the 5,000 mark and their opinion is based upon facts. They argue that a fair way to estimate the population is to take the number of children attending school and multiply it by five. This would make the population of Thief River Falls 4,500, as there are some 900 pupils who attend the city schools and a very large number of children of school age not in attendance. Anyway, a census will be taken next June and then we will know for sure."

Made Soo Line Dig Up Cash

"The Great Northern is now extending every possible courtesy to the new Soo line. A little incident which tends to prove this assertion happened at Ardoch, North Dakota last Thursday. Three cars of bridge timber from the coast to be used in erecting a trestle across the Red river east of that point arrived at Ardoch that morning and the Soo construction crew was about to unload it when they were stopped by the Great Northern local agent, who informed them that it could not be touched until the freight was paid. The foreman of the crew thereupon telegraphed headquarters concerning the state of affairs, and the Bank of Ardoch was instructed to pay the freight, which amounted to the snug little sum of $780. Let us love one another.

"The bridge across the Red river at Ardoch is the one to be used by the Soo extension west from this city next spring."

To Move Here
Queen City Bottling Works to Remove to This City

"The Queen City Bottling Works of Crookston has decided to remove their plant to this city. They have purchased a building in the rear of E. H. Kratka's lots and leased a piece of ground, with the privilege of purchasing the same. About the first of March they will remodel the building and remove the Crookston plant to this city.

"The change is made on account of the pure spring water which can be obtained here, and which cannot be obtained at Crookston, this being a very important factor in the manufacture of soft drinks. The water has been analyzed and found perfectly pure. The shipping facilities here are also as good as at Crookston and their plant will be made larger when it is removed to this city."

Petition Circulated
County Seat Removal Petition Has a Large Number of Signers

"Work of circulating the petition asking for the removal of the county seat from Red Lake Falls to Thief River Falls was commenced in all parts of Red Lake county last Saturday. A number of those who were out with petitions were in Thief River Falls to spend Sunday and they reported that they were meeting with a great deal of encouragement. Everyone who has signed the petition so far has been told not to sign the remonstrance and also told that if they intended to sign the remonstrance, Thief River Falls did not desire to have them on the petition. None but those known to be legal voters are allowed to sign.

"From the present indication, Thief River Falls' petition will have the signature of about 2,500 people when it is presented to the county auditor. Of course it will take some time to secure this number, but as we will have sixty days' time in which to circulate the petition, and the boys from the lumber camps will be here before the end of the time, it will not be a very hard task. Only about 1,300 names would be required upon the petition to give us the 60 percent, but in order to make allowance for the number that Red Lake Falls people will secure to sign the remonstrance, it has been decided not to file our petition until it has names of enough voters to insure against any possible action that Red Lake Falls may take. The people circulating the petition have all been instructed by the attorneys and everything is being done as carefully as if we expect to go to the supreme court upon every question.

"Just what action Red Lake Falls will take is unknown, but that does not bother Thief River Falls any. It makes no difference to us whether the election is held this year or the next. In fact, all that we desire is a vote upon the proposition and that we are determined to have."

Editorial
Facts That Cannot Be Denied:

"That we have one of the richest counties in the state of Minnesota: eleven banks, large sawmills, large flour mills, elegant residences, handsome business blocks and rich farming lands, none better in the state.

"That Red Lake county has been run by the Red Lake Falls gang since its organization nine years ago.

"That during the larger part of that time we have paid the highest rate of taxation of any county in the state of Minnesota.

"That the county is in a bankrupt condition today.

"That we have a bonded indebtedness of $56,339.13, also a number of unpaid county warrants, and that $14,000 has just recently been 'borrowed' from the ditch fund, and all we have to show for this is a jail, some office furniture and a bunch of grafters."

January initial claims for unemployment benefits edged up

Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development Commissioner Matt Kramer recently announced the number of initial claims for unemployment benefits.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, the number of initial claims filed was 24,567 – an increase of 450 or 1.9 percent over December. Compared to January 2004, the unadjusted level of claims was up only 65 or 0.2 percent.

Temporary plant closings in motor vehicle manufacturing and boat building primarily account for the slight rise in initial claims in January 2005. These closings caused manufacturing claims to jump 1,318 over January 2004. The majority of industries showed improvement in the number of initial claims filed.

"The number of new claims filed during 2004 was well below the number filed in 2003," said Kramer. "This is encouraging and shows that Minnesota's economy is still holding steady."

Women's History Month and Women's Hall of Fame inductions set for March 5

March is nationally recognized as Women's History Month. It will be kicked off again this year with the 2005 Northwest Minnesota Women's Hall of Fame induction ceremony and opening celebration at Bemidji State University (BSU).

The event will take place Saturday, March 5 at 11 a.m. The induction ceremony will honor Velma Oakland of Red Lake Falls and Olga Peterson of Clearbrook.

Velma Oakland

Oakland was born in Norman County and lives in Red Lake County, where she has helped to shape the political climate for many years. She has been a longtime DFL activist and is directly responsible for mentoring many women in Red Lake County in becoming involved in politics.

She was elected in 2000 as a Red Lake County commissioner; she has served as the chairperson for the past two years. Her other duties as a commissioner include serving on the Housing Committee and as the chairperson of the Social Services Board.

Oakland is also currently working with the Northwest Regional Development Commission and serves on the Red Lake River Corridor Board, the Red River Basin Board, and is the secretary of the Red Lake County DFL Board.

Oakland taught in Red Lake Falls elementary school for over 30 years. She received many awards from various organizations over the years but the greatest reward for her has always been the satisfaction of knowing her students learned what they were supposed to; in 1998, her third graders had the highest scores in the state in reading and math.

She has been involved in the Minnesota Education Association, holding every office in her local unit and acting as head negotiator. Oakland also served as the secretary/treasurer for the 22-school-district Northwest Unit. As governmental relations chairperson for eight years, she lobbied extensively at the state legislature for educational issues.

Oakland's numerous roles over the years have included Head Start director, girls volleyball coach, junior high girls basketball coach, and serving on the board of commissioners of the Housing and Redevelopment Authority. She was also instrumental in keeping a hazardous waste site from locating in Red Lake County.

Many women and girls in northwest Minnesota can trace their awareness and involvement in local politics to Oakland's support and encouragement. She has served as a true role model in the city of Red Lake Falls.

Oakland has one son who farms west of St. Hilaire.

Olga Peterson

Olga Anna Hulteen Peterson is a retired elementary teacher and principal, community leader and visionary, who remains active at 90 years of age. She is well known as a lifelong Clearwater County resident.

Peterson graduated from Bemidji State University with a teaching certificate in 1932. She taught for one year in Mineral Center and then returned to teaching in Clearwater County, where she spent most of her 36 years in the profession. She served as elementary principal in Clearbrook, retiring in 1979.

Peterson has served on the board of the Senior Citizens of Clearbrook-Leonard, was a 4-H leader and adviser and active in a homemakers group. She also served on the advisory board for community education for the Clearbrook School District and on the advisory board for the Good Samaritan Center. She had always been active in her church as a Sunday school teacher and volunteer.

Peterson has been the recipient of numerous awards as a result of her dedication to her community and her profession. In 1984, she was named First Lady of the Year, sponsored by Gamma Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. She has been a member of the Delta Kappa Gamma Sorority for 30 years. She received the Woman of Achievement Award in 1987 and represented their group at the state convention. That same year, she was recognized as Outstanding Senior Citizen of Clearwater County. Peterson was recognized twice by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources for her 45 years as the Holst Township fire warden.

In 2002, Peterson assisted in planning and organizing the Northern Exposure for Lifelong Learning, which offers a variety of programs presented by local experts. She helped lead the organization with her vision and her skills, making it possible to provide these programs to rural northern Minnesota.

Peterson survives her husband, Don. She has three children, nine grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Oakland and Peterson are the seventh group of women inducted into the Hall.

About the Hall of Fame

Now in its seventh year, the Hall of Fame is a collaborative project sponsored by BSU and the Northwest Minnesota Women's Fund, a component of the Northwest Minnesota Foundation. The Hall of Fame provides permanent recognition for women of northwestern Minnesota who have made significant contributions to art, athletics, business, government, philanthropy, humanities, science or education.

"The women in the Hall of Fame are exemplary role models who have made a positive and significant impact on the social fabric of northwest Minnesota," said Dr. Patricia Rosenbrock, director of women's studies and the Women's Center at BSU. "Each has left a legacy that will endure far into the future."

An original oil portrait of each honoree has been commissioned and will be unveiled at the induction ceremony. Following the event, the portraits and a record of each woman's contributions will be added to the Hall of Fame, which hangs on the fourth floor in the A.C. Clark Library at BSU. A traveling display is available, on loan, to interested groups throughout the region.

Hall of Fame nominations are solicited annually from throughout the region. Each inductee's achievements must be of lasting value to society, significant groups within the region or to the progress and freedom of women.

Opening ceremony

The induction is part of the opening ceremony for the observance of Women's History Month at BSU, with this year's theme being "Uppity Women Change America." The luncheon event begins at 11 a.m. Saturday, March 5 in the Beaux Arts Ballroom on the campus in Bemidji. The induction ceremony will follow lunch, and the event will end at 2 p.m.

The day will feature a historical program from Dr. Selene Phillips, assistant professor at the University of Louisville, who will present "Sacagawea: Young Mother with the Corps of Discovery."

Phillips, a Wabigonikewikwe and member of the Lac du Flambeau Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, is a graduate of Purdue University. Her area of study focuses on American Indian and tribal newspapers as well as First Amendment issues and communication law.

The deadline to purchase tickets for the opening celebration and Hall of Fame induction is Wednesday, March 2. Tickets are $20 each, including lunch, and are available by calling Pam at the BSU Cashier's Office during business hours at 1-800-475-2001, ext. 3993.

DED infestations decrease again

City Forester Myles Olson has released his annual report for 2003.

Olson reported that 27 Dutch Elm Disease (DED) trees were removed last year. Of those trees, 10 were located on private property and 17 were located on city-owned property. In 2003, 61 trees – 30 on city property and 31 on private properties – were removed due to DED.

Olson noted that the Forestry Department was encouraged to see the number of DED infestations decrease for the second consecutive year. In his report, he wrote that many parts of the state saw 400 to 500 percent increases in DED infestations in 2004.

Tree planting/removal

Sixty trees were planted on city property in 2004. Of those trees, 12 container-grown trees were planted in the spring. Forty-eight container-grown trees were planted last fall. Over half of those trees were planted on newly developed city property around Ralph Engelstad Arena (REA).

Olson noted he used a different ash species, American linden, amur chokecherry and flowering crab in his plantings.

Besides the removal of DED trees, Olson wrote that an additional 37 trees were removed from city property for other reasons.

In his report, Olson wrote that the department's work could not have been accomplished without the help of Street Department personnel. Tree trimming and removal were joint efforts using personnel and equipment from both departments.

Tree pruning

Tree trimming has been completed on an as-needed basis, Olson wrote in his report. In the winter 2004, some trees were trimmed along alleyways and streets. He noted that trimming will continue as needed with an effort to shape and prune some of the younger trees along streets and boulevards.

Controlling pests

Olson continued that most of the herbicide spraying was done in the fall. Approximately 400 acres of

NCTC gets $372,223 grant for workforce development

Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) has been awarded a $372,223 grant for training through a partnership with the Occupational Development Center, Gov. Tim Pawlenty announced. The grant, along with private sector funds, will enable nearly 300 workers to be trained for skilled manufacturing positions already available in this area.

"Minnesota's workers need to be the best educated and best trained to compete in the global economy," said Pawlenty. "The grants we are announcing today will help move unemployed and lower-income Minnesotans into jobs that will better support their families. The end result will be skilled and competitive workers and businesses."

The ODC is working to improve the area's workforce for more skilled and more highly paid positions, particularly for the introduction of metal container production at Custom Products Inc. Through a training partnership with NCTC, training will be directed at improving employee skills, developing and improving project efficiencies, management training, and increasing the overall marketability of 288 local employees.

This grant will help NCTC continue to develop and refine its curriculum for its manufacturing technology associates in science degree.

"This grant will not only benefit nearly 300 individuals directly; it will help develop a program that will benefit others in the area to gain highly competitive and skilled positions," said Kirsten Melby, director of workforce development at NCTC.

The grant is being made possible

School District 564 Board of Ed. discusses two separate proposals

by David Hill
Editor

Books and robot technology were on the agenda for School District 564 Board of Education Monday, Feb. 14.

Eric Melcher, industrial arts teacher at Lincoln High School, presented a second and more detailed report on adding curriculum on automated technology at Lincoln High School. If accepted by the Board of Education, Melcher said he would be eventually teaching what amounts to basic computer language for an elaborate garage door opener. The same technology could be applied to other fields that involve robots (automated technology).

It's a wide open field of opportunity for students interested in such career choices. Melcher said demand for employees with those specific skills is very high.

The University of Minnesota is developing automated technology curriculum for a four-year degree, which has yet to be named. Melcher said Bemidji State University is also looking at automated technology. The program, however, got its start at Alexandria Technical College.

Melcher is proposing that School

TRF residents attend Bush's inauguration

Shelly and Scott Stone attend inauguration and take part in protest

Two Thief River Falls residents were among the people protesting abortion during the annual March for Life held Jan. 20 in Washington, D.C. Shelly and Scott Stone also attended President George W. Bush's Inauguration. (Submitted photo)

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

It wasn't the main reason they went to Washington, D.C., but two Thief River Falls residents recently attended President George W. Bush's inauguration.

Shelly and Scott Stone attended the inauguration, but the focus of their trip was the March for Life. Scott and Shelly joined anti-abortion advocates in the annual March for Life held Jan. 20 in Washington, D.C.

"It's just something I've always wanted to do," Shelly said.

Her son, Scott, decided to participate in the protest as well. Scott, who shares his mother's beliefs about abortion, wears a blue pro-life wrist band.

The Stones traveled with a group of teenagers and others from the Roman Catholic Diocese of Fargo, N.D., to Washington, D.C.

Their group wasn't the only one making the trip. About 300,000 people participated in the annual protest in 2004, said Shelly, who noted organizers have stated more people took part in it this year.

Scott and Shelly wanted to meet other people who shared their pro-life beliefs. "We just wanted to see what the rest of the country was doing," said Shelly, director of the Thief River Falls LifeCare Center that provides alternatives to abortion.

Both Shelly and Scott noted many residents are silent when it comes to their views about abortion. "The majority of my friends are pro-life, but they never talk about it," said Scott, a Lincoln High School senior, who noted his friends would probably discuss their beliefs in an ethics or social studies class.

Besides participating in the march, Scott and Shelly visited the Holocaust Museum as well as monuments in Washington, D.C. "They all had a different meaning this time," said Shelly, who noted she was reminded of the sanctity of life while visiting those sites.

This was the first year they were involved in the annual protest of the Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion. Shelly wants to participate in the march every year, she said. She was amazed by the number of teenagers and college students protesting, especially since they have only known a time when abortion was legal.

Since he will be starting college soon, Scott said that he would attend the protest again if he were able to participate.

In addition to the protest, Scott and Shelly attended Bush's inauguration Jan. 20. "The inauguration was kind of an added benefit," said Shelly. "Because of the inauguration, the march was really special this year."

They received tickets for the inauguration through Sen. Kent Conrad's office, and they waited in line to see the inauguration. People were walking away because the lines were so long, Scott said.

Yet, his mom said that she prayed and knew they would be able to attend the inauguration.

As soon as they were allowed entry, people were running from the entrance gate in order to get as close as possible to hear Bush speak, Scott said.

Scott and Shelly were able to see the president, but Shelly noted they were a significant distance from him. They were able to hear him on loud speakers situated nearby.

"You kind of felt you were right there," Shelly said.

During that first inauguration since the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, Scott and Shelly also noticed some of the security around Washington, D.C. Those who attended the inauguration were patted down for security reasons, Scott said.

Dayton supports efforts to increase heating assistance

U.S. Senator Mark Dayton, participating in a press conference with a bipartisan group of his Senate colleagues, Feb. 1, 2005, urged President Bush to include $3.4 billion in his FY2006 budget request to help thousands of Minnesotans pay their heating bills next year. So far this winter, Low-Income Home Energency Assistance Program (LIHEAP) funding has helped over [illegible] of Minnesota's families and elderly afford their energy bills.

Last night, responding to pressure from Dayton and 49 other senators, the president released an additional $100 million of the $300 million that Congress appropriated last [illegible] for emergency LIHEAP funding. This brings the total amount of emergency LIHEAP funding released this winter to $200 million.

"I am thankful that the administration released $100 million in emergency funds last night, and I will continue to push for the release of the remaining $100 [illegible]," said Dayton. "Tragically, every year we have to go through this – fighting for heating assistance so that our citizens are able to heat their homes. That shouldn't be necessary. This money is desperately needed in communities across Minnesota, such as Embarrass where the temperature recently plunged to a record -54 degrees. Temperatures tend to fall well below zero across Minnesota during the winter, and it is cruel and inhumane not to provide these funds to help families keep their heat turned on.

"I call on the Bush administration to provide $3.4 billion up front for LIHEAP in the FY 2006 budget. The role of government is to extend a helping hand in times of urgent need."

LIHEAP, a federal block grant program that provides states with annual funding to operate home energy assistance programs for low-income households, has provided Minnesota with $77.8 million so far this winter.

Pennington County Master Gardeners announce perennial plant of the year

by Beattie Mickelson

Pennington County Master Gardeners have announced that this year's perennial plant of the year is Helleborus x hybridus (Lenten Rose). It is one that I knew nothing about, so I did some research. First, I looked through my perennial books. The only one that I could find it listed in was a book on shady plants.

It was listed in the section for plants that need a moist location and shade. There are two clues to its habitat. The plant is "….an evergreen, late winter and early spring flowering plant. It is considered drought tolerant, relatively deer resistant, cold tolerant and almost pest free." It is a native of the moist, rocky woods of Eastern Europe. Some of its outstanding features are "The shy chalices of the Lenten Rose Snode are in open clusters from one foot-stalks in late winter and early spring.

The flowers, made up of showy sepals, have substantial texture and last for a month or more. As they age, they turn green. The rich, leathery, green leaves are deeply divided into elongated oval lobes. Long after the flowers have faded, the leaves grace the garden, standing through summer heat and winter show." (Quotes are from The Shady Border by Brooklyn Botanical Garden.)

This plant grows a lot like the bergenia. The flowers come out of the center of the plant before the new foliage appears. The plants have a fibrous rooted crown that seldom needs dividing. The plants will self seed. They are sensitive to root damage, so when planting or dividing, do not let the root ball dry out. Some say they are hardy in zone 3-9, others say in zones 6-8. Some of the different cultivars are hardier in our area. All sources say plant in shade, in rich, moist, well-drained soil. They can be used as ground cover around trees and shrubs, or in garden in combination with ferns, bulbs and wildflowers.

The flowers are two inches across, cup shaped and in colors of various shades of purple and pink to near-black, white, green and an occasional yellow. The foliage is rigid and serrated, and the flower stems are very sturdy.

Hellebores are considered an underused and undervalued perennial, but as the Northern Gardener magazine says, "Hellebores do have the reputation of testing even the most patient gardeners." If you like a challenge, this might be the plant to try. I did find them listed in a number of garden catalogs.

Malmanger named a dean for Global Language Villages

Marilyn Malmanger of Gully has been named a dean for Global Language Villages in July 2005. Malmanger served as a dean for Global Language Villages in Haining, China, last summer. She has been a dean with the Global Language Villages since 2001 and had participated in the program several years prior to that. Global Language Villages is an English language immersion experience operated by the renowned Concordia Language Villages of Concordia College in Moorhead.

The three-week experience included four days as a tourist in Shanghai with first rate tours and accommodations. The remainder of Malmanger's time was spent in Haining, which has a rich cultural heritage and warmly welcomed the volunteer teachers.

Haining was one of the nine Chinese cities where 12 Global Language Villages were conducted. A dean leads each language village with 10 to 15 visiting teachers and student assistants. A Chinese teacher is paired with each visiting teacher and helps translate. Approximately [illegible] Chinese students between the ages of 7 and 18 attend each village. In the language village, students speak English and participate in a host of activities experiencing American culture.

Global Language Villages began in 1997 with one village and 80 students in Ningbo China, founded by Dr. Gerhard Haukebo, who also founded Concordia Language Villages over 40 years ago. This year, approximately 200 participants from the United States and Canada will travel to China to teach approximately 2,800 students at 14 different language villages.

There are openings for people interested in a teaching experience in China. Requirements include being a native speaker of English, an interest in cultural sharing and a desire to work with youth. A teaching certificate is not required, nor is knowledge of the Chinese language.

For more information, contact Global Language Villages at glv@cord.edu or 1-800-222-4750 ext. 6. More information is available on the Global Language Villages web site: www.ConcordiaLanguageVillages.org.

Local cadet receives the CAP Mitchell Award

Amanda LeTourneau, daughter of Sheila LeTourneau, received the Civil Air Patrol General Billy Mitchell Award. A special awards presentation ceremony was conducted on Thursday, February 10 at the NCTC Airport Campus. The award was presented to Cadet LeTourneau by Major David Odette, commander, Group One Minnesota Wing and Captain Paulette Odette, deputy commander of cadets for the Northwest Minnesota Composite Squadron.

The Mitchell Award is the second milestone award in the Civil Air Patrol Cadet Program and identifies the completion of eight of the 16 achievement steps for a cadet's advancement from cadet basic to cadet colonel. To receive the award, a cadet must not only complete each of the eight leadership and aerospace education achievements, but must also pass an arduous 100 question test.

Once the Civil Air Patrol National Headquarters at Maxwell Air Force Base verifies and issues the Mitchell Award, the cadet also receives a promotion to second lieutenant and becomes a cadet officer. Becoming a cadet officer provides the cadet with a number of privileges and allows the cadet to apply to regional and national Civil Air Patrol training schools as well as for a number of college scholarships. The Mitchell Award also is recognized by the Air Force Academy, Air Force ROTC and qualifies the cadet to be promoted to the grade of E-3, Airman First Class, upon enlistment into the Air Force.

Cadet Lt. LeTourneau also received the Air Force Association Citation and Medal for her outstanding achievement in leadership and academic standing in the Civil Air Patrol. This citation recognizes LeTourneau for not only her leadership role in the local squadron, but also for her leadership in serving at a number of state level positions.

PARENTING TIPS

Increase Your Self-Confidence as a Parent

One way to help improve self-confidence as a parent is to evaluate realistically the job you are doing. Here are three steps to help improve self-confidence:

•First, don't expect yourself to be perfect. The picture of a "perfect parent," one who is always kind, patient, loving, intelligent, in control, and so on, is impossible to fulfill. And it may not be so perfect in the first place. The important thing is not perfect behavior at all times, but growth toward doing things better more often.

•A second factor in realistic self-evaluation is to compare your behavior as a parent to your own past performance rather than to some other person's parenting. Instead of feeling like a failure because you did not spend three hours a night working or playing with your children like the parent next door, praise yourself for spending a half hour more with them this week than you did last week.

•Finally, be specific about your self-evaluation. If you try a new method of discipline for a week and it fails miserably, do not simply decide that you are a failure as a parent. Tell yourself that you did a good job of sticking to the new plan or that you are a pretty good parent for caring enough to try something new, even though it did not work. Make your failure easier to accept by praising your success. Then move on.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Let your child know that you make mistakes, too. If you lose your patience with your child, admit it. Then tell him/her that you are sorry. (That way you are modeling how they should act if they do the same).

Farm Management Minute

Analyzing your farm business

by Dennis Olsen
Farm Business Management

At this time of the year, farm operators are busy trying to complete paperwork for their 2004 income taxes. Some are also trying to assemble information needed by their lenders for the upcoming operating loan. Hopefully, at this time, farm operators are spending some time in analyzing their businesses for the past year.

This has been a mixed year in production–yields and prices for farm crop commodities. Farm operators may be wondering if their business has improved or if the business is falling behind financially. By just using Schedule F information for taxes, the farmer may not get an accurate idea of the progress the business has made the past year.

Two key objectives in analyzing the farm business are to determine how profitable the business was and how much net worth increase or decrease has occurred this past year. The starting point for analyzing the farm business for net worth gain and profitability is developing a balance sheet and an accrual income statement.

The balance sheet is used to determine the farmer's net worth or equity. It's a listing of the farm operator's assets and liabilities. These assets and liabilities are divided into current, intermediate and long-term sections on the balance sheet. These divisions are helpful in determining the debt structure or debt to asset ratios of the business.

Current assets can be compared to current liabilities of the business. Intermediate and long-term assets can be compared to intermediate and long term liabilities. Total assets can be compared to total liabilities. All of these comparisons can produce ratios and net worth amounts that will give insight into the farm business. By simply listing farm and non farm assets on one side of a sheet of paper and listing all the liabilities on the other side and then adding up each side and subtracting the liabilities from assets, a farmer would be calculating his/her net worth. Most balance sheets are usually completed on the same date every year, so a comparison of net worth from one year to the next can be examined to see if the business has experienced an increase or decrease in net worth.

An income statement is a listing of incomes and expenses for the business year. Starting with cash farm income and cash farm expenses, total net cash farm income can be calculated. This is the information that is contained in the Schedule F tax form. It tells the farm operator about how much was sold and what was spent for the year, but it does not give a good picture of the true profitability of the business for the year.

To get a better picture of profitability, one needs to take into account inventory changes that have taken place in the business during the year. Farm inventory changes would include changes from the beginning of the year to the end of the year in crops and feed supplies, market livestock, accounts receivables, prepaid expenses and supplies, account payables and accrued interest. These inventory changes would be added to net cash farm income to obtain net operating profit.

Net farm operating profit may differ significantly from net cash farm income. Depreciation on machinery and buildings needs to be subtracted off the net farm operating profit. Also, any breeding livestock and other farm capital asset changes from the beginning of the year to the end of the year need to be subtracted from net farm operating profit. The result would be the net farm income or net farm profit for the business for the year. This number could be very different from the net cash farm income amount. By taking inventory changes and depreciation into account, the income statement becomes an accrual income statement which gives a more accurate profitability number.

The accrual income statement and balance sheet are two key financial statements that can help analyze the farm business. With these statements, many important financial ratios and profitability numbers can be calculated to examine the financial direction of the farm business.

Nominations sought for Distinguished Artist Award

The McKnight Foundation invites nominations for its eighth Distinguished Artist Award in recognition of individual artists with enduring and exceptional careers. Nominations for the $40,000 award must be postmarked by March 31.

The award honors one artist each year for having made a substantial impact on the arts in Minnesota over a lifetime. A panel representing a variety of artistic disciplines considers first and foremost the quality of each nominated artist's work. Other considerations include the artist's commitment to his or her field, and ways the artist has enriched life for audiences and the community.

"The Distinguished Artist Award acknowledges artists who deserve honors both for their artistic work and for opportunities they have created for others," said Erika L. Binger, McKnight's board chairperson. "Although each could have pursued their work elsewhere, they stayed in Minnesota – and by staying, they have left a lasting impression on our state's cultural richness and vitality."

After reviewing the nominations, the panel formally recommends one candidate to McKnight's board of directors. Artists in all disciplines are eligible for nomination but may not apply for the award themselves. Although nominees must have worked in Minnesota much of their lives, they need not reside in Minnesota when they are nominated. The panel will not consider those from Minnesota who achieved most of their success elsewhere. No posthumous awards will be made. The recipient will be announced mid-year.

Nominations are retained for three years. Candidates who do not receive the award the year they are nominated will be reconsidered among nominees the following two years. It is not necessary to send another letter about someone whose nomination is still active although career updates are welcome.

Previous awardees are:

- 2004 – Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor and composer
- 2003 – Mike Lynch, visual artist
- 2002 – Emilie Buchwald, writer, editor and publisher
- 2001 – Dale Warland, choral music conductor and composer
- 2000 – Robert Bly, poet, translator, writer and editor
- 1999 – Warren McKenzie, potter
- 1998 – Dominick Argento, composer

Send nominations in writing (no fax or e-mail submissions) to McKnight Distinguished Artist Award, 710 S. Second St., Suite 400, Minneapolis, MN 55401.

Resumes and additional letters of support are welcome. For more information about the award, visit the ARTS section of the McKnight Web site (www.mcknight.org) or call the foundation at (612) 333-4220.

...Festive February

Even though February is actually the shortest month in the year, I have always felt it was the longest. It just seems to drag on and on, and spring seems so far away. In February, we have snow and blizzards and cold, cold weather that feels like it will never end - spring will never come.

Oh, sure, we have some holidays in February that help relieve the pain. We have the sticky sweet, chocolate holiday of Valentine's Day (I think that one was made up just to make February less miserable), when we can eat those sweet treats like little piggies and then despise ourselves the rest of the month because we have zits and fat thighs.

We used to have two other holidays, too, in which we celebrated the birthdays of President Lincoln and President Washington and many of us had those days off of work or school. Of course, the powers-that-be decided that two holidays so close together were just too much fun, so they combined the two and we now celebrate "Presidents Day" as one holiday. It's still a nice break in the month.

When I was in school, you can, of course, imagine that February was a month pretty much made for crafts. Since we didn't have all of the fancy craft things that are available now, it was the month of scissors, colored paper, crayons, paint and paste.

For Valentine's Day, we made those doggoned shoeboxes. Remember them? We labored over those boxes, covering them with pretty paper, then colored, painted and decorating them with hearts and lace and ribbon and buttons and anything else we could find at home. They were works of art, I can tell you. The boxes had slits in the top and our names on the side so that classmates could slip our valentines right in.

On Valentine's Day, shaking and quaking, we opened the boxes. Some of the shaking and quaking was because we were afraid we didn't have any valentines in our boxes, we had no friends, nobody would give us a valentine. And then, once we realized there were valentines in there, we spent some more time shaking and quaking because we were afraid that a "special someone" hadn't put a valentine in there. Ah, what a time of it we had in those days!

Of course, you can imagine that part of the shaking and quaking was from the sugar high we were on after partaking of the lovely treats sent to school by our mothers, too. No worry about "sugar buzz" in those golden olden days! You can very well imagine how those moms (very few of whom worked outside the home) outdid themselves with sugary goodies, cupcakes, cookies, candies, all covered with sweet frosting and plenty of heart-shaped candies made of pure sugar. Ah, yes, I can remember those treats now.

We celebrated our presidents by hearing tales of their lives, and the tales became so entwined in my head that I doubt that I can separate them to this day. Both were wonderful men - but so much alike, despite the fact that one was raised in affluence and the other in poverty and they lived in different centuries.

Abe was "honest" and George never told a lie because he confessed to his father that he cut down the cherry tree with a hatchet. But Abe used a hatchet to make a log cabin home (out of cherry trees?), and both wore funny hats, albeit, different types, one long and tall and one round and pointed in three places. George had teeth trouble, Abe had a beard and a wart (was it on his nose?). Both presidents were involved with very important wars, Abe with the Civil War and George with the Revolutionary War.

We used our scissors, paper and paste to celebrate those presidents for all we were worth. Silhouettes of them cut from black paper decorated every classroom. We made cherry trees and hatchets to commemorate George's honesty, and rail fences and log houses for Abe. We made stovepipe hats and tri-corner hats, drew George standing in the bow of a boat, leading his men across the Potomac, and Abe chopping wood and reading books by the light of the fire. It seems to me we didn't ever study any other president than those two. They were the stars of the show. They were our history lessons for the entire month of February.

Speaking of February, guess what! It's almost gone already. Yay!

Mexico is a richly exotic world

When you travel to a foreign country, you never learn what you expect to learn. I had ideas about what Mexico would be like, but an actual trip there was full of surprises.

Our first day in Mexico City was warm, even humid. I was glad that I had packed a pair of shorts, and I planned to wear them the next day.

That night, I was paging through a guidebook to Mexico City designed for foreigners. It discussed food, culture, travel, gift buying, currency exchange, all of the usual tourist topics.

Then, there was a paragraph entitled "Clothing." A few lines down was a short sentence, italicized for emphasis, which said, "Shorts are not worn in Mexico."

So, I didn't wear shorts the next day, which was plenty warm, and I noticed that absolutely nobody out of the thousands of people I saw that day, save for a couple of toddlers, wore shorts.

Mexicans are quite formal and polite. Waiters in restaurants dress immaculately and carefully observe decorum. Bell boys and hotel staff treated our group like royalty.

Musicians who performed for us were dressed in their best suits. Our guides, familiar with Mexican propriety and customs, addressed the distinguished performers as "maestro." When we applauded, some bowed deeply in an Old World style.

Proper, mannerly, and gentle. We spent the better part of 10 days on crowded streets and teeming public squares, and never once did I hear an adult voice raised at a child in anger. For their part, the children I saw in Mexico seemed quiet, calm and respectful.

But even when a toddler threw a tantrum, there was none of the war between parent and child that you so often witness in malls and restaurants in this country. Instead, the smiling parents would merely contain the kid until he settled down.

And where in this country would you see an entire family, including male teenagers, walking arm in arm down the street? Such a scene was common on Mexican sidewalks.

As we lounged in an art museum courtyard, I watched one three-generation family enjoying the Sunday sun. Grandma sat regally in a wheelchair, attended by her 12-year-old grandson who, without prompting, bent down to plant a kiss on grandma's cheek.

Grandma didn't blink or even notice. The boy didn't act abashed. Such a spontaneous little peck, cause for annoying "oh, for sweet" comments here, was expected behavior in Mexico.

Family has a different meaning in Latino culture, it seems. On the public squares on a Saturday night, I saw fathers not much older than 18, dressed in baggy jeans which would seem like gangsta wear here, pushing strollers, proud as punch as their young brood tumbled over them.

Mexicans of all ages have a sense of their history as well. Mexico City's many excellent museums bustled with families and schoolchildren.

But the Mexicans' interest in their history wasn't confined to the museums.

The lively main square in the shadow of the cathedral in Mexico City pounded with rock music on the Saturday night we were there. A crowd of thousands had gathered for a fundraiser for tsunami victims in Asia. It was useless to try to sleep in our hotel nearby, so I wandered outside.

The nationally popular rock groups - every one with an accordionist - were interesting enough. But I was more intrigued by a troupe of dancers and drummers off to the side performing a complex Aztec dance. The dances were wild and primal. In the middle of the dance circle was a fire, which emitted puffs of incense smoke that smelled like pine needles. Young spectators seemed to float in and out of the dance circle as they saw fit. The patterns were complex but unified - sort of like a native line dance.

The pounding of the drums stopped at midnight. I fell asleep, but was soon jolted awake by amplified shouting. I learned later that a socialist farmer's party from the countryside was holding a rally. Speakers ranted on bullhorns and the crowd chanted slogans at six-fifteen in the morning.

From Aztec dances to socialist rallies, I hadn't imagined that less than four hours of flight time from home I could find myself in such a richly exotic world.

Minnesota Turkey Council election results announced

Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) Commissioner Gene Hugoson has released the results of the Minnesota Turkey Research and Promotion Council elections.

The new Turkey Research and Promotion Council members are:

- Region 2 – Kim Gorans, Willmar
- Breeder At-Large – Ray Whittaker, Perham

Council members are turkey industry representatives who serve as leaders and advocates for the Minnesota turkey industry and work to improve its profitability and viability. The council meets about eight times per year, and board members serve three-year terms.

Hugoson noted the elections were a good way for producers to be active in turkey promotion.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: I receive Social Security disability and understand that specific rules apply to how much I can work and earn. A friend told me that once I'm age 65 these no longer apply. Correct?

A: No, that is not correct. People receive Social Security disability benefits because of health problems severe enough to prevent them from doing a level of work termed substantial gainful activity, the dollar measure of which changes yearly. Disabled beneficiaries have a wide variety of work and other incentives to help them return to work. These incentives can be found on the SSA Web site at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/work/ResourcesToolkit/workincentives.html. As you mentioned, the disabled are not included in annual earnings test levels that concern people on other parts of Social Security. This changes when the person on disability reaches their full retirement age (FRA). Full retirement age (FRA) is the SSA term for how old a person must be to receive retirement without age based reductions. Formerly age 65, full retirement age is slowly moving up to age 67 based on year of birth. For people born in 1943-1954, FRA is age 66. FRA was age 65 plus 10 months for those born in 1942. Once reaching your particular full retirement age (FRA), the amount of your earnings will no longer impact your SSA benefits even though those benefits were originally paid because of your disability. To sum up, you will continue to have disability related earning level restrictions until you reach your full retirement age. To learn your own FRA, see the http://www.socialsecurity.gov/retirechartred.htm on the SSA Web site. For information about disability work incentives see the Web site above or contact your local SSA office.

Q: Is there a quick way to determine how much my minor daughter will get from Social Security if I die?

A: Yes. If you are over age 25, and not receiving SSA checks, look on the Social Security Statement. The Statement is generally received about 2 months or so before your birthday. On the second page will be a section with estimated survivor benefits based on your current earnings. You can also request a Statement online at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/mystatement/ or from any SSA office.

Q: I receive Social Security disability benefits and will be married later this year. Will marriage change my benefits?

A: Here is a long answer to a simple question. It really depends on the specific type of your disability benefits and other factors. Marriage will not have any impact on benefits if you are receiving Social Security disability based on your own work record. However, if you receive a SSA disabled widow/widower benefit through the record of a deceased spouse, remarriage before age 50 will end benefits. If you receive disabled child benefits through the record of a parent your marriage will usually end benefits although exceptions do exist. Marriage of someone receiving the need based Supplemental Security Income (SSI) virtually always leads to at least a change in benefit amount but could end benefits. People receiving Social Security or SSI benefits are required to report any changes in marital status. To avoid a nasty surprise consider contacting a SSA office before the marriage, especially if unsure of what type benefits you received.

Q: Concerning the annual earnings test, does the amount my employer pay toward my health insurance count against the limit?.

A: No. Annual earnings test limits involve only the amount of your gross wages or net self-employment. The 2005 earnings test limit for someone younger than their "full retirement age" is $12,000. In other words, if you receive Social Security retirement benefits and also are employed, calendar year earnings to this amount will not impact the SSA benefits payable to you for 2005. For earnings over the $12,000 amount, one dollar in benefits will be withheld for every two dollars earned above the limit.

Full retirement age (FRA) is the SSA term for how old a person must be to receive retirement without age based reductions and is gradually increasing from age 65 to 67. FRA for a person born in 1942 is 65 and 10 months. For a person born in 1943 it is age 66. Planning to retire in 2005? A special annual earnings test based on earnings in individual months rather than the calendar year is used for the first year of retirement. This special earnings test lets people receive SSA benefits after retirement even if their earnings for the calendar year are expected to be high.

Waters of the Dancing Sky Wildlife Festival May 26-28

Parents can help teach their children about the wildlife of the northwest Minnesota area at the third annual Waters of the Dancing Sky Wildlife Festival.

Family Fun is the focus for this year's festival, held May 26-28, at participating Lake of the Woods area resorts. Festival workshops, field trips, and seminars will offer children and adults an inside look at some of the area's intriguing wildlife.

A "Hoot and Howl," will be offered by the Minnesota DNR biologists at Norris Camp. Those attending will learn how to communicate with local owls and resident wolf packs. An authentic, trapper-style dinner will be available beforehand to help participants build stamina for the program. Norris Camp houses the Historic CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) camp, however, today the site is the headquarters for the Red Lake Wildlife Management Area. Discussions and displays about the moose and deer research they do will also be available.

Timber Mill Community Park in Baudette will be the site for another DNR program, Project Flying Wild. This program, which is free to the public, will turn participants into expert birders, with hands on activities for kids of all ages.

The festival keynote speaker is Lee Johnson, one of the top birders in North America, who has a life list of 770 species. Johnson operates the Sand Bluff Bird Observatory in northern Illinois. His program is all about bird banding and will include stunning photos of the birds he has banded. The public will be able to examine and use the banding equipment utilized at Johnson's banding station.

Renowned photographer, Bill Morgenstern, will offer a field seminar that will let participants capture and identify some of the many dragonflies of the Rainy River Basin area. Morgenstern, who is also the president of the Rainy River Field Naturalists, will share his exquisite images which appear in a number of publications and on Web sites.

Morgenstern will also lead a field trip into the Red Lake Wildlife Management Area to find Connecticut warblers.

Tom Heinrich, a local photographer whose work is displayed in the Tourism Office and on our new website, focuses his camera on close-ups of wildflowers, fungi and tiny creatures that most would never notice.

His workshop introduces the essentials of macro-photography. His workshop will teach the essentials of lighting and composition, as well as getting to know your subjects: Participants are warned in advance before taking this workshop…more than one previous participant has gone on to become a professional wildlife photographer.

Hard-core birders will also want to attend the Festival for some of the superb field trips. Several boat trips will take in shorebirds along Pine Island. A Warbler Walk at Zippel Bay State Park, will also examine the unique geology of the area. The Warbler Walk will be led by Lee Grim, research biologist from Voyageur's National Park.

Field researcher, Jenny Moorman, will lead a trip to the Northwest Angle where participants will be able to tour the reconstructed Ft. St. Charles on Magnusons Island. The group will then board a boat to see the Four Blocks islands, which are some of the best colonial nesting sites on Lake of the Woods.

Make sure to call Lake of the Woods Tourism at 1-800-382-3474 to register for the Waters of the Dancing Sky Wildlife Festival and receive a free area checklist.

Coleman promotes legislation to fight methampetamine use

At a recent press conference, Senator Norm Coleman unveiled the Combat Meth Act of 2005 along with the lead author of the bill, Senator Jim Talent of Missouri. This new legislation targets the growing threat from the production and usage of methamphetamines, including the limitation of access to a key ingredient of meth, pseudoephedrine. The Meth Act will place some conventional cough and cold medicines containing this key meth ingredient behind pharmacy counters in order to control their distribution and take access away from illegal drug makers.

Ultimately what this means for the consumer is that products containing pseudoephedrine must be kept behind a pharmacy counter and sold only by a pharmacist or pharmacy technician. Buyers can purchase up to 9 grams of the product (roughly 2-3 packages) in a 30 day period and must present proof of identification and sign for the medicine upon purchase. They do not need a prescription. In order to ensure that rural communities that don't have access to pharmacies are not negatively impacted, the legislation does provide for the Director of the Federal Drug Administration to authorize persons other than pharmacists or pharmacy technicians to sell the medicines so long as they follow the same procedure. In the Minnesota State Legislature Sen. Julie Rosen, (R-Fairmont) and Rep. Jeff Johnson (R-Plymouth) recently introduced legislation that places similar restrictions on products containing pseudoephedrine.

"There is no doubt that meth is taking its toll in Minnesota," said Coleman. "And we need to take action now before the problem grows any larger. The Combat Meth Act is a good start to fighting the war on drugs. It will provide new resources and tools to states, local law enforcement, and prosecutors to combat the production and distribution of meth, restrict the sale of ingredients necessary to make meth, increase community awareness, and provide services to those affected by the spread of meth."

Meth has grown to be the second greatest drug threat in the state of Minnesota, and its availability and production are both rapidly expanding throughout the state. Minnesota officials reported 475 meth labs and meth-related events to the Minnesota Department of Health during 2003. And in 2002, meth accounted for 32 percent of total drug offenses in Minnesota.

Our state's meth epidemic is devastating Minnesota's rural communities. Aitkin County, for example, had to spend $300,000 in 2003 on foster care for children endangered by meth. Carver County also reported in March 2004 that 90 percent of children in foster care were there because of meth use in their respective families.

Coleman has heard firsthand the destruction methamphetamine use is doing to Minnesota. He held summits on this serious subject in Fergus Falls and St. Paul in 2004, and last December in Austin.

While in Austin, Coleman heard from members the city's Meth Task Force. At this meeting, Coleman praised Austin for being the first city in the state to pass ordinances that limit the number of pseudoephedrines a person can purchase at one time and require such drugs to be placed behind a checkout counter or inside a locked display case. Coleman also heard from Dori Sutter, who talked about how her 17-year-old daughter started using meth when she was 14 and is now in a juvenile detention center on drug charges. No treatment method has worked for her, Sutter told Coleman.

"Mrs. Sutter's story is a painful illustration of how this terrible drug can tear apart families and the lives of loved ones," Coleman said. "I applaud Austin for its innovation and determination to get ahead of the Meth problem in their area. The Meth Act of 2005 seeks to bring their commonsense and impressive local model to the national stage. It's time for us to step up the fight against meth use in Minnesota."

Key components of the Combat Meth Act of 2005 will:

- Limit access to key ingredients needed to produce meth, in particular pseudoephedrine, which can be found in many conventional cough and cold medicines by placing them behind the counter;
- Provide an additional $15 million under the COPS program to train state and local prosecutors and law enforcement agents for the investigation and prosecution of meth offenses;
- Expand the meth "Hot Spots" program to include personnel and equipment for enforcement, prosecution, and environmental cleanup;
- Provide $5 million to hire additional federal prosecutors and train local prosecutors in state and federal meth laws and cross designate them as Special Assistant U.S. Attorneys, allowing them to prosecute both federal and state meth cases;
- Provide $5 million for states and businesses that legally sell ingredients used to cook meth with resources to monitor purchases of meth precursors and provide training expenses and technical assistance to law enforcement personnel and business employees;
- Provide $2.5 million in grant funding for drug endangered children rapid response teams to promote collaboration among federal, state, and local agencies to assist and educate children that have been affected by the production of meth;
- Authorize the creation of a Meth Research, Training and Technical Assistance Center which will research treatments for meth abuse and disseminate information and technical assistance to states and private entities on how to improve current treatment methods.%

December's unemployment rate increases

Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development (DEED) Commissioner Matt Kramer recently announced that Minnesota's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for December was 4.4 percent. That's an increase from November's rate of 4.2 percent, but still under the national average of 5.4 percent.

According to DEED, the slight rise in December was due to an influx of new entrants into the labor market.

Seasonally adjusted employment was unchanged from November, a DEED press release stated. However, total employment over the year increased by 23,400 jobs, making 2004 the best year in the last four years.

"The annual growth in employment is wonderful news for Minnesota," said Kramer. "And with the unemployment rate remaining low, and well below the national rate all year, Minnesota's economy looks bright as we move into 2005."

Governor proposes K-12 accountability and funding initiatives

Taking action to enhance Minnesota's reputation as the nation's leader in education innovation, Governor Tim Pawlenty has announced a sweeping package of education reforms including extra funding for schools that pay teachers for performance and not just seniority. The plan also responds to the general need for additional K-12 funding by allowing an average increase of 5.4 percent over the next two years. Schools that embrace performance pay for teachers would be eligible for up to an 8 percent increase.

"Our Minnesota school system has served us well, but it is outdated in several key respects," said Governor Pawlenty. "The core mission for schools is to improve student learning. We need to improve accountability for results with the best interests of our customers, students and their parents, in mind."

There are three major components to the Governor's proposal announced:

- QComp – Performance Pay for Quality Teaching
- More Funding for Schools
- Get Ready, Get Credit – college credits while in 12th grade

QComp – Performance Pay for Quality Teaching

The centerpiece of Governor Pawlenty's reforms is a performance pay proposal that makes districts eligible for extra funding if they pay teachers for performance rather than just seniority.

The total cost of the proposal is $60 million in the upcoming budget cycle and would cover 50 percent of Minnesota students. Districts would eligible for the extra money on a first come, first served basis.

"After parents, teachers are the biggest influence in the educational success of a child," said Governor Pawlenty. "Our current teacher pay system is outdated and it is not geared towards accountability for results. We need to treat teachers as professionals, not part of an assembly line from the 1940s."

Pawlenty's teacher pay plan, QComp, contains the following elements:

- Multiple Career Paths – Recognize teacher excellence by creating master and mentor teaching positions to encourage gifted teachers to remain in the classroom and share their skills with others.
- Rigorous Evaluation and Review System – Specific performance and accountability goals will be set for every teacher. A review team consisting of the principal and peers will evaluate performance based upon achievement of the goals, including improvement of student learning. "Current evaluations for non-probationary teachers are often weak," said Governor Pawlenty.
- Performance Pay – Enhanced compensation will be tied to growth in student achievement, rather than seniority. The plan requires participating districts to abolish outdated, lockstep "steps and lanes" compensation systems. Districts will also be able to pay more to teachers in high-need schools and hard to staff subject areas.
- Professional Development Aligned to Actual School and Student Needs – Currently, staff development is not often correlated with the specific needs of students or the school being served. Pawlenty's plan will require staff development to be customized and focused on identified needs of students such as skill development in reading strategies, fine-tuning methods to better align curriculum with learning standards, intervention with struggling children and use of state and local assessment data.

More Funding for Schools

Governor Pawlenty proposed to allow average general fund revenue per student to increase by 5.4 percent over the next two years. This increase not only covers inflation, but also provides additional money local districts can use to lower class sizes and improve their current programs.

Average statewide general fund revenue per student will go from the scheduled $8,361 to $8,520 for FY 2006 and from the scheduled $8,500 to $9,063 for FY 2007.

Districts that also take advantage of the QComp plan could experience increases of up to 8 percent over the last biennium.

"Even with our budget challenges, we need to provide more funding for our schools," added Governor Pawlenty. "These increases will more than cover inflation and allow schools to move forward with change and reform."

Pawlenty is proposing a 2 percent increase on the general education formula in each of the next two years. That increase amounts to $122 per student in FY 2006 and $248 per student in FY 2007. In addition to the general education funding increases, Pawlenty is proposing to allow local school boards to increase local option levies for the local portion of teacher performance pay, special education, deferred maintenance and a discretionary levy which replaces several existing local option levies and provides additional flexibility. These levies are partially equalized, capped and subject to a new reverse referendum process that Governor Pawlenty described as "turbocharged." Additionally, Pawlenty is proposing to increase the current cap on voter-approved local levies from 18 percent of the general education formula amount to 28 percent.

Get Ready, Get Credit

It is becoming increasingly clear that too many 11th and 12th graders are academically "checked out" and that their later high school experience is not as productive as it should be. We know that other students are not properly prepared for college at a time when higher education is more essential than ever. More students are also taking remedial classes once in college and are taking longer to graduate from colleges that are becoming more expensive.

Students who complete a college level course in high school will also be encouraged to take a College Level Examination Program (CLEP) test to receive immediate credit in the state higher education system. This plan will add more value to 11th and 12th grade by providing opportunities for students to get a head start on their college careers without having to leave high school.

Pawlenty's proposal encourages high school students to get a head start on college. The Get Ready, Get Credit proposal would assess college preparedness earlier and better by providing funding so that students in grades 8 and 10 can take the ACT "EPAS" assessment at no charge. EPAS determines preparedness for college and areas in which students need to devote further study and effort.

The Governor also recommends reinstating the stipend to teachers of Advanced Placement/International Baccalaureate programs based on numbers of students passing AP/IB examinations, and making changes in program administration.

Report issued on state's long-term care insurance market

Premiums have increased for some long-term care insurance policies issued to Minnesota consumers largely because policyholders are maintaining their coverage and interest rates have decreased in recent years. Those findings are contained in a Minnesota Department of Commerce report on the current long-term care insurance (LTCI) market in the state.

Minnesota Commerce Commissioner Glenn Wilson asked his staff to study LTCI rates in Minnesota after hearing from some consumers about recent rate increases. Some policy premiums have increased by as much as 45 percent within the last year.

The department's review concluded that rate increases have been the result of two primary factors:

- Reduced policy lapse rates – Most companies assumed that policy lapse rates – the proportion of policyholders that stop paying premiums and let their policies terminate each year – would continue at historical levels of 10 to 15 percent of policies each year for the first few years after policy issue, and 4 to 6 percent per year in later years. However, those levels have reduced dramatically in the last five to nine years. The premium rates are now much less likely to be sufficient to cover the total anticipated claims.
- Reduced interest rate earnings on investments – Ten years ago, a typical long-term interest rate assumption might have been around 7 to 9 percent. It was impossible to foresee that long-term interest rates would drop to about half of that level. This change had a dramatic impact on the ability of companies to provide the promised benefits at the existing rates.

Based on recent rate filings with the department, the estimated range for an LTCI policy is:

- $1,500 to $3,000 per year – issued at age 45
- $3,000 to $6,000 per year – issued at age 65
- $7,500 to $15,000 per year – issued at age 75

The above dollar amounts are based on the cost for a single person, a newly issued policy, with the following fairly comprehensive benefit coverage: $150 per day nursing home benefit, $75 per day for home health care, inflation increase of 5 percent, five-year maximum benefit length, no nonforfeiture benefit, a 30-day elimination period before benefits start, typical underwriting standards.

"Premium increases are not automatic. Companies must prove that they need to increase rates, so they can meet their obligations to policyholders and pay future claims," said Wilson. "All long-term care insurance policy rates must be reviewed by the Commerce Department for compliance with Minnesota law. I have asked staff to take a hard look at all future rate filings and to request any additional information to ensure that premiums are not excessive."

Other findings from the department report include:

- At the end of 2003, about 113,000 individuals were covered under LTCI in Minnesota, according to a report from the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) based on insurance company filings. (This number may be understated since not all insurance companies file state reports.)
- About half of these individuals have received increases in their rates ranging from 10 percent to 45 percent since 2002. Prior to this time, LTCI rate increases had been relatively rare.
- The 113,000 Minnesotans covered by LTCI policies equal about 19 percent of the 600,000 residents aged 65 and higher. (Many covered people are under 65, but this is a rough measure of market penetration.) According to a 1996 Minnesota Department of Health issue paper, the comparable number in the early 1990s was about one percent.
- In 1998, the most recent year for which data is available, Minnesotans paid around $2 billion for nursing home care, about one-tenth of the total payments for all medical care services. The total had probably risen to around $2.5 billion by 2003, according to the Minnesota Department of Commerce (MDC).
- Although there are some demographic differences between Minnesota and other states, the LTCI market here is similar to the markets elsewhere in the United States. Most of the policies are identical, and the recent increases in rates have occurred across the country.
- Sales of new policies appear to have plateaued in Minnesota. According to the detailed state reports, enrollment climbed from about 69,000 people at the end of 1999 to 112,000 at the end of 2002, but only gained another 1,000 in 2003.

The report also includes a list of the top 41 companies with LTCI policies in Minnesota. Many of the companies on the list no longer offer new policies, due primarily to the financial impact of changes in interest rates and lapse rates.

"We found that some companies are not filing state-specific reports with the NAIC regarding their long-term care insurance business," said Wilson. "I have directed our staff to ask for this information each year, so consumers can have a better view of the Minnesota marketplace."

According to a press release from the MDC, when the 2004 national reports are available, it will contact all companies reporting LTCI experience to request their experiences, if any, in Minnesota.

The MDC has also updated its consumer publication on LTCI in the "What you Need to Know" series. It contains information on LTCI coverage and costs, shopping tips and a worksheet to use when deciding whether to purchase LTCI.

Both the consumer guide and the department's report are available by logging onto the department's Web site (www.commerce.state.mn.us).

Colon Cancer Awareness Month: Get the Facts

The American Cancer Society has designated March as Colon *Cancer month in an effort to high*light the seriousness of colon cancer. Nearly 30,000 American lives could be saved each year if everyone age 50 and older were tested for colorectal cancer.

What is Colon Cancer? Colon cancer develops in the lower part of the digestive system, also referred to as the gastrointestinal, or GI, system. The digestive tract processes the food you eat and rids the body of solid waste matter. This cancer usually develops from precancerous changes or growths in the lining of the colon called polyps.

The Facts

- In 2005, an estimated 145,290 new cases of colon cancer will be diagnosed in the US.
- An estimated 56,290 deaths will occur from colon cancer in 2005, accounting for about 10 percent of cancer deaths in the US.
- Ninety percent of colon cancer cases are diagnosed in men and women older than 50.
- If colon cancer is found in the earliest stages, the survival rate is 90 percent, but only 39 percent of colon cancers are found at that early stage.
- Once the cancer has spread to the nearby organs or lymph nodes, the five-year survival rate decreases to 67 percent, and once it has spread to distant parts of the body, such as the liver or lungs, the five-year survival rate decreases to about 10 percent.
- Colon cancer is the third leading cause of cancer death in both men and women in the US.
- Colon cancer is the second most common cancer among African-American women and the third most common cancer among African-American men.
- Colon cancer is the second most common cancer among Hispanic/Latino men and women.

Disparities

- African-Americans have the highest death rate from colon cancer of any racial or ethnic group in the US.
- From 1992 to 2000, the five-year survival rate for colon cancer was 55 percent for African-Americans compared with 64 percent for Caucasians.
- According to a NIH report in 1992, while Hispanics/Latinos have lower rates of colon cancer diagnoses and deaths than other racial or ethnic groups in the US, they are less likely to be tested for the disease.

Risk Factors

- Age – The risk of colon cancer increases with age; men and women age 50 and over are at risk for colon cancer.
- Family History – A personal or family history of colon cancer or polyps or of inflammatory bowel disease of significant duration increases the likelihood of developing colon cancer.
- Genetic Factors – Certain genetic factors increase the likelihood of developing colon cancer, including conditions called familial adenomatous polyposis (FAP), Gardner's syndrome, heredity non-polyposis colon cancer, and being of Ashkenazi Jewish descent.
- Race – African-Americans have the highest colon cancer rates and the highest rate of death from the disease of any racial or ethnic group in the US.
- Behavior – Certain behavioral factors also increase the likelihood of developing colon cancer:
  - o Smoking
  - o Alcohol consumption
  - o Obesity
  - o Physical inactivity
  - o Diet high in fat and/or red meat
  - o Diet low in fruits and vegetables.

Wash your hands to keep from getting sick

by Suzanne Driessen
University of Minnesota
Extension Service

What do influenza and viral food-borne illness have in common? Both are human diseases spread to other humans.

Most often these illnesses are spread by viruses picked up from other people or from germ-ridden surfaces. Many cases of the flu and food-borne illness could have been prevented if hands and "commonly touched surfaces" were washed. Study after study shows frequent hand washing is the most important thing that you can do to keep from getting sick.

While hand washing is the greatest defense when it comes to spreading infections, frequent cleaning and sanitizing provides additional protection. Here is a cleaning routine to reduce harmful bacteria and viruses that can make people sick:

- Wash your hands with warm, soapy water before and after food preparation and especially after preparing meat, poultry, eggs or seafood.
- Wash your hands after touching your eyes, nose or mouth; after every time you use the bathroom; before, during and after you prepare food; after handling animals or animal waste; and more often when someone in your home or office is sick.
- Wash and sanitize "high touch surfaces" like faucets and door handles in your bathroom and kitchen. Bleach and other sanitizers aren't as effective in killing germs if surfaces are soiled. It's important to clean surfaces with hot, soapy water before sanitizing. After washing the surface, rinse, then sanitize with a bleach solution or commercial sanitizer or disinfectant. Only products that carry an EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) registration number on the label are approved disinfectants or sanitizers.
- To sanitize: Mix one teaspoon of liquid chlorine bleach with one quart of water. Apply to surface. Keep surface wet for two minutes. Allow to air dry. Do not rinse. It's important to measure out the bleach. Too little won't kill disease causing germs and too much can be harmful. Most of our bleach today is concentrated, so check the label for the correct amount. If you mix up a bleach solution and keep it in a spray bottle, it's recommended that you make up a fresh batch daily. The bleach solution weakens over time and isn't as effective in killing germs.
- Daily, clean and sanitize sponges, dishcloths, cutting boards, sinks and drain areas.
- Use paper towels to clean up kitchen surfaces and spills.

Maple syrup production going high tech

by Gary Wyatt
University of Minnesota
Extension Service

Tapping maple trees and boiling the sap to produce maple syrup continues to be an interesting early spring activity in much of the U.S.

Trees in yards, along streets and in pastures or woodlands can be used for maple sap production. In Minnesota, there are about 60 commercial maple syrup producers, but over 2,500 novice or home producers.

In Minnesota, the four main species used for producing maple syrup are sugar maple (hard maple), red maple (soft maple), silver maple (soft or cutleaf maple), and boxelder (Manitoba maple). Yes, boxelder trees can be tapped to produce maple syrup. However, ornamental maples, such as the Norway and Schwedler maple, have a milky sap and cannot be used for syrup production.

Until recently, maple syrup production has been strictly a sideline farm crop in many areas. But with the use of tubing, reverse osmosis and redesigned evaporators, commercial full-time operations are common and hobby operations often expanded. Recent new technologies are improving evaporation efficiency.

District 564 enroll in a two-year pilot project. The upfront costs for the District would include $5,000 to buy into the project, and $1,000 per year thereafter. In return, the District would receive two automated trainers, automated technology software, $32,500 in equipment, and other benefits.

The Board of Education did not take any action regarding Melcher's request.

More Books

Monday night, representatives of the Literacy Collaborative requested funding for books. (Literacy Collaborative has been a service mark of The Ohio State University since 1998, and S.D. 564 received a large grant to participate in the Ohio State Literacy Collaborative.)

It's not a program or a project, said Julie Kragness. The Literacy Collaborative is a school-wide instructional approach to teaching reading. It's about teachers, and it's about reforming the way we teach, said Kragness.

While the cornerstone of the Literacy Collaborative is dynamic, long-term professional development, there are other requirements, including an "adequate and varied selection of books and materials."

"Our library is not what we would like it to be," said Jane Miller, second grade teacher and member of the literacy collaborative leadership team.

Miller, Kragness and other representatives at the meeting Monday night, were not refering to the library in general. They were refering to books in the library that have been leveled. (Leveled books are books that have been graded and arranged according to certain levels. Sometimes those levels are based on grade, but also numerically, and alphabetically. Leveled books provide the reader and instructor with a guidepost.)

Children, said Kragness, are more excited about books they can read. They also learn more.

Jamie Bakken, media specialist at Challenger Elementary School, noted that since the leveled books were introduced at the school, an amazing change has taken place. The children have become very excited about reading.

Not all of the books in the library or school have been leveled, nor have all of the teachers jumped on board with the literacy collaborative.

Bakken said it will take more time to level all of the books with the same process. (There are different ways to grade books.) She also needs more funds for books.

Kragness said she senses some reluctance to change among some teachers, but she isn't too concerned about it at this time. She believes teachers will eventually make the change.

The Literacy Collaborative teaching method that is being successfully used in classrooms already, involves what has been described as "managed independent learning."

In visiting the classrooms where it is being used, Principal Patrick Marolt described it as groups of students working together and learning at their own pace. Individual assessment also plays a role in the instruction.

The Board of Education did not take any action regarding the request for additional funding for books.

Next Meeting

The next regular meeting of the Board of Education has been scheduled for 5 p.m. Wednesday, March 2, in the conference room of the School District Service Center.

by the Minnesota Job Skills Partnership (JSP), a state-funded program created in 1983. Grants are made on a competitive basis to businesses and educational institutions that partner to provide training that adds jobs to the economy, keeps jobs in Minnesota, or improves the quality of jobs in the state. The program is funded with about $6.8 million per year. Because of the required employer match, the program leveraged over $14 million of private job training investment in 2004. Minnesota is one of the few states in the country with a program like the JSP.

Brenda Norman to lead Workforce Development Council

Brenda Norman, director of Workforce Development Initiatives for the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities (MnSCU), has been named executive director of the Governor's Workforce Development Council. She will assume her new duties on March 2, replacing Luke Weisberg, who has served as the council's executive director since 2000.

The Governor's Workforce Development Council represents business, labor and education interests, as well as the nonprofit sector, the Minnesota Legislature and others with an interest in Minnesota's workforce development system. The council plays an important role in bringing citizen involvement, engagement, and oversight to the state's workforce development efforts and providing strategic leadership for workforce development and local and regional leaders throughout the state. It also functions as the state Workforce Investment Board under the federal Workforce Investment Act of 1998 (WIA) and is further defined by Minnesota statute regarding its composition and role.

Future climatic changes could affect region's economy

Recently completed studies reconstructing the historical climatic trends for the last 2,000 years in the northern Great Plains show that frequent alternating climatic cycles of drought and wet periods are typical for this area. These cycles could last more than 160 years, and future ones could be more severe than those on the limited record books.

The results of this study suggest that this region is likely to experience a significant drought within the next few decades, according to the University of North Dakota's Energy & Environmental Research Center (EERC). Without timely water management strategies, the drought conditions will limit the socioeconomic development of the region and may even threaten the sustainability of current living conditions.

The three-year project was conducted on lake bottom sediments of Devils Lake, N.D., by the EERC and the St. Croix Watershed Research Station at the Science Museum of Minnesota.

"The results of this study support previous studies and provide more precise definition of the climatic cycles we have touted for over three decades," said EERC Director Gerald Groenewold.

"Our region is obviously in a wet cycle," said Ed Steadman, EERC senior research adviser. "In spite of the devastating effect of reoccurring floods in recent history, a long-term drought will be far more catastrophic to our region."

Populations in North Dakota and western Minnesota remain relatively stable, but highly populated areas in eastern North Dakota, such as Fargo and West Fargo, are growing significantly. With that, there is a substantial increase in demand for water supplies. Water demand for the Red River Valley is expected to more than double by the year 2050.

Groundwater resources in North Dakota were extensively depleted during the drought of the 1930s to offset the water shortage. For example, the Moorhead aquifer dropped from six feet below ground level in 1913 to more than 190 feet below in 1948. Similarly, the West Fargo Aquifier System has declined dramatically as well. Aquifiers in the Fargo area have decreased about two feet a year for the past 15 years.

"Continued withdrawal combined with water table decline in larger areas do not allow for aquifier replenishment," said Jarda Sole, EERC senior research manager. "These trends are even more alarming with respect to the fact that the regional hydrologic system, as documented in the EERC project, is currently at its wet stage and the aquifier usage will considerably increase once the system moves to the dry cycle."

"Science is proving that dramatic swings in climate cycles are inevitable in the northern Great Plains," said Groenewold. "Without the development and implementation of substantial, long-term, regional water management strategies, economic growth will, at best, be limited. Indeed, we may not be able to maintain our current economy. The public and decision makers need to recognize the magnitude, severity and urgency of this issue. Our greatest challenge is to admit we have a problem."

city-owned land were sprayed with 2, 4-D for dandelion control. Some riverbanks were sprayed with Curtail for the control of Canadian thistle. Some areas were sprayed with Roundup for weed control during the summer.

Olson wrote that the Forestry Department is watching for the emerald ash bore, which has been devastating to the green ash in Michigan.

Other activities

Besides keeping watch for the emerald ash bore, Olson helped sod at REA and assisted with a drainage project there.

This fall, he also supervised the cleanup of park property behind Dakota Clinic. With the help of Sentence to Serve crews, all blown-down and dead trees were removed. Some smaller, less desirable trees were removed to thin out the underbrush. An effort was made to keep the smaller oak and ash trees, which, Olson noted, may help the trees. The drainage was reshaped when a Dakota Clinic parking lot was constructed. He wrote that the reshaping should make that area less troublesome for mosquito control.

And for the 16th consecutive year, Olson noted that the city of Thief River Falls was recognized as a "Tree City USA" by the National Arbor Day Foundation.

Helicopters flew overhead, and snipers were situated on rooftops. They also weren't able to bring backpacks near the Capitol, where the inauguration was held. Secret Service agents were everywhere, Scott said.

Despite the security measures, they were glad they were able to see the inauguration for the first time in person. Shelly said, "It was really cool."

Dept. of Ag is addressing concerns about soybean rust

by Gene Hugoson
Commissioner
MN Dept. of Agriculture

Many of us understood it was only a matter of time before soybean rust arrived in North America, but it was still a shock to see nine states report their first cases of the devastating crop disease within days of each other.

By now, nearly all Minnesota farmers know soybean rust is a fast-spreading fungal disease that can be carried on the wind. They know the disease has infected fields around the world, and that it can cause soybean yield losses of between 50 and 70 percent if left untreated.

The multi-billion dollar question now is how the arrival of soybean rust in North America alters the business of growing soybeans. Already, there is talk of reduced soybean acreage in 2005 as farmers consider switching to other crops in an attempt to avoid the potential added costs of spraying for soybean rust.

While each farmer has to decide on his or her own how to approach this issue, it is important that these decisions are based on sound information. That's why the Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) is working with the University of Minnesota and the Minnesota Soybean Growers Association to get out the real facts about soybean rust and what it might mean for us here in the Upper Midwest.

First, the fungus that causes soybean rust cannot survive the frigid winters of northern states nor does it over winter in the soil. Scientists believe rust will survive winters only in the extreme southern tier of states because it needs living host material to survive, and that it will gradually spread north on the winds each spring and summer. This means Minnesota should be among the last of the major soybean states to be hit by rust.

Once the growing season begins, the northern spread of soybean rust will depend on wind patterns and weather conditions. Once the fungus is present in an area, spore infection can occur following wet leaf periods lasting at least six hours (including extended dew periods) and moderate temperatures of between 60-degrees Fahrenheit and 80-degrees Fahrenheit. Subsequent spore production starts in about a week.

Within an area, the disease can spread quickly. Across states and regions, the rate of spread is more uncertain. It could take one season or several seasons for rust to spread throughout the soybean growing regions of North America. Making matters even more confusing, not all soybean-growing regions may become infested in each growing season.

In Minnesota, farmers should begin scouting soybean fields in mid-July and continue through mid-August. Check the undersides of lower leaves for a yellow mosaic discoloration and reddish-brown to tan pustules when leaflets are well developed. For help in knowing what to look for, check out the color photos of infested plants posed on the MDA Web site at www.mda.state.mn.us/invasives/soybeanrust.

There are several fungicide products available for controlling rust. Research suggests that the first fungicide application should be applied at the initiation of flowering (R1). The second application, if needed, should be applied 20 days later. Based on current research, soybean producers will likely need to make two or three applications of a fungicide for best results. Cost estimates range from $15 to $20 per acre per treatment.

As for crop insurance, losses attributed to disease such as rust are often insurable when a producer is insured and follows good farming practices. Of course, soybean producers should personally verify their coverage with their insurance provider before the growing season begins.

Fortunately, Minnesota farmers have several months to prepare for this disease. For more information about soybean rust and what we are doing to prepare for its arrival, please visit the MDA's Web site at http://www.mda.state.mn.us/invasives/soybeanrust/.

TRF orchestras to peform Feb. 28

of the pop charts in 1982. The song "Edelweiss" is one of the most memorable tunes from the musical "The Sound of Music," and features the strong violin and viola sections of this orchestra. Lastly, "The Toreador Song," which is the bullfighter song from the opera "Carmen," closes this part of the program.

The LHS 11th and 12th Grade Orchestra will perform the "Sinfonia Concertante for Viola and Bass" by Karl Ditters von Dittersdorf. Known for his bass concertos, Dittersdorf also wrote for the viola and wrote this piece combining both instruments in a concerto-like piece. True to form, the bass gets most of the action. This piece is odd in that the viola and bass were the least written for solos until the 20th century, when composers were looking for new tones and sonorities. Written in the 18th century, this piece is from the classical era, featuring oboes, horns, spiccato strings and a light, Mozart-like style. The Allegro first movement is written in a classic sonata-allegro form, that is, ABA. The second movement features only the violins doubling the solo viola while the bass gets to do most of the work of this slower, two part movement. The third movement is the classic Minuet-Trio with the soloists playing the trio by themselves. The fourth movement is another two part form in a not-too-fast 6/8 time. Mosloff, coming off his second All-State Orchestra performance, will perform the viola solo with Ben Willis, All-State Jazz bassist showing his classical side.

The combined LHS Orchestra will then perform "Slava!," an arrangement of the Russian hymn by Nikolay Andreyevich Rimsky-Korsakov and "Psalm and Fugue" by American composer Alan Hovhaness. Both of these pieces require a large string orchestra as each section of the orchestra is subdivided into smaller sections. The "Psalm and Fugue," in fact, divides into 10 separate parts, providing a thick and luscious harmony. The orchestra will then finish with "Celtic Roots," an Irish-like fiddle tune that starts out with a gregorian chant-like section before breaking into a jig and a reel, which is sure to have the audience leaving with a spring in its step.

Orchestra members include Sixth Grade Orchestra – first violin: Allison Holter, Taylor Woods, Caitlin Nelson and Kayla Nelson; second violin: Casey Braastad, Kelly Fynboh and Devin Spears; viola: Lauren Bauer and Kenton Johnson, and cello: Leeann Szeto and Shelby Dvergsten.

LHS Orchestra – first violin: Jillian Larson (principal player), Kayla Gallagher, Angie Blom, Kayleigh Jesme, Shane Cullen, Ana Hibbert, Rachel Bruggeman, Josh Knott, Dean Haugen, Bethany Stroh, Adam Rodahl, Danielle Stenvik, Ashley Peterson; Austin Kalsnes, Alicia Rader, Amanda Hamre and Andrew Helgeland; second violin: Reilly Stoltman (principal player), Tim Sayler, Cole Bylander, Deseri Dillon, Ana Olson, Doug Brekke, Eric Swanson, Jill Solberg, Elizabeth Cox, Kristen Stenvik, Elissa Northup, Hannah Kainz, Tricia Bastian, Krystle Cullen and Jim Worker; viola: Derek Mosloff (principal player), Danielle Martin, Stacy Rasmussen, Alec Schmit and Erica Wayne; bass: Ben Willis (principal player), Trista Curry, Sam Omdahl, Matt Olson and Zach Johnson, cello: Casey Leach (principal player), Josiah Northup, Robby Stenson, Derek Dalen, Mark Campbell, Deepta Holalkere, Lance Efteland, Dylan Johnson, Calli Adamson, Mallory Asp, Caitlin Browning and Kelly Meador, oboe: Alyssa Rogalla and Aaron Dahl, French horn: Amanda LeTourneau and Marah Fredland

Six Prowlers head to state

A school-record six Prowlers are headed to the individual portion of the Class AA state high school wrestling tournament following Thief River Falls performances during Friday/Saturday Section 8AA competition at Fosston.

Three of those will be making the trip to St. Paul as Section 8AA champions: senior Zach Anderson at 140 pounds, junior Dan LeDuc at 152; and sophomore Andrew Peralta at heavyweight.

Three others won true-second matches to advance: eighth grader Jordan Engen at 103; sophomore Kyle Iverson at 125; and senior Adam Lian at 171.

The previous Thief River Falls record for individual state tournament qualifiers was five in 2001-02.

Ten Prowlers were Section 8AA place finishers and eight of those wound up in the top-four.

"Sending six individuals to state is amazing," said Thief River Falls coach Kenny Geiser. "With 13 teams in the section, only 28 wrestlers go, total. We got six."

It was the second straight Section 8AA title for Anderson.

"This was one of the most amazing runs I have ever seen," said Geiser. "The emotions and excitement in the Fosston gym were unbelievable after we won our third true-second match, sending our sixth wrestler to state. I was literally numb with shock, to be honest. Sometimes things just go your way."

The six state meet-bound Prowlers have combined for 194 wins. Anderson is 39-1, LeDuc 36-1, Peralta 34-5, Lian 29-11, Iverson 29-12 and Engen 27-15.

"I am so proud of this group of guys," said Geiser. "They worked so hard for two hours every day for 14 weeks to get where we got on Saturday. They deserved every bit of it."

The combination Class A, AA, AAA team and individual state tournament takes place Feb. 24-26 at the Xcel Energy Center. Class AA individual matches start at approximately noon on Thursday. Team and individual finals in all three classes are Saturday.

Thief River Falls edges Lake of the Woods 3-2 in semifinal thriller...

Prowlers reach Section 8A hockey finals

Three goals by Michael Forney, including the equalizer and game-winner in the final 3:40, carried host Thief River Falls past Lake of the Woods 3-2 in a wildly-entertaining Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament semifinal Monday at the Ralph Engelstad Arena.

The victory puts the second-seeded 19-7-1 Prowlers in Thursday's state tournament-qualifying Section 8A final on the same ice against two-time defending champion Warroad, the top seed and the No. 1-rated Class A team in the state. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

It was a crushing defeat for the Bears, ending a 16-8-1 season that included a 2-0 win over the Prowlers Jan. 29 in Baudette - a victory Lake of the Woods figured should have given them the No. 2 tournament seed behind Warroad instead of Thief River Falls. And as ecstatic as Prowlers coach Scott Bergland was in victory celebration, he was quick to give full credit to the opponent. "It was a good game," he said. "It was too bad one had to lose. The kids have a great deal of respect for Lake of the Woods, especially the seniors on that team. To lose a game like that would be crushing for either team. We feel for them."

There were chances galore, but little scoring, and actually not all that many shots on goal. A category of near-misses would have dominated the score sheet in this one.

Lake of the Woods got the first goal when Greg Beller fought off a defender on the left side of the Prowlers' net, got enough leverage and just enough of an opening to push the puck past Thief River Falls goalie Lance Klaven at 9:39 of the opening period.

Forney tied it with his first goal just 30 seconds left in the opening period. He skated the puck away from the boards, and, midway between the two face-off circles on either side of Lake of the Woods goalie Jay Clark, let go a major-league backhand.

No scoring but plenty of action filled the middle 17 minutes, including pipe-hitting shots by the Prowlers' Alec Holen, who was in alone at 10:48, and by the Bears' John Clark on a hard slap shot from long range at 14:52.

Forty-one seconds into the third period, Michael Benedict of the Prowlers sent a shot from the point that drilled the pipe and came out just as fast - a puck picked up by the Bears, who promptly went ahead 2-1 at the 52-second mark. The goal came came on a quickly-formed scrum around the Thief River Falls net as the puck was shoved past Klaven.

There were more chances on both sides, but no more scoring as the clock-watching began.

That's when Forney picked up a rebound left in the slot after a save on Holen by Clark. Forney wristed it into the net for the tie at 13:20.

Game-winner was another loose puck opportunity at 16:06. This time Forney waited patiently until Clark went down on the ice and put his shot into the upper right corner for the season-extender.

"Michael's smart enough to know to be in the right place at the right time," said Bergland. "He's a Division-I player; a big-time player."

The Bears pulled Clark for an extra attacker, but there were just 34.8 seconds on the clock before that opportunity presented itself. Still, Klaven had to make one more key save on a scramble with 18 seconds showing before the winner was finally determined.

Clark finished with 21 saves; Klaven made 14 stops.

"When we played up there, I thought we dominated, even though we lost the game," said Bergland. "This one was a lot closer. If we play 10 times, I bet we both win five."

They played twice, and each won once. The Prowlers' victory happened to come in the Section 8A tournament semifinals.

Scoring

First period - LOW, Greg Beller (Aaron Gens), 9:39; TRF, Michael Forney (Corey LaSalle), 16:30.
Second period - no scoring
Third period - LOW, Jeremy Beller (Geoff Slick), :52; TRF, Forney (Corey Horien, Alec Holen), 13:20; TRF, Forney, 16:06.
Goalie saves - TRF, Lance Klaven 5-4-5-14, LOW, Jay Clark 8-3-10-21.

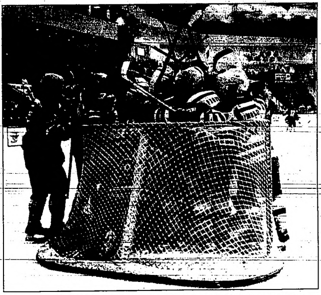
Advanced ticket sales being held for finals at Ralph Engelstad Arena

Advance tickets for the 2005 Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament championship game at the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls are being sold at the REA from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 22, 23 and 24.

There will be no advance ticket sales at any other site.

Just as the case in the quarterfinals and semifinals, there will be no reserved seats for the championship game.

Ticket prices are $5 for adults and $3 for students in grades K-through-12. Students should be prepared to show proper identification at the tournament site to avoid the risk of paying adult prices.



Thief River Falls players surrounded goalie Lance Klaven as they celebrated a dramatic 3-2 Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament semifinal win over Lake of the Woods Monday at the Ralph Engelstad Arena. The Prowlers got the game-winner with just 54 seconds remaining.

Fergus Falls 8AAA draw for TRF girls

Fergus Falls will be the opponent and the site when Thief River Falls begins 2005 Section 8AAA girls high school basketball tournament quarterfinal play Thursday.

The Prowlers lost to the Otters 57-46 earlier this month in Thief River Falls.

Dear Readers:

Sorry, I still don't have it all together.

Last week I cried on your shoulders about being sick, missing work and not getting all the material into publication.

After a brief relief, I went down, again. This time the flu bug really did the job. I have been trying, but not very successfully, to keep atop a very busy local sports schedule.

If your material, or your team is not on these pages in full or even partial stories, I apologize. It's a difficult task at full strength, and as I'm finding out, impossible when not healthy.

I'm not looking for sympathy. I'm just offering an explanation.

Sincerely, Mike Lundgren, Sports Editor

NCTC teams ready for state

It's state tournament weekend for both the men's and women's basketball teams at Northland Community and Technical College. The Rick Nikunen-coached men will play their games at Minneapolis Community and Technical College. The Missy Majerus-coached women will compete at Anoka-Ramsey Community College in Coon Rapids. Both tournaments will run Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 25, 26 and 27.

The Minnesota Community College Conference state basketball tournaments feature the top four regular season finishers in the Northern and South Division, but sometimes there is some juggling to make all the pieces fit.

Central Lakes, Vermilion and Northland all shared first place in the men's Northern Division. Official books list them as co-champions, but for state tournament seeding purposes, head-to-head results placed the Raiders, Ironmen and Pioneers 1-2-3, respectively. Mesabi Range rounds out the foursome.

In the men's Southern Division, Minneapolis, Rochester and Fergus Falls finished first, second and third, respectively, but a Monday playoff game featuring Ridgewater and Anoka-Ramsey was needed to break a tie for the fourth and final playoff spot.

On the women's side, it was a clean 1-through-4 Southern Division finish for Anoka-Ramsey, Ridgewater, Fergus Falls and Minneapolis. A coin flip gave Rainy River the No. 1 seed from the Northern Division after the Voyageurs and Itasca wound up tied atop the standings. Northland was third and Mesabi Range fourth.

Both Northland teams have 3 p.m. quarterfinal games Friday. The men play Rochester, a team the Pioneers beat in Thief River Falls 77-63 back on Dec. 3. The women take on Ridgewater, a team the Pioneers have not faced this winter.

Minneapolis is the overwhelming favorite in the men's tournament. The 23-3 Matadors are ranked No. 2 in the National Junior College Athletic Association

Warroad wins first semifinal game

Warroad dispatched another Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament foe in easy fashion Saturday as the state's top-ranked team beat Crookston 9-1 in semifinal action at the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls. The defending champions blitzed Park Rapids/Menahga/Nevis 13-0 in the Thursday quarterfinals.

First goal scored in Monday's Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament semifinal game at the Ralph Engelstad Arena went to Lake of the Woods' Greg Beller on this play as he reached out and got the puck past Thief River Falls goalie Lance Klaven 9:39 into the opening period. The Prowlers won the game 3-2 on a goal by Michael Forney with 54 seconds remaining.

Prowlers, Bears advance

Results duplicating the first set of quarterfinal games the previous night appeared Friday when a Game 1 blowout and a down-to-the-wire finish in Game 2 completed the field for the 2005 Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament semifinals at the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls.

Second-seeded Thief River Falls skated to an 11-2 opening game victory over No. 7 Kittson Central while No. 3 Lake of the Woods got a late-game goal to get by upset-up minded No. 6 Detroit Lakes 2-1.

The same scenario played itself out Thursday when No. 1 Warroad shut out No. 8 Park Rapids Area/Menahga/Nevis 13-0 and No. 5 Crookston scored late to edge No. 4 East Grand Forks 2-1.

Thief River Falls' Alec Holen scored four goals and added two assists for a six-point post-season outing. He scored three straight goals in a 4-minute, 17-second span of the third period.

Michael Forney had two goals and three assists as the Prowlers took a 4-0 first period lead and had a 7-1 second period advantage.

Single-goal scorers for the Prowlers were Matt Nordhagen, Corey LaSalle, Corey Horien, Corey Johnson and Tony Dorn. Horien had two assists, while Nordhagen and LaSalle complemented their goals with single assists. Robby Philipp collected three assists for the winners.

Kittson Central goals came from Andrew Muir in the second period and Justin Mortenson in the third period.

The Prowlers out-shot the Wolfpack 41-11.

In the second half of the quarterfinal twinbill, Jeremy Beller snapped a 1-1 tie with 53 seconds left in the game to give Lake of the Woods a Monday semifinal date with Thief River Falls.

Detroit Lakes got on the board first when Jedd Harms scored at 16:34 of the opening period.

Lake of the Woods tied in on a goal by John Clark at 5:01 of the second period.

Northland at state tournament

Division III national polls.

"Other than Minneapolis, it's wide open," said Nikunen. "Everybody else is playing to get into the finals; it's a given Minneapolis will be there. And since we're in the opposite bracket, I like our draw."

Northland men take a 17-9 overall and 8-4 MCCC record into the state tournament.

It's the second state tournament of the 2004-05 school year for Majerus in her first year at the school. "To make the state tournament was our goal all year in volleyball and basketball," she said. "We made it in volleyball, and now we did it in basketball. The kids are excited, but they know their work isn't done yet."

Majerus thinks Northland can be a major player at the state tournament. "I know we can go out and score on anybody," she said. "It's just a matter of playing good defense. We've been working really hard on that, and right now I think we have the confidence to go man-on-man or zone against anybody."

Northland women finished the regular season 15-10 overall and 8-4 in the MCCC. "Our record could have been outstanding, but we lost some close conference games," offered Majerus, looking at a one-point defeat, a two-point setback and a pair of three-point decisions. "The only teams that really beat us bad this year were Lake Region and NDSCS." And since those two schools are in North Dakota and will not be at the MCCC state tournament, the confident level of the coach has risen even higher.

The fifth-seeded Pirates, who advanced with a 2-1 win over East Grand Forks, enjoyed a brief high when Brett Lien scored to tie the game at 4:28 of the first period. But Bengston put Warroad back in front two minutes later.

Title on the line Thursday night

It will be the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds squaring off Thursday when Warroad and Thief River Falls meet in the 2005 Section 8A boys high school hockey tournament championship game. Face-off time at the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls is 7:30 p.m.

Warroad is the heavy favorite. The state's No. 1-ranked Class A team is unbeaten with a 25-0-2 record that includes a 7-2, 7-1 regular season sweep of the Prowlers. Warroad has won two straight Section 8A titles and will be playing in the finals for a fourth straight year.

But the Prowlers are not waving a white flag.

Thief River Falls will enter the game with a nine-game winning streak and a 19-7-1 record. That's the most wins for the Prowlers since 1959-60 – the season they last won the tournament.

The Prowlers have made nine state hockey tournament appearances. They were runner-up in the very first state tournament in 1945; finished third in 1951; won consolation honors in 1952; claimed a state title in 1954; were consolation champs again in 1955; won a second state championship in 1956; and picked up a third consolation prize in 1959.

No state tournament hardware was won on trips in 1960 and 1965.

Thief River Falls won six Region 8 championships: 1945, 1951, 1952, 1954, 1955, 1956 and 1960, when the Prowlers beat Warroad 4-1 in the finals.

Under arrangements with the Minnesota State High School League, the Region 7 and Region 8 runners-ups had a chance to represent Region 3 at the state tournament. At first it was on an every-other-year arrangement, with Region 8 getting the spot on even-number years. That left the Prowlers out with Region 8 championship game losses to Roseau in 1955 and 1959.

The Region 3 qualification then switched to the winner of a game involving the Region 7 and Region 8 runner-ups. Thief River Falls' last state tournament trip was made in that fashion in 1965 when the Prowlers lost to Roseau 3-1 in the Region 8 finals, but beat Duluth East 2-1 for the Region 3 berth.

Since 1965, Thief River Falls has played 11 games where a win would have resulted in a state trip. The results:

■ 1967 - lost to Roseau 2-1 in Region 8 finals; lost to Hibbing 7-3 in Region 3 playoff.

■ 1968 - lost to Roseau 3-2 in Region 8 finals; lost to Coleraine 4-1 in Region 3 playoff.

■ 1974 - Lost to Bemidji 2-0 in Region 8 finals; lost to Hibbing 7-2 in Region 3 playoff.

■ 1979 - lost to Roseau 4-2 in Section 8 finals.

■ 1981 - lost to Roseau 7-3 in Section 8 finals.

■ 1983 - lost to Roseau 1-0 in Section 8 finals.

■ 1999 - lost to East Grand Forks 2-1 in Section 8 Tier I finals.

■ 2003 - lost to Warroad 3-1 in Section 8A finals.

The Thief River Falls-Warroad winner will advance to the Class A state tournament beginning March 2 at the Xcel Energy Center in St. Paul. The 2 p.m. Wednesday quarterfinal foe will be either Albert Lea or Mankato East. The top-seeded Albert Lea Tigers (25-2) and No. 2-seeded Mankato East Cougars (17-10) play in the Section 1A championship game Thursday at Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter.

Now is a good time to prune fruit trees, oaks and elms

by Janna Beckerman
Plant Pathologist
University of Minnesota
Extension Service

Late February through March is an ideal time to prune oaks, elms and fruit trees. The insects that spread Dutch elm disease, oak wilt of red and white oaks, and fire blight of crabapples are not active when trees are dormant.

Properly performed, dormant pruning produces vigorous, new growth and helps trees avoid many serious diseases. We always remind people "do not prune in April, May or June." Depending on weather conditions, pruning for oaks should not be performed from April through June; elms should not be pruned from April through November.

Dormant pruning of fruit trees minimizes the possibility of fire blight in crabapples, apples and pears; and of Nectria canker and black knot of cherries and plums. For fruit trees, late February through March is the safest and best time to prune – just before the buds swell. When pruning the home orchard, the key is to start spring pruning early enough so you've finished before the leaves appear.

However, pruning too early increases the risk of winter injury. The amount of injury is directly related to the length of time between pruning and temperature drop. Late winter pruning reduces the likelihood of extreme temperature drop, thereby reducing the risk of winter injury.

When pruning any tree, start by cutting out broken, dead or diseased branches. Now, focus on the tree's structure, size and shape. Focus on removing competing branches, or co-dominant leaders-those branches in the center of the tree fighting to be the tallest. Two competing leaders can easily serve as a breaking point as the tree matures.

When pruning, make close (but not flush), clean cuts and minimize stubs that encourage decay and canker and may serve as a source of injury to the parent branch or trunk. Finally, prune with moderation, removing branches only when there is a very good reason for doing so. Heavy pruning can upset the balance between wood growth and root growth, and on fruit trees, can result in a loss of crop.

The University of Minnesota Extension Service publication, "Pruning Trees and Shrubs," has diagrams on what types of pruning cuts to make and when to make them. It's available at www.extension.umn.edu/distribution/horticulture/DG0628.html.

F. Myrtle Vagle • 436-2133

The weather in northwest Minnesota is difficult to describe so folks in other parts of the world will really understand that this valley is a great place to live. The barometer is dropping and pointing to rain that could also mean snow. We know that the sun is always shining, but we are unable to tell how thick this cloud cover is today or what manner it will come down if any. Last Thursday, Pearl Thompson and I planned to go to Thief River Falls after lunch. We hurried out as soon as we were done eating, expecting to find a bright sunny day, but a snow shower was in progress, so dense that visibility was a few blocks on the street. It didn't continue more than an hour but with all that new snow, it could become a real whiteout if the wind entered the program! We found other things to do that afternoon.

Happy Valentine's Day to all of you! To you who received these beautiful roses for the occasion, try smelling their fragrance. You may find that difficult because most of them at this time of year are grown in the south. This northern climate may have to wait until spring to produce them but when you do, their fragrance fills the room. This is one reason I love raising flowers here. I remember the springtime on the farm when that long row of lilac bushes were in bloom, we would open the windows and enjoy the wonderful aroma! If this weather continues as it has been the past weeks, we won't have long to wait.

Extension Service prints weed control publication

The University of Minnesota Extension Service has published the "2005 Cultural and Chemical Weeds Control in Field Crops." It is available by logging onto http://appliedweeds.coafes.umn.edu.

Crops covered in the publication include canola, corn, flax, soybeans, small grains, sugarbeets and sunflowers. There's also a section on herbicide-forage, feed and grazing restrictions.

There are detailed tables for each crop, said Jeff Gunsolus, Extension agronomist and weed scientist, and one of the publication's authors. There are also sections on crop replant and rotational restrictions; human safety issues, such as restricted use status and human reentry periods; and herbicide prices.

To help target the right herbicide to the right weed, there are herbicide effectiveness ratings for each crop. Safe application guidelines include information on crop stage and harvest restrictions.

"As always, read labels and follow the instructions when using herbicides," Gunsolus said.

Who should say when schools should start?

In North Dakota, a bill that would have prevented public schools from starting a week before Labor Day fell short of passing by one vote. According to the North Dakota news media, the purpose of the bill was to accommodate the state's growing tourism industry. Two bills are now making their way through the Minnesota Legislature that would prevent the public education school year from starting before Labor Day.

During the past few elections, state officials have forced accountability for tax increases on local officials. Of course, the state also took over all public education funding and may have fallen short in the accountability department itself because its financial commitment to education has fallen a bit short. In any event, in view of demands for increased local accountability and their own shortcomings, it is surprising that state officials want to take more local control away from locally elected officials.

The "school start" bills making their way through the Legislature state that, except for learning programs during summer, flexible and certain learning-year programs, a district must not commence an elementary or secondary school year before Labor Day. It's not much of a departure from the current statute, which states that districts must not commence elementary or secondary schools before Sept. 1 of any year.

What's so wrong with allowing local districts to determine their own start dates? Why should less interest be vested in locally-elected officials? In the final analysis, local officials are closer voters. If they make a poor decision, they are more likely to be held accountable than regionally-elected state officials. Additionally, it is becoming increasingly evident that what's good for the large urban areas is not always in the best interest of rural areas. In the past, children may have been needed to help during harvest times, so school start dates were based on harvest. Today, at least in North Dakota, some feel the school start date should be based on the needs of a growing tourism and service industry. Certainly, times change and school districts should change with the times, but would this be the right change for Thief River Falls? Would it be the right thing to do for Minneapolis?

Perhaps it's time to revisit the entire issue of school start dates. What should public school start dates be based on, and who should set those dates?

Keep fighting that fight governor

Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty is to be applauded for his passion and determination. He has stood up to the prescription drug industry and continues to do so. His latest proposal, which seeks an arrangement with American Indian tribes in northwestern Minnesota and Canada, could provide citizens of the United States with affordable prescription drugs.

The latest chapter in this saga occurred when the drug companies threatened to shut down the drug reimportation pipeline that has been popular in Minnesota. Pawlenty sidestepped them again by proposing this new venture which would be accomplished through American Indian tribal status as sovereign nations.

In the world of prescription drugs and drug reimportation, predictions of contamination and substitution that have played on fears have been largely unrealized, and depending on who you talk to, prescription drug prices are probably higher than they should be, perhaps even unfairly high. Nevertheless, let's make sure adequate safety procedures are in place before embarking on this new venture.

Heart of a tsunami

In a local fundraising effort at Challenger Elementary School, students raised $1,826.57 for victims of the tsunami in December 2004. It's the latest example of a local fundraising effort for projects and events that have taken place outside of our little community. It is not the first, nor I doubt, the last fundraising effort to be conducted on behalf of the victims of the tsunami. Churches, church groups, high school students, college students and even elementary school students got into the spirit, Spirit? The theme for that Valentine's week at Challenger Elementary School was "Give from the Heart." That's a theme that resonates well with residents of this community.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Let counties have a say over forest trails

To the Editor:

After reading the February 16 issue of the Warroad Pioneer, I maybe should have been satisfied with the "No Show Stumpf." It appears the four senators from northern Minnesota may have written their letter over happy hour of one of the local establishments in St. Paul, particularly the sentence where they say, "Warroad is not like Brainerd and Roseau County." It appears at the time of the writing that they weren't sure if Warroad was in Lake of the Woods County and that Roseau County was some place near Brainerd. They go on to say that they would like the forest to go to managed status.

Managed status would still give the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) the ability to close roads. I believe the people of northern Minnesota should be fighting to keep all trails open. Taking this issue back to St. Paul could put it at risk of coming back closed.

I see the big problem of the issue at hand is in the last sentence of the letter, which states, "This is a sensible solution and one the DNR and the Legislature should adopt this session." I don't recall ever seeing the DNR on the ballot. These folks that have been elected allowed the DNR to get its present power status to where it doesn't think it has to give a documented reason for closing a trail. Hopefully, it allows the county commissioners and local people to have some say in the trails that it is proposing to close.

Russell Walker
Roseau County Commissioner

An unsatisfied postal customer in TRF

To the Editor:

On Jan. 18 at 5 p.m., I mailed a birthday card with a gaming certificate to my uncle Inar Mikkelson for his birthday on Jan. 20. This was mailed at the Post Office to a residence that is located only eight miles west of town. Unfortunately, it has to go to Grand Forks, N.D., and back. As of this date (Jan. 28), it has not been delivered, yet.

Where could it be? Is it still stuck in the bottom of a mail bag or has it been eaten up by the new automated postal machine?

This also happened last April when I mailed a birthday card to my son-in-law in Maple Grove. He received that card a few weeks before the birthday card I sent to daughter, Diane, in June. The Pony Express did better.

Albert E. Cork
Thief River Falls

Editor's note: This letter was shared with the local Postmaster Gary Savaloja. Savaloja responded that it is always a concern to them when they hear of delayed mail. He added that there are several reasons Mr. Cork's letter may have been delayed - weather, addressing issues, and even the occasional postal error. The Post Office contacted Mr. Cork and began working with him to determine what may have caused this problem.

Hope that Minnesota will re-establish its commitment to care for vulnerable persons

To the Editor:

When I testified before the Senate Health and Human Services Committee at the Minnesota State Capitol on Tuesday this week, I said that Lutheran Social Service (LSS) has struggled to maintain important services because of budget cuts two years ago.

We closed homes in six counties for persons with developmental disabilities in Minnesota and froze staff salaries, making it harder to attract employees to carry out this essential care. We also closed two shelters for kids, one in Brainerd and one in St. Paul. Those are just two examples.

Now, we are facing a new budget cycle, one that calls for additional cuts to human services. If those cuts are passed, July 1, 2005 will not be day one, but day 731 of budget cuts to people with important human needs.

Just before Christmas, LSS received a $1,000 check from a Marine in Afghanistan. This young soldier wanted to say thanks for the support he received from LSS when he was homeless and living under a bridge in Duluth. He, like thousands of other homeless youth whom LSS has served over many years, learned that we believe in him. We encouraged him to embark on a journey of hope with us. He did, and now he serves his country in a dangerous place.

Our work with him was paid for through grants LSS received from the state of Minnesota, the federal government, the United Way and other philanthropic sources. But mostly, government dollars made it possible for us to serve him.

Now, government is in retreat at a time when there is so much need.

The pullback is so unnecessary. It is my hope that the 2005 Legislature will adopt a budget that re-establishes Minnesota's commitment to care for vulnerable persons with dignity. There is an awful lot at stake.

President Bush's State of the Union was remarkable

by Sen. Mark Dayton

I have attended all of President Bush's State of the Union Addresses, and I thought that this year's was his best. He appeared relaxed and confident from his re-election victory, and he clearly enjoyed the enthusiastic responses (many of them bipartisan) from the audience. When the Iraqi woman hugged the mother of an American soldier who had [illegible]

Almost immediately after receiving the president's budget proposal, the budget committees of the Senate and the House will begin their work separately to prepare the budget which Congress will approve. It will set the overall revenue and expenditure limits for 2006.

The president's speech also lacked the details of his proposal to allow private retirement accounts to replace part of future Social Security benefits. He did make clear that people now receiving Social Security retirement, disability or survivors' benefits and present workers age 55 and older would [illegible] president's plan would significantly cut future benefits for retirees now under the age of 55. While he did not endorse a particular benefit-reducing scheme, he did cite the recommendation of former Minnesota Congressman Tim Penny from the three proposed by the Presidential Commission on which he served. By that formula change, workers now 30 years old would have their Social Security benefits cut by one-fourth when they retire. People age 20 today would receive benefit cuts by over one-third when they eventually retire. Those cuts would occur, [illegible] private retirement accounts. [illegible] ment accounts, plus 3 percent annual interest. They could then select one of several investment plans approved by the federal government. If their investment returns, after administrative costs and fees, exceeded their withdrawals from Social Security and interest, they would have more money for their retirements. If the returns were not so high, they would have less retirement income.

Either way, however, their combined incomes from investments and Social Security would be less than now proposed under the present system because of the across-the-board cuts for all future retirees. Thus, the president is proposing to "solve" the Social Security system's [illegible] retirees.

Governor needs to stop playing games with state's rural colleges

by Sen. Keith Langseth
Glyndon

It's interesting to hear Gov. Tim Pawlenty refer to talk of closing college campuses like University of Minnesota-Morris or U of M-Crookston as "fear mongering." Those were the governor's words this week when he was interviewed on a Crookston radio station.

The governor didn't mention the fact that when he was majority leader of the House just a few years ago, he was an author of legislation to study closing campuses in rural Minnesota. More recently, the governor's Republican colleague, Sen. Geoff Michel of Edina, has called for closing campuses in rural Minnesota in order to dedicate more resources for colleges in the Twin Cities. And another Republican, Sen. Claire Robling of Prior Lake, has talked about closing some rural campuses to give funds to the governor's plan for a new university in Rochester.

The colleges in rural Minnesota mean jobs in their host communities, and prepare talented, educated students to be in the workforce for the businesses in our region. It's time for the governor and his colleagues to stop playing games with our future.

Penas wants to hear from area residents

As the 2005 Legislative session begins, Rep. Maxine Penas wants to know how the public feels about several issues that will be making news at the Capitol.

"We are in for an interesting session as we try to solve the state budget deficit, improve our roadways, fund public education, control spiraling health costs, address uses of our public land, along with other concerns," Penas said. "One of the best ways to gauge how the public feels on these and other issues is by completing my session survey. I encourage everyone to respond."

Penas' 2005 Legislative Questionnaire will be inserted in an upcoming edition of the Northern Watch (March 5). Once completed, it can be mailed directly to Penas.

"Those interested in seeing the survey results can keep an eye on their local newspaper this spring," Penas said. "Otherwise, I can e-mail you a copy. Just send your e-mail address to rep.maxine.penas@house.mn."

Penas represents District 1A in the Minnesota House of Representatives. She can also be reached at 1-888-727-0979.

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

THE NEWS, JOHN W. EASTMAN, PUBLISHER FEBRUARY 23, 1905
THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA

Says Wylie Is With Us

"T. P. Smidesang, one of the enterprising young businessmen of Wylie, was in the city last week. Mr. Smidesang stated that the people of Wylie, as a general rule, were mostly in favor of Thief River Falls for the county seat, and that the vote of that section will show this when it comes to the election. The News will keep Mr. Smidesang posted during the campaign."

State After Settlers
Putting a Stop to Timber Trespassers North of Here

"County Surveyor Wood was down from Middle River country to spend Sunday with his family. In company with Special Agent Hays, Mr. Wood is working for Auditor Iverson looking after trespassers on state land in that vicinity.

"Mr. Wood states that they have found only a few cases of trespass and they were small. They did find, however, that quite a number of portable sawmills had been set up adjoining tamarac and spruce lands belonging to the state and the indications were that, had it not been for their arrival, that quite a good deal of timber would have been cut. Thus far they looked over the state's land in the towns of Cedar, Spruce Valley, Como and three unorganized towns north of these. They will be employed about a month longer in Marshall county.

"In cases where they have found trespass the matter has been reported to the state auditor together with the names of the trespassers. What action Auditor Iverson will take is not known but it is quite likely that the parties will be allowed to settle with the state at a reasonable figure."

Names of Enough
Most Everyone Has Signed Thief River Falls Petition

"Not including the city of Thief River Falls or any of the reservation, the petition now has some over 1,100 signatures. It is estimated that considerable over 500 signatures can be secured on the reservation if sufficient time is taken and about 600 in this city. Taking everything into consideration, the additional names Thief River Falls expects to get, our petition will have nearly 2,500 names when it is presented. More names have been secured in the southern part of the county than it was thought possible, and the people of Thief River Falls have received considerable encouragement where they did not look for support.

"As yet Red Lake Falls has not started the circulation of the remonstrance to any great extent and the people down there are said to be divided as to whether it will be wise to circulate a remonstrance and not secure enough signatures to kill our petition or whether to go on and have an early election.

"Of course the people up here don't care what action Red Lake Falls takes. Everyone up here has on the 'smile that won't come off' and are content to let the down river town do a little worrying."

Jumps the Track
Peculiar Accident Near Ives Last Week

"Last Friday afternoon the caboose attached to the freight train en route from this city to Crookston got a very queer notion and as the train was running along very smoothly near the little station of Ives without any notice or warning of any description, severed all connection with the rest of the train, cut three very graceful curves in the form of somersaults in the air, and landed in the ditch.

"Conductor C. R. Keller was in charge of the train, John Berg and George Stiltz were the brakemen, all of whom were in the caboose when it left the track. No one was hurt seriously, although the conductor was shaken up and bruised a little more than the brakemen.

"How the car could leave the track, turn three distinct somersaults in the air and then light without demolishing the car entirely and killing the occupants is puzzling the heads of the many railroad boys in the city.

"The track was in perfect condition as the rest of the train passed safely over the spot of the accident. The caboose used was what is known among the railroad boys as a 'dinky', the lightest that are put on the road and this, it is thought, was the cause of its sudden departure from the rails. There are very few of the small cars used in this section now as they are generally considered too light for the hard service. A heavier one had been on this run, up to about two weeks ago when a lighter one was substituted.

"The fact that the three occupants of the car escaped with only a few bruises and a general shaking up is most fortunate and the boys are being congratulated by their many friends."

Have a Burglar Alarm

"The Citizens State Bank has had a burglar alarm installed in their vault this week. The vault of the bank is all lined with steel and this is charged with electricity. If it is in any way disturbed, it immediately rings a large gong, which will make enough noise to arouse people anywhere in the vicinity of the bank."

FROM THE PAGES OF THE TIMES

50 YEARS AGO • FEBRUARY 23, 1955

Fierce Blizzard Hit Area Last Weekend

"One of the fiercest blizzards of the past several years hit the Red River Valley Saturday night and Sunday, and traffic on the highways was effectively tied up as a result of drifted roads and near-zero visibility.

"The snowfall, measured at four inches on the KTRF gauge, piled up in huge drifts, and gave snowplows their first real workout of the current winter. Most of the main roads had been opened up by Monday evening.

"Bus lines cancelled their runs out of Thief River Falls Sunday due to poor visibility, but were back on the normal schedule Monday. Train schedules were only slightly delayed by the storm.

"Thief River Falls schools were closed Monday, and the Washington's birthday holiday celebration scheduled for Tuesday was cancelled. Several rural schools in the area also were closed Monday.

"Highest temperature recorded during the past week was 35 last Thursday and 33 Friday, while Tuesday morning the mercury plummeted to a low of 22 below zero."

500 Served By Company F At Pancake Supper

"An unexpectedly large total of nearly 500 persons attended the pancake supper served Friday evening in the armory by members of Company F of the National Guard. Many diners had to stand in line for a considerable period before being served, and Warrant Officer Ivan Bundy said that this will be eliminated at future similar events by issuing numbered tickets. Proceeds of the supper will be used to purchase needed equipment for the armory kitchen."

Airline Provides Special Low Fare

"A special low round-trip fare between Thief River Falls and Minneapolis went into effect last week on North Central Airlines and will continue until May 29, it was announced by Chet Matthews, in charge of the local office.

"The new rate, effective for three days, plus the day of departure, provides for a round-trip fare of $29.85 plus tax, compared the regular fare of $37.90 plus tax.

"Departure time from Thief River Falls is 5:41 p.m. and from Minneapolis, 2:30 p.m."

Council Puts Off Hearing On Power Status to Monday

"The public hearing on means of meeting the steadily increasing demand for electric power in Thief River Falls, originally scheduled for Friday evening, February 25, has been deferred to Monday evening, February 28, at 8 o'clock, it was announced today by Carl Gjernes, president of the city council.

"The postponement, he added, was due to the fact that several persons who had planned to be present will be in attendance at the state high school hockey tournament in St Paul.

"All interested persons are invited to be present Monday evening to make known their views," Gjernes said."

Andrew Grinley Features at Friday Pep Assembly

"Andrew V. Grinley, Lincoln High's Al Jolson, was featured at the pep assembly which was held last Friday afternoon in preparation for the Bemidji game. To the tune of 'I May Be Wrong But I Think You're Wonderful' played by Violet Rhodegaard, Mr. Grinley put on his impression of the coach and team, who were all seated on the assembly stage. Judging by the students' hearty applause and demand for an encore, the number went over big.

"Jim Warner, rooter king, gave a review of the games played with Bemidji, after which Coach Hays was called upon to speak. Humor was persistent in his voice probably due to the fact that it was Valentine's Day. However, in a serious vein he urged student support at the Saturday game.

"Another unusual novelty of the afternoon was Jim's calling upon some girl to give her opinion of the team. Katherine Patton, being the one chosen, genially complied, saying, 'I think the team's great!! And most of the school spirit is really among the girls even though the boys don't think so!'

"Rip Dablow, Roy Lonson and Arnold Rustad were also called upon to give their opinion of the coming games and players."

Northern Pacific Takes Control

"THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS: There have been well-founded rumors in circulation of late to the effect that the Great Northern has disposed of this branch to the Northern Pacific. The two roads are practically one and it is said that in the future, commencing in a short time, passenger trains will leave St. Paul, run over the main line of the Northern Pacific as far as the Winnipeg Junction and from there on up to Fertile, then to Red Lake Falls and through this city to Greenbush. This would give us a much more direct route to St. Paul and would make stronger competition for the Soo.

"In this connection it may be stated that about a month ago the division superintendent of the Northern Pacific was up over this branch, and only last week the Northern Pacific roadmaster made a trip up over this branch with the Great Northern roadmaster. Just why these officials should make this trip unless something like the above was going into effect, would be hard to explain.

"Tuesday a number of surveyors in the employ of the Northern Pacific line arrived here and did considerable surveying about town. Of course they would give out no information regarding their work."

Strandquist News

F. Myrtle Vagle • 436-2133

Visitors at Judy Kleinvachter's home this week were Marie Steffen of Argyle, Joan Gehrls, Vance, Kelly, Amanda and Jessica Lefrooth, Jim Fredricks of Warren and June Kasprowicz. On Tuesday, she took June Severson to Irene's Cafe in Strandquist for Irene's famous potato dumplings. On Sunday they joined a number of folks to feast there on the "Smorgasbord".

Pearl Thompson and I enjoyed the evening at Elsie Lefrooth's home on Sunday. We tried playing "Upwords" but it was a bit brain taxing and "Rummocubo" went easier for these ladies. We had spent a long day and a party in in the afternoon.

An A type flu is making the rounds and is quite serious. A friend, Norma Bristling, who had been fighting cancer for a long time, died last week and will be buried Tuesday. My cousin Ole Thompson died suddenly Thursday evening and his funeral is also Tuesday. He was always such a gentle person and was "love" personified. We sure will miss his smiles.

LaVern and Sharon Rasmussen from Detroit Lakes visited with Pearl Thompson and me on Friday afternoon. They had spent the forenoon at Isaac and Betsy Thompson's home.

I had lunch with Gladys Rynning in Hallock on Saturday and later I visited at the nursing home. She had crocheted some doilies for me which I will use under the plants in the window. I also stopped at Hanson's Nursery and bought some plant food. I can hardly wait until they will have all their plants blooming again.

Sunday was short-sleeve weather and the water was running down the sidewalk. Today, after just a peek by the sun early this morning, it hasn't reached 32 above, but the "Garden Gate" magazine, compliments of Sonny and Janet as part of my Valentine, has set me thinking about flowers and garden all day.

Ralph Engelstad basketball arena? Visitors to the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls this weekend may have had to take a moment to look twice. When the Section 8A hockey tournament at the arena concluded Thursday evening, staff and Sentence to Serve (STS) crews converted the floor into a basketball court for the Section 8A girls east and west semifinal basketball tournament. Crews started at about 10:30 p.m. and had completed the transformation by 8:30 a.m.

A double take...

Welcome to the Ralph Engelstad basketball arena

by David Hill
Editor

Visitors to the Ralph Engelstad Arena, Thief River Falls, on Friday, Feb. 25, may have had to pause to take a second look. No longer a hockey arena, it was now a basketball arena.

"Wow," said Madelyn Vigen, parks and recreation director for Thief River Falls. When she walked into the arena on Friday morning she said she couldn't believe it.

Thursday, of course, over 3,500 people had packed into the Ralph Engelstad Arena - Thief River Falls to watch the Section 8A match between the Thief River Falls and Warroad hockey teams. Less than 10 hours after the game had ended, the arena had been converted into a basketball arena.

To anyone who may have visited the arena on Friday morning after watching the game Thursday night, the change would have seemed, well...shocking.

Tom Goddard, general manager at the arena for Ralph Engelstad Arena Events, said that while it may have seemed effortless, they had been planning the change for three weeks. They had also gone to the Ralph Engelstad Arena - Grand Forks to obtain a layout plan for the floor and take some pictures of the floor.

Of course, there was the added motivating factor of knowing they had to be prepared to host the Section 8A Girls East and West Semi Finals on Saturday. In other words, the switch from hockey arena to basketball arena had to be made fairly quickly.

The process began almost as soon as the hockey game ended. Two forklifts lifted the glass out, and a one-inch-thick synthetic matt was laid down. After that, the wood floor, which came from the Ralph Engelstad Arena - Grand Forks, and bears the University of North Dakota Fighting Sioux logo, went down. Then, there was the not-so-small matter of bringing in additional seating and bleachers, setting up the "portable" basketball hoops,

City keeps Barzen Ave. project, for now

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Should it stay, or should it go? That question was probably on the minds of Thief River Falls City Council members at their Feb. 22 meeting.

After a discussion regarding improvements to Barzen Avenue, south of First Street, the council approved ordering plans and specifications for the 2005 Street, Sidewalk and Utilities Improvement Project. However, the council decided to approve the estimated $836,000 plan with the potential to eliminate the Barzen Avenue project at a later date.

Adjacent to the Arctic Cat and Digi-Key properties, that section of Barzen Avenue is currently gravel. It spans an area adjacent to County Ditch 70, which is maintained by Pennington County.

In the event that portion of Barzen Avenue is improved, it would have 16 inches of gravel and pavement to aid car traffic. Curb and gutter would not placed along the roadway.

Arctic Cat requested an extension of six weeks in order to let its consultant look at drainage near Barzen Avenue, Public Works Director Ron Lindberg said. The company has hired Blake Carlson, an engineer with JOR Engineering of Crookston, to study the drainage in that area.

Lindberg explained to council members that it would be harder to take out the Barzen Avenue project and add it to the improvements project later. However, it would be easier to delete the project before bidding occurred.

It is prudent to look at Arctic Cat's study because it may show the city that it is missing something, Lindberg said.

"Arctic Cat does not believe the road should be improved," said Ron Ray, vice president of operations for the company. Yet, if the city decided to move forward with the Barzen Avenue project, the company has agreed to contribute $25,000.

If the road were improved, Ray noted that the city needs to first study the risks associated with the improvement. "You're about to spend $150,000 in an area you don't

Wal-Mart

City amends its overall plan

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

The future is looking a little brighter for a proposed Wal-Mart Supercenter. At its Feb. 22 meeting, the Thief River Falls City Council approved amending the 1995 Comprehensive Plan in relationship to the site.

The Comprehensive Plan is an advisory document to help city leaders plan for the future. The council amended the plan to define the proposed Wal-Mart site as potentially "commercial."

In the past, the plan defined a section of that area as potentially "commercial." Another portion along Nelson Drive was defined as potentially "medium/high density residential" for apartment-type housing.

Before a conditional use permit can be approved for the Wal-Mart site, that area had to be designated as potentially "commercial."

Currently, the property is zoned agricultural (AG). Jake and Anne Barnick, who own the property, have requested a zoning change to General Business District (C-2) on behalf of the Wal-Mart Corporation.

Under C-2 zoning, shopping centers are a conditional use. As a result, the Barnicks have also requested a conditional use permit on behalf of the Wal-Mart Corporation.

Public hearings were scheduled March 1 about those requests. Scheduled during a Planning Commission meeting, those hearings were a legal requirement.

City Council approved the Valley Home Addition Final Plat. Valley Home plans to construct an addition on its building.

Lynn Geller, Valley Home administrator, noted Feb. 23 that the home plans to construct a 24-bed Alzheimer's disease, assisted living unit. Valley Home hopes to break ground in May for the addition, and construction is expected to be completed nine months later.

County studies options for CD1

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Pennington County Engineer Mike Flaagen outlined two options for resolving County Ditch (CD) 1's drainage problems at last week's Pennington County Board of Commissioners meeting.

Flaagen met with Miron Jesme of the Red Lake Watershed District and officials from Mn/DOT and Thief River Falls to discuss plans for improving the drainage of CD 1.

Flaagen first presented a plan to install a storm sewer that would run from Greenwood St. to the Red Lake River. HDR Engineering would size the pipe for the sewer. Also included with the first plan would be efforts to improve the ditch running north of Aaseby Trailer Court. Flaagen noted that installation of storm sewers will lower the level of the ditch and improve drainage for CD 1 and drainage along Highway 59.

The option presented by Flaagen would be to install a smaller storm sewer from Greenwood St. to the Red Lake River. In addition, all drainage south of Pennington County Road 8 will be diverted to the Challenger road ditch.

No action was taken by the board during Tuesday's meeting. The options will be further discussed during next week's joint meeting between the Thief River Falls City Council and the Pennington County Board of Commissioners.

Engineer's items

- The board carried a motion to seek an appraisal of the county compost facility.
- Flaagen attended the City of Thief River Falls public hearing for 2005 street and utilities projects. Flaagen attended the meeting to answer questions regarding the county's view on proposed Barzen Ave. improvements.

Flaagen reported that Arctic Cat is reluctant to participate. He added that Arctic Cat is also concerned about the potential lowering of Barzen Ave., which could lead to

Challenger takes on new playground challenge

Old wooden playground equipment to be taken down this spring

by David Hill
Editor

Some playground apparatus at Challenger Elementary School in Thief River Falls will be coming down this spring. While Parents, Teachers, and Students in Partnership (PTSP) and the local chapter of the Elks Club have already formed a partnership to replace the apparatus, help is always welcome.

The playground apparatus coming down this spring is located on the red or second and third grade side of the school. It's coming down because the wooden structure doesn't meet state health and safety requirements, and has resulted in some minor injuries. For many children, the apparatus is also too low to the ground.

Challenger Principal Patrick Marolt explained that PTSP and the Elks Club are supporting a proposal to replace the equipment. The multiphase proposal is expected to cost about $55,000.

Marolt said the new playground equipment would be all-inclusive. He explained that it would include many different pieces that would be accessible to all children

Hundreds of children use the playground equipment at Challenger Elementary School every day. It's an integral part of the day at Challenger and all elementary schools. Not only does it help develop coordination, but socialization skills, as well.

Adding new playground equipment at Challenger Elementary School has been an ongoing effort ever since the school was built. Fundraising for this particular project began last year when it became evident that the apparatus needed to be replaced.

Some of the funding for the project has come from the PTSP Carnival, which is held every spring. Last year, PTSP donated $12,000 to the project.

Mary Fran Twistol, volunteer coordinator at Challenger Elementary School and representative of PTSP said PTSP plans to donate funds to the project again.

The Elks Club has also committed $10,000 to the project. Floyd Erickson of the Elks Club said the Elks club was looking for a project. "The Elks Club likes to do this sort of project because it touches so many children."

Wooden playground equipment at Challenger Elementary School will be removed this spring. Eventually, it will be replaced with newer equipment that meets specific health and safety requirements. A fundraising effort to replace the equipment is now underway.

Older worker program changes broaden eligibility for Experience Works Services

The Department of Labor has changed the eligibility requirements for the nationwide Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP), which is operated by Experience Works. The changes, effective in January of this year, mean that more low-income older people will be eligible for the training and employment assistance offered by Experience Works.

Currently, Experience Works has openings in Kittson, Marshall, Roseau and Pennington counties, to assist low-income, unemployed individuals age 55 and older in gaining paid work experience, training and employment services.

Any low-income seniors who live in these counties and are interested in learning new skills are encouraged to apply. Seniors who may have met with Experience Works staff in the past and were over the eligible income at that time, should again contact an Experience Works representative to see if the changes now make them eligible.

For more information, call the regional office at 1-800-450-5627.

Alby joins TRF Police Department

Ginger Alby

The Thief River Falls Police Department has a new member on its police force. Ginger Alby joined the department Feb. 15.

Even though she recently joined the department as a police officer, Alby isn't a stranger. She recently interned for the police department. Alby has also worked on and off as a Pennington County dispatcher, most recently from August 2004 until she accepted a position as a Thief River Falls police officer.

Alby decided to go into law enforcement for a combination of reasons. She enjoys helping people, working with kids and being in an occupation in which one never knows what the day will bring, she said.

Plus, Alby realized she wanted to work as a police officer after working in dispatch and wanting go on calls. Her work as an emergency medical technician intermediate (EMTI) also led to her to consider a job as a police officer.

Alby is a good addition to the department, Police Chief Kim Murphy said.

A 2004 graduate of the law enforcement program at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls, Alby also works as an EMTI for Great Plains EMS. Her prior work experience includes working as a prevention specialist at Red Lake Falls schools. In that position, she talked with students about violence and tobacco use.

Alby lives in Thief River Falls with her husband and two daughters.

Requirements to become a police officer

In order to become a police officer, an individual has to take the Police Officer Standards and Training licensing exam after two years of college, Murphy said.

Upon passing the exam and paying a licensing fee, an individual is eligible to be hired by a police department. Then the person completes an application for a position. The person is interviewed and ranked. The candidate may be interviewed again if there were a tie between the best candidates for a position or in the event another position is vacated.

A background investigation is conducted after the candidate is deemed the best applicant for the position. Neighbors, lenders, clergy, parents and others are interviewed about the potential police officer, Murphy said.

After a satisfactory background check, the candidate endures a psychological exam that includes written parts and interviews. He/she also undergoes a physical that includes tests for eyes, mobility, strength and hearing. A drug test is also included in the physical.

After passing those exams, the candidate is fingerprinted and may then be offered the job. Upon accepting the job, the candidate takes the oath of office. However, the candidate cannot wear a police uniform until the POST Board has validated both the person's license and that the person has met the criteria to become a police officer, Murphy noted.

In Loving Memory of

Vickie Janelle (Hesse) Olson

July 1965 – March 2003

We didn't understand why God would call your name.
In life we loved you dearly,
in heaven we do the same.
It broke our hearts to lose you,
you did not go alone;
for part of us went with you,
the day God called you home.
You left us wonderful memories, your love is still our guide;
and though we cannot see you,
you are always at our side.
Our family chain was broken, and nothing seems the same;
but as God calls us one by one,
we'll be together again!

Corey Olson chosen as MSHSL student advisor

Corey Olson

Corey Olson, son of Steven and Karen Olson from Oklee, has been chosen to be the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) Student Advisory Representative from Region 8. He is one of 16 students statewide selected for this honor.

Olson attends the Red Lake County Central High School in Oklee.

"Because of the District's support, I attended my first meeting on Nov. 3, 2004 at the MSHSL office in Minneapolis. The school sponsored my stay in a nearby hotel so I wouldn't have to get up so early.

"When I was at the meeting, the first order of business was to take our official pictures (exactly like the one here) for the MSHSL newsletter and to be hung up on their wall. Then we introduced ourselves and got right to business talking about sports situations towards officials and coaches on issues such as profanity, sportsmanship, respect, etc. – everything that should be stressed in sports. The meeting ran from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Lunch was courtesy of MSHSL and I even got a free jacket (a nice one).

"All in all, the MSHSL Student Advisory Committee is perhaps the best thing that has happened to me. Because of this responsibility I learned leadership skills, politics, and get to make a positive impact on sports and fine arts in Minnesota. I have one more meeting this year and another year ahead of me. I am excited and also ready. I will try my hardest to represent the students in my Region and my school."

Dayton supports funding Essential Air Service

U.S. Senator Mark Dayton and a bipartisan group of his Senate colleagues recently sent a letter to Senators Judd Gregg (R-NH) and Kent Conrad (D-ND), the leaders of the Senate Budget Committee, urging them to protect the Department of Transportation's Essential Air Service program in the FY06 budget resolution. The program, which helps provide commercial air service to communities that would otherwise be unable to afford it, serves approximately 100 rural communities across the country, including Chisholm, Hibbing, and Thief River Falls in Minnesota.

The president's FY 2006 budget proposal would eliminate commercial air service to 27 communities, and would require other communities to pay up to hundreds of thousands of dollars to maintain their commercial air service.

"Many people living in Greater Minnesota would rather fly out of their regional airport than the Minneapolis-St. Paul Airport," said Dayton. "Our state's excellent regional airports are vital links – to the rest of our country and the world – that must be sustained. I will do everything I can to preserve the federal funding that maintains the existing air service throughout Minnesota."

In the letter, Dayton also requested that funding for the program remain, at a minimum, at the same $102 million level as for the current fiscal year.

Congress established the Essential Air Service program in 1978 to ensure that communities with commercial air service before deregulation would continue to have access to scheduled service.

PARENTING TIPS

Learning About Big and Little

There are many experiences in daily life which you can use to help preschool children learn the words and idea of size. For example, when you're doing the laundry, ask your child whose clothes are bigger, his or yours? Have him help to put all the big towels in one pile and the small ones in another or in separating all the baby's small clothes from his larger ones.

When you are shopping, ask him to hand you the larger of two boxes or the smaller of two cans of a certain brand. When putting his toys away on a shelf, have him try lining them up from the smallest to the largest, or put all the small ones on one shelf and the big ones on another in order of their size.

As you use the words, you introduce him to them and to the ideas of long and short, thick and thin, heavy and light, and so on. Most children are working on these concepts between the ages of 2 and 4.

(Dunn & Hargitt, October 1997. Contributed by the Early Childhood Family Education Department of School District 564.)

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk with your child about what you are doing throughout the day as suggested above. That is the best way for your child to learn skills and concepts that he/she will need for school and for life!

Farm Management Minute

Using your 2005 cash flow plan

by Mark Berg
Farm Business Management

In farming, the cash flow plan can sometimes be overlooked as a powerful tool in helping your business have a successful year. The cash flow plan we design, with the many farmers with whom we work, is really three statements in one: a concise business plan, marketing plan and budget. The cash flow plan you make for 2005 should be derived from your personal/family goals and your business goals.

The cash flow plan can also be called a business plan. You determine what your business will produce. You know who needs the business' production and who will buy it. In your plan, you project how much the business will produce and what it will cost to produce it.

In the 2005 cash flow plan, you state when you will be selling commodities and for what price, which also makes it a marketing plan. Setting prices, targets and sales quantity target dates are essential and basic to a marketing plan. These prices and quantities are to be sold during a certain month and are based upon your historical knowledge, current trends, break-evens and financial needs. The marketing plan for the year is then set into the revenue side of your cash flow plan.

Your plan for 2005 is also clearly a budget. It states that the business will bring in a certain amount of revenue from sales and other farm income, which will in turn pay the production expense. It also projects inflows from money borrowed and capital sales. The inflow of these dollars, after production expenses and family living, shows how much of it is available to service debt and make capital improvements. If this plan has positive cash flow and all expenditures and outflows are covered, you will have a successful year.

It is always very challenging and rewarding to make a cash flow plan work, especially if you use it for the first time as your business guide. Try using it this year, comparing your monthly actual expenditures with the plan's projections.

For more information about farm business planning and making a plan for 2005, contact an instructor in your area by calling Northland Community and Technical College at 1-800-959-6282.

Down On The Farm

Eric Bergeson

The comments published in this column are intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. They are written by independent columnists and do not represent the opinion of the staff or management of The Times/Northern Watch.

The Minnesota legislature is trying to turn me into a criminal! If a recently proposed law passes and a K-9 unit barges into my house with a German Shepherd who knows how to find cold medicine, I'll soon be writing you from jail.

As most of you know, popular nose-clearing medicines, as well as rat poison, fertilizer, toilet bowl cleaner and other under-the-sink goodies are key ingredients in the making of meth, the drug which is cleaning out the budgets of law enforcement agencies across the rural Midwest.

Now the legislature is hoping to regulate how much cold medicine we can each hoard in an attempt to limit the manufacture of meth.

As a longtime hoarder of over-the-counter cold and allergy medications, I am considering cleaning out my medicine cabinet and turning it all into the sheriff before it is too late. A stint in prison is not on my to-do list, even if Martha Stewart has done her best to make incarceration fashionable.

As usual, the government's attempts to eradicate evil are as about as elegant as an elephant trying to stomp on a cobra. As usual, innocent people are going to bear the brunt, while guilty people desperate for a fix are going to find some other way to get their buzz.

To protect us from Islamic radicals, we have required our grandmas to practically undress before they get on a plane to see their grandkids. Now, to protect us from meth, we are going to require those same grandmas to sort through their medicine cabinet to make sure they don't exceed the cold medicine quota.

My medicine cabinet seems overloaded, but think of the octogenarian hypochondriacs who have had 40 more years than I to accumulate pills. We [illegible] deacons and [illegible] tossed in the clink [illegible] shepherds start [illegible]

It is true [illegible] says nothing [illegible] cold [illegible] that [illegible] some [illegible] an integral part of our [illegible]

However, when people think the public safety is threatened, they are quick to adjust their notion of what the Constitution allows. Even honest Abe Lincoln trampled all over traditional rights in order to win the Civil War.

For that reason, I do not plan to go constitutional over Sudafed. People aren't having a lot of luck invoking the Constitution lately, anyway. It is currently unpopular to insist upon one's right to do or say something unpopular.

Don't get me wrong, I am a fan of the Constitution and I wish it would pull out of its recent slump.

For one, I think the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment should apply to anything our government does, and not just on our shores. The Bill of Rights makes it abundantly clear that tying people to boards and dunking them until they are nearly dead is against the spirit, if not the letter, of the Constitution.

For another, I don't think we should litter up the constitution with amendments clearly aimed at unpopular but completely harmless minorities. We haven't done it before, and we shouldn't start now.

So, there are many rights we must maintain. However, given the threat that meth poses, the right to hoard a three month's supply of snuffle drugs isn't one of them.

Meth kills. One dose can hook you. Rehab doesn't seem to work. Meth addicts in search of a fix can suddenly turn into dangerous criminals no matter how innocent their past.

Our county jails are overflowing, and it is largely due to meth. Our social services are overloaded with neglected children, and it is largely due to meth.

We don't have terrorism to worry about out here in the hinterlands, but we do have a chemical problem [illegible] us from within.

So, until I come up with a better way of slowing the production and [illegible] of meth, I guess I will put up with Chuck's Big Brother limiting my Sudafed supply to two or three [illegible] of the little red pills per month.

Mentor Fire Department receives $52,740 grant

Sen. Norm Coleman announced Wednesday that city of Mentor firefighters will be better prepared to serve the emergencies of their citizens due to a $52,740 grant from the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Assistance to Firefighters Grant Program.

Mentor Volunteer Fire and Rescue will use the funds to purchase new breathing apparatuses for their firefighters.

"This is the second year we have received money from this program," said Bruce Roed of the Mentor Fire Department. "We are a small community operating on a small budget; this grant means a lot to us."

Operations and Firefighter Safety grants from DHS provide $750 million to fire departments throughout the U.S. The funding will be used for fire departments to purchase new equipment for firefighters, training programs, wellness and fitness, and modifications to fire stations and facilities.

"The men and women in our fire departments will have access to better equipment and new training techniques that will improve the level of service they provide to the community," said Coleman. "The duty of our firefighters requires them to be in harm's way, and their willingness to help others in the face of danger is to be applauded. I will continue to support and work for grants like these that help support Minnesota's brave firefighters."

"The Assistance to Firefighters grants represent a major effort by the federal government to ensure that the nation's firefighters continue to have the basic capability they require to do their jobs, improve safety, and save lives," said David Paulison, administrator of the DHS Fire Administration.

QUESTION OF THE MONTH

Why did you take away more parking at the library? Do you have any parking spaces at all?

The library did not ask to have parking taken away. It was a decision made by the City because of the traffic flow patterns and the problems that have been occurring there. There are currently 11 regular parking spaces in the library lot if you count on both the library and Dean's Foods sides and an additional space designated for handicapped parking only. On streetside, there are two parking spaces (must be midsized cars or under and abutted to fit two in there) that are available on Main Avenue except for 3-6 p.m. Monday-Friday. The building consultant noted a library servicing a population our size should have 50-90 easily accessible parking spaces for general and specialized public library services. Unfortunately, there is no way to expand our parking at this location at this time.

Winter wonderland

Many people seem to dislike winter, but why? Is it because it becomes cold and they are forced to do a little extra planning before they are able to leave the comfort of their homes? Or could it be because they do not want to have to worry about road and weather conditions? No matter where people live, there is/will be some hazard people will encounter; Northern Minnesota's just happens to be winter. Yet, people still find a way to complain about what the weather is like here; if they moved to another country or even state, they would have to encounter other environmental difficulties (tornadoes, volcanoes, hurricanes, famine, wars, tsunamis, earthquakes, flooding, just to name a few).

Earlier this year, thousands of people were drastically affected by the tsunami in Thailand – forcing them to start completely over. Last fall, many people living in Florida were forced to evacuate their homes during a large string of hurricanes, only to return to find the remains. Now, people are losing their homes and property because of mudslides in California. Yet, Minnesotans complain about the inconvenience that winter causes – icy roads, blizzards, and frosted windshields – it hardly seems to be comparable to that which other people have to endure.

Yes, it may be tough to live here during the winter, but it allows people to see things which others cannot – snow. Minnesotans are privileged to have a white Christmas, something others only dream about, and to be able to spend time creating snowmen, snow-angels, skiing, ice skating, having snowball fights, sledding, snowboarding and snowmobiling. Sure, these things can be done in a few other select states, but people there also have to face the same winter problems that people here face-in some cases even more. When people complain about the harshness they have to deal with every day, they seem to forget, or just do not care, about what other people have to go through.

Everybody should spend some time outside enjoying the wonderful aspects of this season-the season we endure every year. People should find an uncommon place to sit and simply enjoy what is before them. The way the trees glisten with ice covering the branches, the way the snow forms drifts around certain objects, and the way when the wind is quiet everything becomes still and peaceful. People are too busy complaining about what an inconvenience winter is to realize the marvelous scenes that are always present.

While you are having problems with the weather – stuck in slow-moving traffic, scraping windshields, or snowed in – take a little time to just look around to actually see what is there. It does not take long to open your eyes and see what winter's true beauty looks like. Make the most out of winter because it is like everything else in this world, it has a beginning and an end – life and death – before you know it, winter will be over.

...Cough up the sleeves, please

There's a flu stalking you at this very minute, and it isn't necessarily one particular type of flu that's after you. There are many flus going around. You can catch one of them, or you can catch many of them. You can even catch one after another. You see, the first flu will jump on you and make you ill and lower your immunity so that the others can come in and go to work on you too. It's a conspiracy.

If you haven't had any flu yet, you are lucky. Oh, don't be bragging that you won't get the flu because you had a flu shot. Many of these flus don't care one whit about a flu shot. They can get right through that little barrier and hit you hard.

Many of these flus are gifts from friends and relatives. They are dropped off on you like a fancy wrapped gift and you pick them up just like that, too. I think a lot of people think there is an unwritten law that if a person gives away his flu, it doesn't hit him as hard because it has found a new place for it to live. Or maybe it only seems that way because there are so many people out there who are so willing to share their flus with you.

So there you are, walking around healthy. Don't tell me you haven't noticed how anxious others are to give you a little kiss or a little hug or a nice handshake right after they've coughed all over themselves. And how does a person refuse, I'd like to know.

Speaking of coughing, I love to see the new way people cover their coughs nowadays. No, I really mean it - there is a new way to cover your cough and it is a good thing. People are coughing into their shoulders or arms now and it is better than coughing into a hand. I mean, go figure! You touch more stuff and more people with a hand than you do with your shoulder or your arm, right? Who is snuggling into your shoulder but maybe somebody who shouldn't be snuggling when you have the flu anyway?

See what I mean? Here you are, a raging nasty cough coming from deep within, just seething with germs, and you hold up your little fingers to catch the germies coming out. No - no - no! The germs either slip out between your fingers or else they settle into that hand so that the next person who comes along, "Hi, how are you?" (stick out hand here) who shakes hands with you, will get a handful of germs.

I don't know just what you do at your church, but at ours we share the sign of peace by shaking hands with those around us. Not to be antisocial, but I wish we wouldn't, at least until the end of the flu season. There is nothing worse than standing next to or ahead of or behind someone who has a nasty cough and is cough, cough, coughing into their hand all through the services. Then comes, "Now let us share a sign of peace with one another." Oh, my, what to do? If you're a nice, Christian person, you stick out your hand and smile sweetly and grab those germs with all the gusto you can muster and shake them up and down vigorously (maybe hoping that shaking will kill them?). Then, because you might not be as nice a person as you think, you make sure you shake hands vigorously with at least one other person, hoping against hope that the germs will shake off on them.

However, we now have another problem that arises after all that hand shaking. It is time for communion. What to do? At our church, we file up to receive communion by holding out our hands, left hand placed over right so that the right may be brought up from underneath to place the communion into our mouths. Back in the olden days, we were not allowed to touch the communion with our own hands, but the priest would place it on our tongues, which we stuck out at him.

Here I must tell you a little secret. Back in those olden days, altar boys would hold little golden plates, called patens, under our chins while this communion was being placed on our tongues, just in case the communion might fall to the floor, which would have been a bad thing. Some of the altar boys would make sure the patens came a little too close to some people's necks and give them a little poke with them which sometimes created a bit of havoc. Never mind that my sons were altar boys. Wouldn't they tell me if they had done anything so unholy, then?

Nevertheless, we are now receiving communion in our right hand. This is, of course, the hand that we used to shake hands with at least a dozen people, if not more, some of whom were coughing into those right hands just before we shook them. What to do?

Oddly, I've noticed that I've hardly ever gotten the flu on a Sunday afternoon or on Monday. I'm hum. I wonder if the atmosphere in church isn't taking care of the flu germs. How about we don't stop going to church or receiving communion? How about we go more often? And how about we remember to cough into our sleeves, too?

What is it?

There are many unique and different tools used on farms. This one will be on display at the Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village this summer when the Smithsonian Traveling Exhibit "Barn Again! Celebrating an American Icon" will be at the Village. Guess what this tool was used for.

Answer: This tool was used to remove horns from cattle. For obvious reasons, it is called a dehorner.

Meeting planned to stop Big Bog peat minin

A meeting to discuss how to stop a peat mining operation in the Big Bog near Red Lake will take place from 5:45 to 7:45 p.m. Tuesday, March 8, at the Aquila Building, in downtown Bemidji, 301 Second St. N.W.

The plan calls for the clear-cutting and then harvesting of peat in 800 acres of the bog 20 – some miles west of Big Falls, in the Pine Island State Forest, in the heart of the Big Bog.

It also calls for blasting the bedrock at the village of Margie on Highway 71, apparently as a source of materials for building roads through the fragile bog area to reach the mining site.

Bethany Lutheran Church to hold centennial celebration

A pancake and oyster stew brunch to celebrate the centennial of Bethany Lutheran Church will be held on March 6 after the 10 a.m. church service.

On March 7, 1905, a group of women from the eastside of the Red Lake River in Smiley Township met together, said their prayers and organized a home mission society. Their set goals were to provide Christian education for their children and to support missions, both foreign and domestic.

Sometime later, they had their fundraiser, an oyster stew dinner served at Emma B.B. Hammer's home. The oysters helped them earn the grand sum of $20. By the fall of 1906, this little group had provided the groundwork for the formation of Bethany Lutheran Church, rural Thief River Falls.

Throughout this year, Bethany Lutheran is celebrating the centennial of the work and witness of these pioneer women.

A freewill offering will be accepted.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: Does social security have any statistics about where people are paying in from. What mostly interests me are statistics about the working age population and SSA taxes paid in, not benefits going out.

A: The SSA Web site, www.socialsecurity.gov holds lots of statistical data. The individual state information, by county, you seek is at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/policy/docs/statcomps/eedata_sc/2000/index.html. Several information charts are there with data showing by sex, race, and age, the number of wage and salary workers and self-employed persons, the amount of their taxable earnings, and the amount they paid in Social Security and Medicare contributions. Some charts are by total state population, some provide specific county information. Nationally, in 2000, 153.5 million workers had earnings taxable under the Social Security program. About 138.7 million had only wages, 8.9 million had only self-employment income, and 6.0 million had both. Social Security taxable earnings totaled $4 trillion, which includes earnings up to then taxable maximum of $76,200. Social Security taxes totaled about $494 billion. For the same period, Medicare taxable earnings totaled $5 trillion and Medicare taxes totaled about $144 billion.

Did you know: On Feb. 5 a new Social Security online service, the i3368PRO, became available. The i3368PRO is the starting point for medical, social work and other professionals, attorney and other representatives, plus organizations assisting adults age 18 or older in applying for disability benefits.

Not a benefit application, the i3368PRO is an online report to provide information about the claimant's medical sources and treatments, and work and education history. It is found on the SSA website through the Attorneys, Representatives and Health Professionals section or http://www.socialsecurity.gov/thirdparties.htm. Already online, the version of this form used by people applying on their own is at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/applyfordisability/adult.htm or accessed through the disability portion of the Web site.

THIS IS SCHOOL BOARD RECOGNITION WEEK IN MINNESOTA.

The Minnesota School Boards Association (MSBA) has set February 28 - March 6 as School Board Recognition Week in Minnesota as a time to build awareness and understanding of the vital function an elected board of education plays in our society.

School District #564 of the Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire area is joining with other districts throughout the state to recognize the important contributions board members make to communities.

Minnesotans benefit every day from the dedicated energies and countless hours devoted by these public servants. School board members unselfishly contribute their time and talents toward the advancement of public education. They represent a continuing commitment to local citizen control and decision making in public education at a time when local control is being considerably curtailed by state and federal mandates.

The following men and women currently serve our school and community as members of our local board of education:

Chairman Steve Young is in his ninth year of service.

Vice Chair Randy Twistol is in his eighth year of service.

Clerk Barb Kalinoski is in her seventh year of service.

Treasurer Mike Spears is in his seventh year of service.

Director Jon Lindgren is in his third year of service.

Director Jenni Eriksen-Lane is in her first year of service.

Director Troy Bates is in his first year of service.

It is certainly appropriate that this week began with a statewide meeting in St. Paul as school board members and superintendents from around the state gathered to hear firsthand about the educational initiatives being presented at the Capitol this year. Individual meetings with senators and representatives occurred throughout the Capitol building and the State Office Building all during the day on Monday, February 28.

It will be my privilege at our board meeting Wednesday, March 2 (today), to present each of these individuals with a certificate from the MSBA and to thank them for their dedication to the students of our community and their tireless efforts on the students' behalf.

At an upcoming board retreat, these dedicated community leaders will again review our mission and focus as a school district and determine goals for the upcoming school year. This board remains focused on continuous improvement and providing leadership to a dedicated staff who provide exceptional learning opportunities to all our students.

I again want to thank this board of education and our entire staff and community for the privilege of serving with you to provide the very best educational opportunities we can, with the resources we are allocated, to all our children and young people in this community. May God richly bless you in all your efforts on their behalf.

Energy assistance still available from Tri-Valley

Tri-Valley Opportunity Council's Community Assistance Program has assistance for energy costs for households vulnerable to rising heating costs. Assistance amounts are based on the number of household members, the type of fuel, the actual fuel costs from the previous heating season and the household's previous three-month gross income. There is no asset limit.

Applications are available by calling Community Assistance Programs at 1-866-264-3729 or 1407 Erskine Ave., Crookston. Tri-Valley's Community Assistance Program serves West Polk, West Marshall and Norman counties.

Guidelines per household size are: one person and a three-month income of $4,704; two people and a three-month income of $6,152; three people and a three-month income of $7,599; four people and a three-month income of $9,047; and five people and a three-month income of $10,494.

The Crisis Program is also available if a person has a disconnect notice or a refusal of delivery. Even if an individual has applied for the program in the past and used that assistance, additional one-time assistance may be available.

Energy assistance-qualifying homeowners may also qualify for assistance for repairs or heating system replacement.

To date, Tri-Valley has approved 1,560 applications totaling $698,000. The average grant size has been over $440. Also, 233 crisis grants have been distributed thus far.

Kip McLean, Waiting for a heart transplant

Kip's daughter Kelly

It has been a long journey for Kip McLean and his family, worrying about how things will be from day to day. On Dec. 11, 2000, Kip's life changed for the worse. Only 40, he had a severe heart attack at Dakota Clinic while doing a DOT physical. He was transferred to Fargo, N.D., and put in ICU for a week. When he came back home, he started "doctoring" in Grand Forks, N.D. He would have kept doctoring in Fargo, but the drives were getting to be too stressful on him to keep going back and forth every two weeks. That's when the doctors decided to transfer Kip's medical records to Grand Forks.

There are many generations of congestive heart failure in Kip's family. His grandfather passed away at the age of 59. Kip's father passed away at the age of 36, and his older brother has also had heart problems. Kip wants to make sure his two daughters, Ashley and Kelly, get checkups every year on themselves.

Over the year (2000), Kip has had seven stents put in his heart. That kept him going for a while until it became evident that it was exhausting him. At this point, his heart was only functioning at 29 percent. Doctors knew Kip needed more than the stents, but couldn't do anything else at the time. Three years had passed of doctoring regularly and things weren't improving. The doctors realized his heart function was dropping, and in May 2003, they decided to put in a defibrillator. A defibrillator is a device that connects to your heart and if your heart would stop, it would shock the heart to restart it. He recovered well from the surgery, but when that was put in, his heart function was at 20 percent.

One more year had passed and the doctors in Grand Forks just couldn't find a way to help Kip out anymore than they had already, so the doctor referred him to the University of Minnesota. The doctors at Fairview Hospital are wonderful people. Two weeks went by with Kip doctoring in the cities, and the doctors figured out that he needed a bypass, so he had a five-vessel bypass surgery on Feb. 20, 2004. Kip's wife, Norma, and daughter Kelly sat, nervously waiting nine hours for Kip to get out of surgery. Waiting to hear how he was doing proved to be the most intense nine hours they had ever experienced.

Months went by with Kip having his good and bad days. There were times Kip was just too weak to even get out of bed even though he would try.

When Kip wakes up each morning, he wonders how his day will be.

On Dec. 29, 2004, Kip and his family were sitting in the living room having a conversation when all of a sudden he sat straight up with a worried look on his face, grabbed his chest and then blacked out. When he came to, his wife and daughter asked him if he was OK. Kip replied, "I just got the biggest shock of my life."

His worried family rushed him to the hospital. The doctor told him, "Kip, your defibrillator just saved your life." But the doctor couldn't figure out why Kip's defibrillator went off because all of his test results came back normal. The doctor decided to send him to the Twin Cities just in case of a malfunction. When in the Twin Cities, the doctors told him that his device was doing its job.

The doctors at Fairview knew that Kip needed a heart transplant, but before they could honestly say he could get a new heart, they had to see if he was qualified. The tests included a right catherization to check blood pressure to his heart, which they obtained by going through the jugular vein in his neck. They also checked his oxygen level and his heart function. He was at the hospital from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Looking over the test results, the doctor made up their minds: Kip was qualified to get a new heart.

The family is very thankful for the good news. As of January 2005, Kip is now on the second phase of the transplant list. The doctors are now preparing Kip and his family for the heart transplant. The doctors need to let them all know what will happen from here until he gets a new heart.

The waiting list for type O blood is generally two years. Kip was told that when they have found a heart, the doctors will call him. Kip will need to be in the Twin Cities within two hours, which means the immediate family will take a Lifelink helicopter or plane. The period of Kip's stay will be one week in ICU and another week in the hospital, providing there are no complications. Then he will have to rent an apartment for one month at a cost of $1,500, which he will have to pay along with cable, phone and electricity. Kip will be transferred to the hospital twice a week for checkups and a few biopsies to make sure there is no rejection to the new heart.

Kip has had to make changes in his life: eating habits, stress-free living, and because his immune system is so weak, staying away from anyone who is sick. He also has to stay close to home, so he doesn't miss the phone call from Fairview, or he has to have a cell phone with him wherever he goes. He also has to watch what he does so that he doesn't overly exert his body. And, at all times, he must carry his nitroglycerin, just in case.

After 21 years of employment, Kip was forced to leave his job at Hartz Truck. He was the hardest working man anyone could have ever met. Driving truck was his passion and it ended just like that. Kip will keep trying to live his life like any other person though it will be hard for him. He just can't do any of the things like he used to. Walking up and down the stairs is too hard for Kip because he gets so short winded. He badly wants to hold, and play with his 2-year-old granddaughter, Hannah, but that's even too tiring for him.

Kip is 45 now, and his heart is only functioning at 10 percent. His family and close friends are praying and hoping that everything will go for the better, and that someday, he can go back to doing all the simple things he loved to do with his family.

flooding and damage to products stored on a lot adjacent to the road.

When asked about the roads elevation, Flaagen reported that the road's current lowest elevation is 1,127.6 feet above sea level. After improvements, the lowest elevation would be 1,127.8 feet.

Flaagen also reported that Arctic Cat has hired JOR Engineering to evaluate CD 70s drainage. No additional action was taken by the board. The board stood by its original agreement to contribute up to $15,000 toward the estimated $150,000 project

• The board approved a resolution in support of the Association of Minnesota Counties plan to increase gasoline tax as part of a $1 billion transportation package. The proposal was first introduced in early December.

• The board approved setting April 12 as the bid opening date for crack sealing and crushing where necessary on county roads.

Board tours dispatch room at LEC. Commissioners traveled to the Law Enforcement Center at the end of the Pennington County Board meeting to see the new furniture in the dispatch room. Ray Freeman of Geo Comm, the radio tower/jail remodeling project's contracting company, was also in attendance.

Freeman told county commissioners that the new work stations meet all ADA requirements. Both stations are fully adjustable, allowing dispatch workers of varying height to sit or stand while working in a space that is ergonomically correct.

As of Tuesday's County Board meeting, all dispatch equipment was located in an adjacent room. Pennington County Sheriff Mike Hruby told commissioners that work would continue on the dispatch portion of the project and the room could be fully operational by the end of the week.

The board approved renewal of Institutional Community Work Crew (ICWC) contract. Under the terms of the contract the sheriff's department will receive $52 per day for each participating ICWC laborer that it houses. Hruby said the Pennington County Jail usually hosts six to seven ICWC inmates.

Other Items

• The board approved the Human Service Committee's consent agenda.

• The Board of Equalization will meet June 13 at 10 a.m.

• The board granted use of road ditches along CSAH 3 for the Feb. 25-27 Red Lake International I-500 race. Racers will head east from Seven Clans Casino along CSAH 3 until entering the Red Lake Reservation. Racers will travel on the opposite side of CSAH 3, heading west, to conclude the race each day.

That property is zoned Central Business District (C-3). A pet related business is considered a conditional use for a property zoned C-3.

It was also stipulated that the pets be kept inside and that patrons follow the city's leash law. Harbott is not allowed to board pets overnight.

hooking up the electronics, testing the system and taking care of a few other important details.

Nevertheless, by 8:30 a.m., the Ralph Engelstad Arena had been converted into a basketball arena.

Goddard and Vigen noted that this was accomplished by 15 people - Goddard, Curt Howe, buildings and grounds foreman, Brad Brouse, John Mezeski, Barry Fellman, Travis Mathson, Jason Sletten and eight Sentence to Service (STS) crew members. Another five staff people - Mike Looker, Shoan Nelson, Tom Harbott, Brian Newton, and Mike Abel - were cleaning up from a record crowd that night.

Goddard said he was pleased with how well the transformation went. The timing was perfect, he added, because it came at the end of the hockey season.

know how the drainage works," said Ray, who noted Arctic Cat has product near Barzen Avenue.

Reading a letter from Carlson that referred to his initial observations, Ray said Carlson's "seat of the pants" estimation was that culverts were not large enough.

Ray also talked about drainage issues west of Barzen Avenue in which "crud" collects in trash gates. Water had then backed up to an area near the intersection of Highways 1 and 59.

"I agree that the drainage should be looked at for a number of reasons," said Lindberg, referring to flooding last spring west of Barzen Avenue.

Lindberg said City Council should "look strongly to the county" to reorient County Ditch 70. Pennington County has received over $1 million for the Highway 59 truck bypass and drainage was part of that funding, he added.

Pennington County commissioners did not attend the council meeting since the Pennington County Board met at the same time.

Even though drainage should be examined, Lindberg said, the city had received phone calls from Digi-Key employees about improving the road. In the past, he received phone calls from Countryside Trailer Court residents about the dust created by cars traveling over the gravel roadway. City employees have placed a mixture onto the roadway to alleviate some of the dust.

Council member Harriet Worker noted that a drainage study needed to be completed due to the growth occurring in that area of the city. Traffic studies and Digi-Key's expansion plans also have to be examined, Worker said.

Remarking that he did not think a traffic study was necessary given that a lot of drivers travel on that road, council member Dave Carlson said he conceded the point on drainage. He added he had the feeling the city would not improve the road in the end.

Dave Carlson added that Digi-Key's potential plans have an impact on drainage. At the same time, he said, the city needed some alternative for the road since a lot of people travel on it.

Digi-Key representatives did not attend the council meeting.

Council members unanimously approved calling for plans and specifications for all proposed street projects. Council member Glen Kajewski was absent. Once Arctic Cat's study is completed, the council may decide again whether to keep or remove the Barzen Avenue project.

Funding for the Barzen Avenue project

Digi-Key requested the Barzen Avenue project, which is estimated at $150,000. Lindberg recommended invoicing Digi-Key $75,000 and Arctic Cat $25,000. Both companies have already agreed to pay that amount if Barzen Avenue were improved.

Lindberg also recommended invoicing Pennington County and the city $25,000 each. At its Feb. 8 meeting, county commissioners agreed to pay $15,000. A portion of that amount would be used for County Ditch 70.

Lindberg preferred to know before April 4 regarding whether the Barzen Avenue project would be included in the improvement project, he said. For all the improvement projects, bids are scheduled to be opened in May.

2005 Street, Sidewalk and Utilities Improvement Project specifics

The 2005 Street, Sidewalk and Utilities Improvement Project is estimated to cost a total of $836,000. State funds, direct billings, utilities reserves and force account services would cover $813,000 of that amount.

The city would recoup $46,000 in special assessments and $15,000 in tax increment payments after 15 years. As a result, the city's final cost would be reduced to zero.

However, the city would be required to provide approximately $680,000 in interim financing in order to complete the project in seven months. The council may pre-invoice developers "for all or a portion of their share of the project costs in order to reduce the city's internal financing," Lindberg said.

Besides Barzen Avenue, proposed projects include:

- Nelson Drive – Street and storm sewer improvements east of Sherwood Avenue
- Allwood Court – Street construction
- Alice Drive – Street and utilities extensions and improvements
- Gausen Court – Street construction and utilities extensions
- Oak Avenue – Street construction south of Cartway Drive
- Sunrise Court – Street construction and utilities extensions
- Spruce Avenue and Woodland Court – Street, storm sewer, sanitary sewer and water main improvements south of Allwood Court

The Nelson Drive improvements were requested by Wal-Mart, which is planning to construct a store along that street. The company would be directly invoiced for the estimated $179,000 cost "subject to prior consent of the corporation and City Council," according to information provided to the council.

Challenger takes on new playground challenge

Marolt said the project has been divided into phases. With the removal this spring of the old equipment, he said he believes that phase one will be added to the playground by next fall, and the rest of the playground the following year.

The playground apparatus is not exclusively for Challenger Elementary School students to enjoy, Marolt said the playground is open to the entire community during non-school hours.

The Carnival

Twistol said she is looking forward to the carnival. Businesses and the entire community have been really supportive, said Twistol.

Individuals or businesses who would like to contribute to the purchase of new playground apparatus or the carnival should contact Twistol at 681-2345, ext. 718.

Pioneers stumble out of the gate at state tournament

■ First-day blow-out throws NCTC for a loop

Northland had a tough time right from the start and wound up with a 1-2 showing during the 2005 Minnesota Community College Conference women's state basketball tournament Feb. 25-27 at Anoka-Ramsey Community College in Coon Rapids.

Ridgewater knocked Northland for a loop with an 85-51 Friday afternoon quarterfinal blow-out. The Pioneers bounced back to beat Rainy River 65-56 in a Saturday consolation semifinal, but lost a 48-45 Sunday consolation final to Fergus Falls.

It was a 16-12 season, overall, for Northland first-year head coach Missy Majerus.

This year's National Junior College Athletic Association Division III Region 13 qualifying format did not offer the Pioneers any state tournament consolation, either. In 2005, the top two state tournament finishers from the MCCC Southern Division and the top finisher from the Northern Division were region-bound. Northland's first round loss, combined with a 57-50 Itasca quarterfinal win over Fergus Falls, eliminated the Pioneers from that scenario.

The Pioneers' engine simply didn't fire at the start of the tournament. They found themselves trailing Ridgewater 43-18 at halftime and lost by 34.

"Our offense struggled," admitted Majerus, whose team turned it over 31 times and shot 38 percent from the field (18/48).

An injury also played a role in the quarterfinal rout, but in reverse manner. Forced to make a line-up change, Ridgewater went big – something the Pioneers were not prepared to face. And they didn't adjust, admitted Majerus.

Kamae Larson scored 12 points, while Rochelle Nelk and Alisa Costin both had 11 in the Game 1 setback. A 21-point game by Sarah Remus led Ridgewater. The winners shot 51 percent from the field (35/69) and went 11-for-19 at the free throw line, where the Pioneers were 10-for-16.

Ridgewater had a 38-31 rebound edge and turned it over 14 times.

Northland used a 35-22 halftime lead to secure the consolation round win over Rainy River.

"We knew Rainy River would be tough defensively, but we came out and hit some shots early that got us going," said Majerus.

Larson had a 15-point, 13-rebound double-double in the win, with Costin netting 13 points and Chelsey Fering 11. Jami Muir scored 16 points to lead the Voyageurs.

Northland was 24-for-56 from the field (43 percent) and 13-for-16 at the free throw line. Rainy River struggled with a 17-for-69 shooting performance (25 percent) and also

Paul Sjoberg of the Prowlers (left) and Joe Skogmo of the Lakers were on the floor fighting for possession of the ball when the referee stepped in to make the call during Friday's Thief River Falls vs. Detroit Lakes boys high school basketball game. The Lakers won 46-37.

Detroit Lakes defense prevails

Thief River Falls kept it close by playing defense. But the Prowlers couldn't come up with enough offense to get a win out of it Friday in a 46-37 boys high school basketball loss to visiting Detroit Lakes.

It was the 2004-05 regular season finale for the Prowlers, who finished 11-13. Detroit Lakes took a 20-4 record and top seed out of the North into Section 8AAA tournament play.

The Lakers had a 13-11 first quarter lead and a 19-18 edge at intermission.

A Matt Stuckey drive through the middle put the Prowlers up 18-17 with 3:32 remaining in the first half. The final three minutes was a standoff - literally - as Detroit Lakes held the ball and Thief River Falls refused to come out of its zone. There was absolutely no movement until the final seconds when the visitors got the ball into the middle and Luke Middendorf scored on rebound with 3.6 seconds on the clock.

Detroit Lakes had some breathing room at 32-25 as the third quarter ended, but Thief River Falls was within 35-34 when Kyle Lunke followed his basket on the inside with two free throws and Paul Sjoberg made one of two foul shots with 3:42 remaining.

However, the Prowlers were outscored 11-3 down the stretch. In fact, after that Lunke bucket with 5:25 to play, they went scoreless from the field until Sjoberg took an inbounds pass to the basket for the game's final points with 26.9 seconds to play.

The Lakers got 17 points from the 6-2 Fuhs and 12 points each from Middendorf and Matt Anderson, their 6-6 bookends on the inside. The Prowlers had nobody with more than seven points.

"They did a great job defending Matt," explained Thief River Falls coach Chris McLean. "We do so many things off him, and when he's not even getting touches, we get stagnant on offense."

It was a home-and-home series sweep for the Lakers, who beat the Prowlers in similar 49-39 fashion at Detroit Lakes back on Dec. 18.

Thief River Falls was 12-for-35 from the field (47 percent). A barrage of desperation-type shots at the end upped the the Prowlers' game total after they had taken just 18 shots through three quarters. They were 10-for-14 at the free throw line. Detroit Lakes went 16-for-40 from the floor (40 percent) and 13-for-19 at the line.

The Lakers finished with a 22-20 rebound edge. The Prowlers had more turnovers, 10-7.

"They're a good team," acknowledged McLean. "They just didn't give us a whole lot offensively. Their physical play at the guards took a toll."

NCTC men 1-2 at state tournament

Northland won an 81-76 double-overtime thriller against Rochester Friday afternoon to start the 2005 Minnesota Community College Conference men's state basketball tournament, but couldn't duplicate that kind of magic the rest of the weekend as the Pioneers dropped a 90-74 Saturday night semifinal division to Ridgewater and lost an 88-84 Sunday afternoon third place game to Fergus Falls.

The results ended an 18-11 season for the Pioneers, who finished in a three-way tie for the regular season MCCC Northern Division title.

With a format calling for the top three state tournament finishers moving on to the National Junior College Athletic Association Division III Region 13 tournament, the Sunday defeat denied the Pioneers an opportunity to extended the campaign into additional post-season play.

The state tournament was played at Minneapolis Community and Technical College.

Northland and Rochester put on a show in the quarterfinals. The Pioneers had a 30-28 halftime edge. The game was tied 58-58 at the end of regulation time and remained deadlocked at 70-70 after the first overtime when the Yellowjackets' Aaron Motz missed two free throws with 5.7 seconds remaining.

The Pioneers finally secured the victory on two sets of free throws by Jason Koch and D.J. Beutler in the final seconds of the second overtime.

"It was really a battle," acknowledged Northland coach Rick Nikunen.

Mike Howard scored had a 28-point, 16-rebound double-double for the Pioneers, while Koch and Juwaun Bowman both netted 16 points and Beutler had 14. Four Yellowjackets also hit double-figures, led by Joey Kollar with 16 points.

Northland was 27-for-73 from the field (37 percent) and 18-for-24 at the free throw line. Rochester went 31-for-84 from the floor (37 percent) and 11-for-20 at the line. The Yellowjackets had a 56-53 rebound edge, but also finished with more turnovers, 26-22.

Northland beat Rochester 77-63 during the regular season.

While the quarterfinal win was memorable, it was also exhausting, admitted Nikunen. And the effects showed up during the next-night semifinal loss to Ridgewater.

The Pioneers stayed within 45-41 through the first half, but lost ground after intermission.

"The game the day before took a lot out of the kids," offered Nikunen. "They gutted it out in the first half, but they just didn't have anything left after that. We were a half-step behind on defense all night."

■ Quarterfinals - Ridgewater 89, Central Lakes 83; Northland 81, Rochester 76 (2 ot), Fergus Falls 86, Vermilion 78; Minneapolis 79, Mesabi Range 62.

■ Semifinals - Ridgewater 90, Northland 74; Minneapolis 75, Fergus Falls 54.

■ Championship - Minneapolis 80, Ridgewater 60.

■ Third place - Fergus Falls 88, Northland 84.

■ Consolation semifinals - Central Lakes 106, Rochester 105 (ot); Vermilion 88, Mesabi Range 67.

■ Consolation final - Vermilion 98, Central Lakes 88.

■ All-tournament team - (Minneapolis) Eric Ables, Floyd Daniels; (Fergus Falls) Jon Botz, Olufemi Solaja; (Ridgewater) Lance Brown, Darren Solbrack; (Northland) Mike Howard; (Vermilion) Jameel Koonce; (Central Lakes) Leonard Langdon; (Mesabi Range) William Maupins. MVP - Paris Kyle, Minneapolis.

Howard had a 23-point semifinal. Cyrin Shaffer contributed 11 points and Koch had 10. Lance Brown led Ridgewater with 21 points.

Northland shot 43 percent from the field (26/61) and had a perfect 14-for-14 game at the free throw line. Ridgewater shot 55 percent from the floor (37/67) and went 7-for-10 at the line. The Pioneers had more rebounds (35-32) and turnovers (17-11) than the competition.

With a regional berth on the line, there was plenty at stake in the Northland-Fergus Falls third place game, and both teams played like it, according to Nikunen. "It was a great game," he said. "There was a nice crowd, and they were really into the game. It was just a great atmosphere to play."

Fergus Falls led 43-39 at halftime. It was close all the way, but too many misses at the free throw line wound up costing the Pioneers. They were 13-for-23 at the line for the day, and made only 2 of 7 foul shots in the final 2 1/2 minutes.

"We played them hard for 40 minutes, but we didn't make our free throws at the end," offered Nikunen.

A 38-point game by Howard hiked his three-day total to a tournament-high 89 points, which earned him all-tournament honors.

"Mike had a great tournament," mentioned Nikunen. "He really impressed a lot of people."

Koch scored 19 points and Shaffer had 10 in the final game. The Spartans, who swept Northland during the regular season 87-67 and 82-62, were led by Andy Parochka with 26 points.

The Pioneers 32-for-63 from the field (51 percent). The Spartans went 36-for-63 (57 percent) from the floor and 7-for-15 at the line.

Fergus Falls out-rebounded Northland 37-31. The Spartans also had more turnovers than the ### Six Prowlers compete in 2005 Minnesota Class AA state wrestling tournament....

LeDuc heads TRF state entries with fourth place finish

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Thief River Falls junior Dan LeDuc fought his way through the wrestle-backs to finish fourth in the individual portion of the 2005 Class AA state high school wrestling tournament at the Xcel Energy Center in St. Paul.

After losing a 3-2 quarterfinal decision to eventual state champion Colby Alberts of Kasson-Mantorville, LeDuc won three Friday matches to reach Saturday's third place match against second-ranked Matt Schrupp of Watertown-Mayer.

Much like his previous five matches, LeDuc scored the first takedown against Schrupp and early in the second period appeared poised to take a 4-1 lead before a blood time-out negated a sure takedown. Instead, LeDuc was taken down. He trailed 3-2 at the end of two periods never recovered, losing a 5-4 decision to Schrupp.

"After losing only his second match of the season, he showed pretty good resolve to come back and take fourth place," head coach Kenny Geiser said of LeDuc. "He's so good on his feet it almost makes it tough for him to lose."

Friday was a busy day for LeDuc, who used a sweep single to perfection while posting victories over Tony Klosterboer of Montevideo, 6-4; eighth-ranked Eric Olson of New Prague, 5-3; and fifth-ranked Jake Grygelko of St. Michael Albertville, 11-3.

With each victory, LeDuc reset the Thief River Falls career win record. He won his 153rd career match in the first wrestle-back encounter against Klosterboer, breaking the previous career win record of 152 held by Jeremy Anderson (2000-03).

The state tournament ended one match too soon for senior Adam Lian at 171 pounds and sophomore heavyweight Andrew Peralta. Both Lian and Peralta were eliminated after losses during the quarterfinal round of wrestle-backs, essentially finishing in a seventh place tie, one match away from the medal stand.

Lian was forced into the consolation bracket after suffering an opening round loss to eventual fourth place finisher Luke Vetsch of St. Michael-Albertville. He responded with a 9-6 victory over Matt Toren of Rocori. Unfortunately Lian's quest for a medal ended in the next round, losing a 5-3 decision to Kevin Landry of Cannon Falls Randolph.

"Adam went down there with double digit losses," Geiser said. "He proved he belonged there by how far he made it."

Peralta also began Friday's competition in the consolation bracket, after posting a 1-1 record on Day 1. Peralta began Friday's wrestle-backs by defeating Tyler Kieteski of Dassel-Cokato by a fall in 26 seconds. Unfortunately, Peralta's tournament would end at the hands of Fulda/Murray County Central heavyweight Andy Witzel in a 12-6 decision.

Geiser noted that Peralta was the aggressor during his match with the more experienced Witzel, who countered the majority of Peralta's scoring attempts. Peralta's inexperience may have cost him a state tournament medal, but Geiser was pleased with his young heavyweight's successful season.

"For a 15-year-old heavyweight to make it as far as he did is pretty astonishing," Geiser said. "The upside for Andrew is pretty limitless."

The tournament marked the end of the road for another Thief River Falls senior. Zach Anderson entered the state tournament ranked fourth at 140 pounds, but drew second-ranked John Dvorak of Scott West. Anderson lost a 7-5 overtime decision in the opening round and a 5-4 double-overtime decision to Greg Stumvoll of Foley. Dvorak equalled his ranking, finishing second, while Stumvoll, ranked 10th at 135 pounds, finished third.

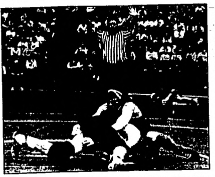
"Zach lost two of the toughest matches you can lose in a state tournament," Geiser said. "The two guys he lost to took second and third in the state. Zach didn't go down there and wrestle a bad tournament, but he lost two extremely close matches."

Along with Peralta, two other underclassmen showed glimpses of the future of Thief River Falls wrestling. Sophomore Kyle Iverson at 125 pounds and eighth grader Jordan Engen at 103 were winless in the tournament, but gained valuable experience while competing against the state's best competition.

Iverson lost a 15-3 decision to eventual state champion Nick Kulseth of Windom Area/Mountain Lake/Butterfield-Odin and Chad Listul of Yellow Medicine East.

Engen lost a 17-13 decision to eventual fourth place finisher Jacob Bowland of Foley. Bowland lost his quarterfinal match, effectively ending Engen's state tournament.

"Kyle and Jordan both wrestled good matches down here and hopefully gained valuable experience for future trips to the state tournament," Geiser said.



Dan LeDuc attacks the right leg of David Hauge, Minnehaha Academy/Minneapolis Lutheran, during their opening round match in the 152-pound Class AA state wrestling tournament bracket. LeDuc won 8-3.

Section 8AAA girls high school basketball...

Fergus Falls ends TRF season

A team that has trouble generating a consistent offense most of the season, Thief River Falls had an even bigger challenge than usual Thursday when the Prowlers were minus leading scorer Nichole Gryskiewicz for a Section 8AAA girls high school basketball tournament quarterfinal game at Fergus Falls.

Sidelined by illness, Gryskiewicz did not make the trip. And the Prowlers had nobody to cover those missing points as they lost a 61-24 decision.

"We had a great effort, but we just couldn't put the ball in the hole," said Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe.

Fergus Falls jumped out to a 14-4 first quarter lead, had a 25-9 halftime cushion and opened up a 41-16 third quarter spread.

Hannah Draxten (28) and Chelsey Ouren (14) combined for 42 Fergus Falls points.

"Fergus Falls came ready to play," offered Loe. "We had trouble stopping Draxten and Ouren – their two main players."

Thief River Falls struggled through a 10-for-56 shooting night from the field and were out-rebounded 52-34. Those numbers, pointed out Loe, do not add up to a victory. "When you shot 18 percent and get out-rebounded like that, it's tough to come out on top," he said.

The rebound advantage helped the Otters generate a 70-shot offense. They made 18 of those attempts (26 percent).

Fergus Falls was 18-for-28 at the free throw line, where Thief River Falls went 3-for-9. The Prowlers topped the turnover charts 21-16.

Thief River Falls' season ended at 9-17. The Prowlers lost to the Otters 57-46 at home late in the regular season.

Ralph Engelstad Arena used by 8A girls teams

Fosston and Red Lake Falls, were winners Saturday afternoon when the Section 8A East girls high school tournament semifinals marked the first time the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls was used for basketball. The Greyhounds beat Clearbrook-Gonvick 62-37 and the Eagles doubled Red Lake County Central 40-20.

Kayla Bagaason scored 25 points, Shelly Francis 14 and Kelly Landsverk 13 as the No. 1-ranked Greyhounds rolled in Game 1. The winners led at the quarters 17-12, 34-23 and 45-33. Heidi Kjolhaug led the Bears with 14 points.

Red Lake Falls got through the slow-down tactics employed by Red Lake County Central to register a 40-20 Game 2 win.

The Mustangs led 8-7 after one quarter and after owning a five-point lead, were still within 15-14 at halftime.

An upset was still a possibility as Red Lake County Central stayed close, trailing only 23-18 as the end of the third quarter neared.

However, a turnover led to a three-point play by Anna Skala with just 1.1 seconds on the clock to suddenly make it a 26-18 difference at the horn.

"That a big swing right there," acknowledged Red Lake County Central coach Rick Koivisto. "We wanted to keep it close. We were within five and had a chance to make it a two or three-point game. Instead we go down by eight."

Red Lake Falls then pulled away by out-scoring Red Lake County Central 14-2 in fourth quarter. "I think fatigue set in on our part," said Koivisto, whose bench was a lot shorter than the Eagles.

Only three Mustangs scored, with Courtney Halvorson's 10 points leading the way. Angie Gagner scored 13 points and Heidi Matzke 12 for the Eagles.

Red Lake County Central's deliberate style of play led to a 28 percent a 7-for-25 shooting performance.

"It was our false-motion offense," explained Koivisto. "We were suppose to shoot nothing but lay-ups."

Red Lake Falls was 17-for-49 from the field (35 percent). The Eagles went 6-for-7 at the free throw line, where the Mustangs were 6-for-8. Rebounds were even at 18-apiece. Red Lake County Central had 30 of the game's 39 turnovers.

The Mustangs' season ended at 10-15.

Winning streak ends at 19 for Grygla-Gatzke

A 19-game Grygla-Gatzke boys high school basketball winning streak ended Friday with a 45-40 loss at Warroad.

It was the 2004-05 regular season final for the 23-2 Eagles, who had not lost a game since dropping a 53-38 decision to Stephen-Argyle in the championship game of the Northland Community and Technical College Invitational back on Dec. 16.

"Warroad plays pretty solid defense," said Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson. "I thought we played a pretty solid defense, too, but they just made a few more shots than we did."

Grygla-Gatzke led 11-7 after one quarter, but fell behind 23-21 at halftime and trailed 33-30 through three quarters.

Mark Swedberg of Warroad led all scorers with 16 points.

The Eagles struggled through a 30 percent 14-for-47 shooting performance.

"I thought we got some pretty decent shots, but they just wouldn't go in," offered Johnson.

Warroad had a 47 percent 16-for-34 shooting night.

Neither side fared well at the free throw line, where Grygla-Gatzke was 11-for-21 and Warroad went 11-for-22. Warroad won the rebound battle 24-19.

TRF freshmen beat Lakers

Kasey Trontvet scored 19 points and Andy Rook had 12 to lead Thief River Falls past Detroit Lakes 54-35 in Friday freshman boys basketball.

The Prowlers led at the quarters 20-10, 32-19 and 40-24.

Bruggeman, Gators top Freeze

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River defeated the Northern Freeze 57-35 and Stephen-Argyle beat Kittson Central 68-54 in the Saturday night Section 8A West girls high school basketball tournament semifinals at the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls.

Missy Bruggeman proved just how important she is to the success of the top-seeded Gators in Game 1. Early foul trouble put the 5-5 senior guard on the bench and limited her to just two first half points. She was back on the floor to start the second half, and scored nine third quarter points as Badger/Greenbush-Middle River pushed a 24-17 halftime lead to a 42-22 spread by the horn.

"We played pretty well except in the second quarter when Missy was sitting on the bench with three fouls," said Gators coach Tom Neibuaer. "She came back in the third quarter and we started playing well again."

Kierah Kimbrough had a 35-point night for the winners. Bruggeman finished with 13. A 15-point game by Chelsea Boen led the Northern Freeze.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shot 43 percent from the field (23/54) and went 11-for-19 at the free throw line, where the Northern Freeze had a 12-for-21 game.

"We played a good floor game, but we've got to do a better job hitting our outside shots," said Neibauer.

The Gators' second post-season win pushed their overall record to 27-1.

Jessica Safranski scored 23 points, Robyn Henrickson 15 and Michele Jensen 13 as Stephen-Argyle eliminated defending Section 8A champion Kittson Central in the final game of the day.

The Storm had quarter leads of 19-13, 34-31 and 53-42.

Molly Gustafson and Joni Lindegard led the Wolfpack with 17 and 15 points, respectively.

Northland pulled even at 45-45, but Fergus Falls closed out the scoring on a basket by Alicia Wunderlich and a free throw by Kelli Baumgartner.

The tournament features boys and girls teams in grades 4 to 9.

Chelsea Haviland wins diving honors

Wins on the one and three-meter boards during the weekend Patriot League Swimming and Diving Championships earned United States Military Academy junior Chelsea Haviland of Thief River Falls Female Diver of the Meet honors for third straight year.

Haviland, who was also on a fourth place relay team, was the only athlete to both swim and dive in the meet held at the Kinney Natatorium on the campus of Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa. Her efforts earned the former Prowler standout, the Army Athletic Association's Co-Athlete of the Week Award.

Bucknell won the Patriot League women's title with 810 points. Haviland's Army squad was third with 446 points, one spot behind rival Navy with 598.

Spuds' second half puts Prowlers away

Moorhead turned a 30-25 halftime lead into a 70-39 Thursday (Feb. 17) girls high school basketball win over visiting Thief River Falls.

"We were playing well in the first half," said Thief River Falls coach Jeff Loe. "They came out with a 3-2 zone in the second half, and we were just too impatient to work the ball around and look for quality shots."

Jackie Gulsvig of Moorhead lead all scorers with 18 points. Nichole Gryskiewicz and Kristi Joppru had 10-point games for the Prowlers.

MCC completes 17-8 campaign with a win

Marshall County Central broke it open in the second quarter and went on to beat Red Lake County Central 67-58 in a Thursday (Feb. 24) regular season-ending boys high school basketball game.

The Nordics turned a 17-14 first quarter lead into a 36-19 halftime spread and a 59-36 third quarter advantage.

Jay Maurstad scored 22 points, Dustin Monsebroten 14 and Andrew Johnson 10 for the Nordics, who finished 17-8. It was a double-double for Monsebroten, who was credited with 16 assists. He also had 5 rebounds and 6 steals.

Lucas Goulet of Red Lake County Central led all scorers with 28 points. Ryan Fisher had 15.

Both teams shot well, with Marshall County Central going 29-for-57 (51 percent) and Red Lake County Central hitting 25 of 48 (52 percent). A quiet free throw night included a 2-for-3 figure for the Nordics and a 2-for-5 showing for the Mustangs.

Nordics top Warroad; Monsebroten is MCC career scoring leader

Tournament time is just around the corner, and Marshall County Central head coach Jake Rantanen got the feeling his team is getting into a playoff mode during the Nordics' 54-43 Tuesday boys high school basketball win over Warroad.

"That was probably the most intensity for 32 minutes that we've shown all year," he said as his team pushed its record to 16-8 heading into a Thursday regular season finale against Red Lake County Central.

The Nordics led at the quarters 18-11, 29-27 and 43-36.

With a little better board work, according to Rantanten, the Nordics would have totally dominated. "We gave up too many offensive rebounds," he said. "They got a lot of second-chance points."

Jay Maurstad scored 23 points and Tyler Blazejewski 13 for the Nordics, with Dustin Monsebroten contributing 9 and Andrew Johnson supplying 8, along with some aggressive play in the middle.

Monsebroten, a 6-1 senior, hiked his career scoring total to 1,332 points, adding to the numbers that have made him the top scorer in Marshall County Central history – a designation that previously went to Mike Fincher, who had 1,309 points when he graduated in 1977.

"Dustin didn't get a lot of points in this one, but he doesn't care, as long as the team wins," said Rantanen. "We look for him to score, and his points are important, but he's a great team player."

Reid Merriman led Warroad with 14 points.

Both teams shot 44 percent from the field, with Marshall County Central hitting 21 of 48 and Warroad making 19 of 43. It wasn't a great free throw night for either side: 4-for-11 for the winners; 3-for-9 for the visitors. Marshall County Central had a 28-27 rebound edge.

Crookston took over in the second half and beat visiting Thief River Falls 81-56 in a Friday (Feb. 18) boys high school basketball game.

The Pirates led only 40-37 at halftime, but they had a 62-47 cushion at the third quarter stop.

"First half might have been a close game, but it was kind of like fool's gold for us, giving up 40 points in a half," explained Thief River Falls coach Chris McLean. "We're just not going to win many 80-point games."

Grant Willhite scored 25 points as the Pirates completed a home-and-home sweep against the Prowlers. Paul Sjoberg led the Prowlers with 17 points.

Kimbrough sets state scoring record...

Gators wrap up schedule

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River put the finishing touches on a banner 25-1 regular season with Feb. 18-19 wins over Stephen-Argyle and Warren-Alvarado-Oslo.

In the process, the Kierah Kimbrough regained her status as the single-season scoring record holder in Minnesota girls' high school basketball history.

The Gators beat the Storm 57-50 Friday and handled the Ponies 70-47 Saturday.

Stephen-Argyle stunned the Gators by taking a 20-10 first quarter lead. But they were back within 29-28 by halftime and had a 43-36 third quarter edge.

"Defensively, we were really bad that first quarter," admitted Gators coach Tom Neibauer. "We increased our defensive intensity after that."

Kimbrough had a 30-point, 11-rebound double-double to lead the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River offense. Tina Nybladh led the Storm with 13 points.

The Gators shot 48 percent from the floor and were 15-for-21 at the free throw line, where the Storm went 11-for-17.

Kimbrough followed her Friday performance with a 46-point, 11-rebound Saturday. That upped her regular season point figure this winter 902. She was the record holder a year ago, too, but only for 13 days before Katie Ohm of Elgin-Milville surpassed her.

The Gators led the Ponies at the quarters 25-12, 41-18 and 54-32.

Lynsey Roppe also had a double-double for the Gators with 13 points and 13 assists.

Katie Schmidt led the Ponies with 16 points.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River was 26-for-50 from the field (52 percent) 18-for-26 at the free throw line. Warren-Alvarado-Oslo made 13 of 27 free throw attempts.

Strandquist Community News

F. Myrtle Vagle • 436-2133

The weather in northwest Minnesota begins most every morning with the temperature below zero degrees. I don't know of anyone nor anything that benefits by having it this cold, but for certain there are no mosquitoes waiting to inoculate us with their poison to thin our blood so they can draw it out. I hope it is going to freeze their eggs and lessen their number when gardening times comes around. If we have a sunny day, it doesn't seem to cold and with all these seed catalogues to dream about, time just keeps flying by us.

Isaac and Betsy Thompson and I returned from Kennedy where we attended the funeral of Ruby Mattson, another Gideon member from the Kittson Camp. The main work of the Gideons is publishing bibles and giving them to hotels, all military personnel, hospitals, and 6th grade school children who get the small red ones. Marvin Mattson, who passed away last April, was often the chaplin of our group.

On Saturday, the Bethesda Lutheran Church was filled to overflowing with friends and relatives giving honor to the memory of Phillip Boen, an upstanding member of this community, who will be missed by many around her.

The queen of hospitality, Judy Kleinvachter, took her friend June Severson to Irene's Cafe and treated her to those famous potato dumplings. She did it again on Sunday when Irene spreads her "Smorgus Bord" for folks to enjoy. On Wednesday, Judy's daughter Marie Steffen of Argyle took Judy out to dinner in Middle River. Judy still had time to enjoy her company during the week. Joan Gehrls, Kelly Lefrooth, and June Kasprowicz visited her.

On Monday, David Thompson brought his mother, Pearl Thompson a dozen big red roses with long stems for Valentine's Day. Becky and Danny Johnson took Pearl out for dinner that evening. Happy Valentine's Day Pearl.

Pearl and I were shopping in Thief River Falls on Thursday.

Virgil and Ruth Rasmussen of Grygla visited with Pearl Thompson and myself on Friday afternoon. In the evening, Virgil spoke at the Valentine's Day party at the Gospel Tabernacle. Their sons are back in the United States this year from their missionary work in Burundi, Africa were they have established Christian schools and taught for many years.

Danny and Becky Johnson took Pearl to dinner in Greenbush on Saturday.

Tomorrow, February 22nd, George Walter Thompson turns 90 years of age!! Happy birthday Walter!!! That is a long time since the day that Old Doc Turnbull pronounced you dead! At 18 months of age, Walter actually died from what was called in those days, infantile paralysis. While moving him around just short of 3 minutes of a half hour, he began to breathe again. We are all happy he has had his place in this world and we are going to really celebrate tomorrow. All six of his sisters who live right around here will be there and I am certain Isaac will also be there. It is my birthday too, but I will enjoy my 80's for a couple years.

It's been a few weeks, but I'm going to try to get back to being a correspondent. I had surgery and two weeks in CNC and am still weak, but it takes time and I hope you understand.

The Rosewood Homemakers held their February meeting at Enid Sander's home at the Summerfield apartments on Friday with Joyce Kron, Pearl Johnson, Ruth Johnson, Clarice Ronken, Lee Schey, Linda Johnson and Jill Hall attending.

Glenn and Karen Odberg of Paynesville drove up on Sunday to visit Joyce Kron and returned home on Monday.

On Friday, February 18th grandson Corey Hagberg from Thornton, Colo. and his cousin Andy Waterworth of Newfolden were afternoon and luncheon guests of Grandma Ruth Sustad's and then they headed for Lake of the Woods for ice fishing.

By the way, my son and his wife Billy and Angie Copeland of Near Atlanta, Ga. and Tim and Lana Bulger were ice fishing with good luck. (I've got the proof in my freezer.) Angie, who is a native Georgian also got a snowmobile ride. She experienced a lot of new things and didn't mind the weather.

Wayne Hanson, formerly of Williston has been spending time at his sister Joyce and Earl Erickson's home for tax returns. He is retired and living in Sao Paulo, Brazil and loves it there. So much to learn and finds the Brazilian people very friendly and easy to know.

On Wednesday, the residents of Sunset Apartments had a "Good Bye" party for Pearl Klasen, our long time resident who will be moving to Valley Home soon. We will miss her.

Virgil Hjelle attended the funeral for Travis Flom on Saturday and he and Marvelle attended the Delbert Erickson funeral on Monday.

Jill Hall called Liz Swenson on Monday.

Bob and Margaret Erlenmeyer and Dan Sustad were Wednesday afternoon visitors and coffee guests at Ruth Sustad's home.

Lack of funding for Amtrak puts us on the wrong track

President Bush's budget proposal, which includes a significant reduction in federal funds for Amtrak puts this nation's transportation policy on the wrong track.

The proposed budget would eliminate federal funding for Amtrak, setting aside $360 million to operate some trains only if the service faces a shutdown. Amtrak received $1.2 billion in federal funding for the current fiscal year, and it has requested $1.8 billion for the next fiscal year.

According to Sen. Mark Dayton, at least $1.5 billion of federal funds is required to ensure the railroad's safe and efficient operation. Dayton noted that in Fiscal Year 2004, total wages for the 72 Amtrak employees living in Minnesota were over $3.7 million.

Additionally, statistics show that ridership is increasing. "Amtrak ridership is reaching record highs, despite the sluggishness of the domestic travel industry," said Dayton. "I believe that it is clearly a mistake to cut funds essential to Amtrak's operation of the Empire Builder."

For many residents of North Dakota, Amtrak is the most efficient and only mass transit provider. For residents of some rural communities, the option of airplanes and buses do not exist. Additionally, one might wonder how the state of North Dakota could subsidize funding of Amtrak's infrastructure and operation in the state, without such subsidies jeopardizing transportation funding and the state's budget.

Proponents of the budget proposal argue that Amtrak should be self sufficient. However, opponents argue that federal funding has always been used to support services that benefit large segments of the population. In fact, other transportation sectors, such as highways and airlines, even receive a larger percentage of federal funding than Amtrak.

The fear is that without federal funding, Amtrak would quickly enter bankruptcy and begin shutting down services all across the nation. If this happened, it would leave riders and communities without access to the essential and convenient transportation offered by Amtrak. Additionally, at a time when congestion at airports and on highways continue to increase, legislators supporting continued subsidies to Amtrak, argue that it would be unwise to cut funds that keep Amtrak operating.

Dayton pointed out that Amtrak has been cutting costs. "Over the last 30 months, Amtrak CEO and President David Gunn, has cut operating costs, has reduced the employees from slightly fewer than 25,000 to just under 20,000, has increased by 20 percent the number of trains it operates, and has implemented internal reforms designed to control costs and improve efficiency. Amtrak's operating expenses," he noted, "are now less than in (the year) 2000."

At a time when this nation's traffic in the skies and on the highways is in gridlock and when we need to seek greater energy efficiencies, cutting funding to Amtrak seems to place this nation's transportation policies on the wrong track.

"I Love to Read Day"

One fish, two fish, red fish, blue fish.... I was still a very young reader sitting on my father's lap when I attempted to read the popular Dr. Seuss novel. Because I struggled so, I also remember that the restrained desire to read for me was etched in lines of frustration across my father's face. Instead of remembering the moment as one of those embarrassing moments, however, I remember it fondly.

On March 2, the National Education Association (NEA) is encouraging children to pick up a book and read. It's part of its Read Across America promotion.

According to its Web site, NEA's Read Across America program was launched in 1998. The nationwide reading celebration takes place each year on March 2, the birthday of beloved children's author Dr. Seuss, who epitomizes a love of learning. Dr. Seuss has become an icon of education because his use of rhyme makes his books an effective tool for teaching young children the basic skills they need to be successful.

Thief River Falls is also joining this national effort. In his proclamation declaring March 2 as "I Love to Read Day," Mayor Dale Wennberg reminds us that reading is the cornerstone of a successful community. Being able to understand print and use that information is critical to the decisions we make that will help our community grow.

Please embrace this event. Pick up a book and share the joy with your children. Your participation may create a lifelong desire to read and learn.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Congress should do what citizens want

To the Editor:

It seems that those of us who pay out of the pocket for prescription drugs are being ripped off. Other developed countries have made the deliberate decision to use cost and profit controls to make sure their citizens have access to needed prescription drugs.

Congress, along with the pharmaceutical industry, has dreamed up proposals to reimport brand-name drugs from Canada.

Canada has a population of 32 million people where health care is a national right rather than a business. Our country of 300 million does not seem to have the will to do the right thing.

Maybe our politicians should do what the people need instead of catering to the corporations. Congress should better serve the health needs of our great country.

Sincerely,
Robert N. Reed

Biotech and organic crops can co-exist

To the Editor:

Good judgment and common sense prevailed when North Dakota lawmakers recently defeated a bill that would have required biotech seed developers to bear much of the liability relating to the planting of genetically engineered wheat. We count on the same good judgment and common sense to turn back a similar bill in Montana.

What's wrong with making it easier to sue a biotech crops developer? In short, because the developer (public and private) will have less incentive to develop biotech crops, which is ultimately what anti-biotech activists want.

When you stick a knife to the throat of ag research and development, however, it's farmers who lose. For example, the significant advancements in no-till planting and precision ag technology in the last decade would not have been accomplished had trial lawyers been camped out at the front step of the developers. We also would not have had the advancements we do in current biotech crops – now the norm with corn, canola, soybeans, and others – that give farmers greater crop rotation flexibility and better choices for pest management.

Already, no other agricultural product goes through as much testing and analysis as a biotech crop. Further, a biotech crop (and food from biotech crops) is already subject to product liability – it must be proven safe to the environment and to consumers before it can be commercialized.

Great lengths are taken to prevent pollen spread/outcrossing with other crop species, including protocol for managing a biotech crop in the field after it is commercialized. The already minute risk of cross pollination is even less for a self-pollinating crop such as wheat.

Anti-biotech activists imply that biotech, conventional and organic crops cannot exist, but that is not the case. Comprehensive research by British Ag Economists Graham Brookes and Peter Barfoot concludes that North American biotech crops "have coexisted with conventional and organic crops without significant economic or commercial problems. The market has effectively facilitated this without government intervention since GM arable crops were first introduced in 1995."

Brookes and Barfoot also point out that states with the most acreage devoted to organic crops were also often the states with above average adoption of biotech crops. The leading organic-growing states of Iowa and Minnesota, for example, also had above average biotech corn plantings compared to the U.S. average.

Current IP and biotech management practices (planting part of field to non-biotech varieties to help prevent pest resistance; buffer zones to reduce pollen flow) are key to coexistance, say Brookes and Barfoot. Coexistence studies by the two economists in Spain and the United Kingdom found similar results.

What's more: the USDA's National Organic Program affirms that "no accredited certifying agent has reported to us that certification has been lost due to adventitious presence of biotech material. In one instance, a producer admitted to deliberately planting GM seed and representing the crop as organic, for which we took enforcement action and he is no longer certified." One can envision the same thing occurring with a change in the liability law: activists and/or schemers deliberately trying to create a "contamination" occurrence, in an attempt to either taint biotech crops or sue for a big pay day from the developer.

Read more on the research of Brookes and Barfoot that proves biotech, conventional, and organic crops can co-exist, as well as a recent letter from USDA to the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture on crop coexistence, on the Web site www.growersforwheatbiotechnology.org.

Sincerely,
Mike Waters

Bonding bill will boost state's economy

by Rep. Bernie Lieder

The 2005 Capital Investment Bill cleared one of its final hurdles this week when it was passed out of the Capital Investment Committee. Normally, the passage wouldn't generate much attention, but it's significant this year simply because it remains the main unfinished task of last year's legislative session.

I think if you were to ask people on the street whether they cared if the Legislature passed a bonding bill, most would probably shrug their shoulders. However, I think most Minnesotans were angry that partisan politics derailed last year's bonding bill. That's why the passage this week was a step in the right direction.

It's also important for what it means to our economy. [illegible] the current recovery [illegible] economy still isn't producing [illegible] paying jobs like it should. This Capital Investment or Bonding Bill [illegible] produce upwards of [illegible]

It's also an important [illegible]

[illegible] local repair and maintenance project, the proposal includes funding for a number of forward-thinking projects. They include a $20 million Genomics Research facility for the University of Minnesota and Mayo Clinic in Rochester that promises to keep the state in the forefront of gene research, nearly $50 million in clean water initiatives around the state, and $23 million for Reinvest In Minnesota (RIM) Reserve and Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP) to set aside economically sensitive farmland around the state, including thousands of acres in our area.

Passage of the bill would also leverage nearly $300 million in matching federal grants that will help spread the benefit even further.

There's also funding for a couple of flood mitigation projects in our area. The projects are funded differently in the House and Senate versions of the bill, so we won't find out [illegible] funding level until after [illegible]

[illegible] the kinds of [illegible] we need to be making [illegible]

[illegible] agriculture and renewable energy because of the foresight and investments of previous generations. This is what a bonding bill really is - an investment in a stronger future.

This bill should also help with future budgets. The fundamental reason the state budget continues to run a deficit, and why we continue to struggle to find ways to provide sufficient funding for schools or expand access to affordable health care or repair our roads and bridges, is because Minnesota's economic performance remains sluggish. Tax collections continue to come in below estimates and income tax and sales tax revenues have been particularly sluggish. Ten thousand more jobs in the state should help in that regard.

Finally, I also hope this marks the beginning of real bipartisan cooperation at the Capitol. We still have some very difficult choices in front of us. Balancing a budget that is $1.4 billion in the red isn't going to be easy and finding common ground will take compromise all around. However, a bipartisan bonding bill is a good place to start.

Renewable fuel is good for Minnesota

The numbers are impressive

by Gene Hugoson
Commissioner
MN Department of Agriculture

Minnesotans stand to benefit in several ways from becoming as the governor put it in his State of the State address, the "Saudi Arabia of renewable fuels." After all, as investments go, renewable energy has a solid track record and great long-term growth potential.

First, when we use renewable fuel in our cars, we are making an investment in our air quality. Studies show blending ethanol into gas helps reduce fine particulate emissions. The use of ethanol in our gas is one reason the American Lung Association recently praised Minnesota for its "green" energy policies. As the group pointed out, Minnesota has the highest per-capita renewable fuel use in the nation. Not coincidentally, we're also one of the few states with every county posting an acceptable ozone level.

Renewable fuels are also an investment in national energy security. By replacing more gasoline with a homegrown fuel, we reduce our unhealthy addiction to foreign oil. The importance of this becomes more obvious with every troubling headline from the Middle East and every new price spike at the gas pump.

According to the Renewable Fuels Association, America currently imports petroleum to meet about 62 percent of its needs. By 2025, it is projected that we will import 77 percent of our petroleum. Despite progress with renewable fuels, the nation's economic security and quality of life still depend too much on Middle East oil. Two-thirds of the world's remaining known oil reserves are located in Middle East countries. Pair these supply concerns with a rapid increase in demand for oil in emerging countries like China and India, and the long-range view is not rosy.

At the same time we reduce our foreign oil addiction, we boost our rural economy. Minnesota's renewable fuels industry is a unique collection of farmer-owned cooperatives. When we divert oil money from the Arabian desert to Minnesota's farm fields, we are investing in our own communities and our own future. We are creating billions of dollars in new business activity and thousands of new jobs for Minnesotans. Also, dried distiller's grain (a byproduct of ethanol production) is an important source of inexpensive, high-quality feed for the state's livestock producers.

Ethanol opponents have dusted off old studies, claiming it takes more energy to produce ethanol than you can get from it. This was a dubious assertion 15 years ago, and it's certainly not true today. Thanks to productivity advances on the farm and in ethanol plants, it takes much less energy to grow corn and turn it into ethanol.

The numbers are particularly impressive compared to gasoline. According to a recent U.S. Department of Agriculture study, it takes 1 BTU of crude oil to make 0.8 BTUs of refined gasoline. Using that same BTU of crude oil (or coal or natural gas) for ethanol production will yield 1.67 BTUs. The energy comparison is even more striking for biodiesel, which yields 3.2 BTUs for every 1 BTU spent producing it.

As for questions about engine performance, it's interesting to note that these same companies making dire predictions about E-20 don't seem to have qualms about doing business in Brazil, where the gas contains a minimum of 25 percent ethanol. In any case, Minnesota will seek a special waiver from the federal Environmental Protection Agency before E-20 use begins. That process will include rigorous testing to ensure higher ethanol content is safe and effective for car and truck engines.

What would greater use of renewable fuels mean for average Minnesotans? Not much, other than cleaner air, fewer energy worries and more businesses along the main streets of our small towns. That strikes me as a pretty good return on a pretty modest investment.

ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR

ST. HILAIRE, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA — MARCH 4, 1905

News Items

"Miss Huldah Gigstad entertained the Ladies' Whist Club last evening.

"Thief River Falls voted $28,000 of water works bonds by a large majority last Monday.

"Professor A. Onstad of Red Lake Falls was here last Monday evening giving instructions to the band.

"The planer closed down again yesterday and will not resume operations until Monday. Lack of orders is the cause.

"The ice houses in town have been filling up rapidly the past week but the ice is not in first-class condition owing to the warm weather.

"A carload of ice was loaded here last Tuesday for Hokan Johnson of Wylie. It was sent down with the passenger train the same evening.

"Martin McAndress had the misfortune to build his house on the wrong land on the reservation near Thief River Falls and was up this week moving it onto his claim.

"The rumor that the Soo would build their west line from Plummer through this place [St. Hilaire] owing to the obstacles encountered west of Thief River Falls does not seem to develop beyond the rumor stage. It is known, however, that they are having considerable trouble finding a suitable route at present.

"Talk about having trouble. If you want to know what the real article is, call on Charles Fellman, and he will tell you all about the time he is having breaking that bran new team of oxen he has purchased. The oxen are expected to break up a large part of Charley's claim this summer and he is giving them gentle exercise these days and learning their ways. The acquaintance has just begun and it takes a man fore and aft so far to make them go and about four men to get them to stop.

"The village was given quite a bad scare last Wednesday evening when the fire bell sounded an alarm and it was discovered that Otterness & Edstrom's hardware store was on fire. The fire started from the generator for the gasoline lamps in the store and gained considerable headway before the fire department arrived. The chemical [wagon] was, as usual, the first to arrive and it put out the fire in short order. The hand pump scored an absolute failure, and, although the firemen worked for at least thirty minutes, they did not succeed in getting it to pump any water. Considerable damage was done to the building and some of the stock and the lighting plant was ruined. All was fully covered by insurance. Had the fire gained headway, it would, in all probability, have burned all of the business section of town on the west side of Broadway, as the wind was in the south. That the fire pump should be looked after more closely and that the sawdust which covers the cisterns should be removed at once, seems the prevailing sentiment. Anyway it was a lucky escape and the warning should be heeded."

An Entertainment

"Miss Lottie Tillotson, who is reputed to be an elocutionist of marked ability, has been secured to give an entertainment in the Methodist Episcopal church on Monday evening, March 6th, the proceeds of the entertainment to be for the benefit of the church. All should attend."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

THE NEWS, JOHN W. EASTMAN, PUBLISHER — MARCH 2, 1905
THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA

The Soo to Start Early
Will Commence Work on the New Road in April

"Work of building the Soo line west from this city will be commenced about the first of April, or before that time, if the weather is favorable. It is the intention to rush the work as fast as possible and have the road completed by the time it freezes up, building the whole 300 miles in one year.

"As Thief River Falls is one of the division points on the new line, work of building the roundhouse here will be one of the first things commenced. It will require a great amount of work to get the land which the Soo has purchased of C. J. Knox in proper shape for railroad yards and a roundhouse and a system of sewerage will have to be installed. It is the intention to have the roundhouse finished before much of the extension is built and about 200 men will be employed on this job for several weeks.

"The Soo road is going to do much for Thief River Falls in the future and it can be stated upon very good authority that either the Soo or Duluth and South Shore line will build a road from this city to Duluth during 1906."

The Bond Issue Carries
Little or No Opposition to Water Works and Sewerage

"The special election held Monday for the purpose of voting bonds to the amount of $28,000 to be used in the construction of a system of water works and sewerage, resulted in the issue being carried by a large majority. Very little interest was taken in the election on account of there being no opposition, but over 400 votes were cast, a few ballots not being marked properly and were not counted. The vote resulted as follows:

|  | Yes | No |  | Yes | No |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| First Ward | 197 | 10 | Third Ward | 104 | 3 |
| Second Ward | 80 | 3 | Total | 381 | 16 |

"The city council met that night and after the vote had been canvassed and the result announced; at once announced that they would advertise the sale of the bonds and proceed to let the contract for the putting in of the system.

"The site of the power house has been selected and the old North Spring mill property is purchased for that purpose. In order that this might be fixed up at once, the council voted to borrow $1,000 from the Citizens State bank and close up this matter at once. The spring will furnish an abundance of pure water, which is the main thing to be considered in the construction of the plant. The power for operating the pumps at the station will be furnished by the city's electric light plant and can be done at very little cost to the city, and all will be under the supervision of Leonard Peterson."

New Rules
Ordinance Drawn for the New Fire Department

"The new ordinance for the new fire department to be formed in the city has been drawn up by City Attorney Lee. It provides for a company of twenty members including the officers. The men are to be paid stated sums each year instead of so much per fire. The chief is to receive $100 per year, first assistant chief, $75 per year, secretary, $75 per year, and the balance of the force to receive $40 per year. The salaries are all to be paid quarterly. The new ordinance also provides that fines of $2 for each fire to which a fireman fails to respond, shall be collected, but in no instance are the fines to be more in one year, than half of the salary."

Organized
Base Ball Fans Getting Ready for the Season

"The spring weather of last week resulted in a number of baseball fans gathering at Zeh's Fruit Store and an organization was effected for the coming year. Mr. Cavanaugh acted as chairman and the following officers for the baseball club were elected:

"The indications are that Thief River Falls will have an excellent ball team this year, and there is considerable new material in sight, while most of the old is still here."

A Good Looker
First State Bank to Build a Handsome New Home

"Architect Bert D. Keck of Crookston was in the city Tuesday and had with him the plans of the new building to be erected by the First State Bank at the Second street and Main avenue corner, the present location of this bank. The building will be 25 by 50 feet, two stories high, and will be built of pressed brick and cut stone, and marble columns will stand at each of the entrances. Mr. Keck is the architect who built the bank of Warren and this has long been recognized as one of the best banking buildings in Northern Minnesota. [illegible] he stated that the First State Bank building here would be even a better structure, and it will be good news to the people [illegible]."

FROM THE PAGES OF THE TIMES

50 YEARS AGO • MARCH 2, 1955

Prowler Sextet, Consolation Winners; Given Royal Welcome

"Nearly 1,000 persons assembled in the municipal auditorium late Sunday afternoon to give a heartwarming welcome to members of the Lincoln high school Prowler hockey team, who had just returned home from the state tournament in St. Paul with the consolation championship. Several of the players had been members of the 1953-54 team that won the state title."

Hockey Immortality

From the "Keeping Score" column by Huck Olson

"We'll wager that the Prowler and the Minneapolis South hockey squads skated into state tournament hockey immortality when they played their record-shattering eleven-overtime period game at St. Paul on Thursday night [overtime periods were 5 minutes each]. It was something of an anti-climax to have South win the game, 3 to 2, after 51:50 minutes of overtime play.

"So long as high school hockey continues to be a state tournament sport in Minnesota, so long will that Thursday night's 'marathon' be remembered and recalled. That game, which was a tournament first-round affair, faced off at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday night, and it was not until 12:24 a.m. Friday that a result was posted on the scoreboard. That's a hockey 'believe-it-or-not' if there ever was one!

"It's our belief that the 1954-55 Prowler hockey squad coming back to defeat Roseau and Eveleth after losing that overtime heart-breaker to South, turned in a greater accomplishment in winning the consolation title than last year's powerhouse did in winning the 1954 state championship."

Top Livestock Judging Team from Steiner 4-H

"A Pennington county team composed of members of the Steiner 4-H club and coached by County Agent William Penning, won first place in 4-H general livestock judging at the Winter Shows in Crookston last week. The team consisted of Roger Solem, Arlen Solem, Stuart Solem and Jerry Hunt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hunt. The Solem brothers are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Solem. In addition to the team victory, Stuart Solem won first place in individual judging and Arlen, second. Stuart also placed second in swine judging, while Jerry Hunt was selected as the champion beef cattle judge and Stuart Solem, second."

Trinity Fetes 200 Fathers and Sons

REGULAR BOARD MEETING
January 10, 2005
6:30 p.m.
S.D.S.C. Conference Room A

A regular Meeting of the Independent School District #564 School Board was held on Monday, January 10, 2005, in Conference Room A of the School District Service Center. Chairperson S. Young called the meeting to order at 6:30 p.m.

The following Board members were present: Steve Young, Barb Kalinoski, Mike Spears, Troy Bates, Jenni Erikson-Lane and Jon Lindgren. Also in attendance was Superintendent Irv Peterson. Clerk Barb Kalinoski affirmed that a quorum was present.

A motion was made by M. Spears and seconded by B. Kalinoski to approve the agenda as amended. Motion carried unanimously.

Chairperson S. Young noted there were no public comments.

Kurt & Kathleen Possis donated $297 to the Autism Program at Challenger Elementary School.

Jodi Borgman, Payroll Specialist, reported to the Board on some new services to be offered to employees of the district. District employees will soon be able to go online, through a secure site and view historical payroll information, sick leave, current check information, W4 info and more. Employees will be issued a password to be able to access the system. This option will be available in February 05. The district currently issues approximately 500 pay checks per pay period. Approximately 350 of employees are currently using the direct deposit option. The State of MN has recently signed into law that government agencies can require that ALL employee's use the direct deposit option. The district is hoping to enforce this in our district in July 05. Lost checks and un-cashed checks can be a huge headache and expense to the district. It will save the district time and money to streamline the payroll system.

Patrick Marolt presented a Kindergarten Update. Denise Nelson, Julie Olson, Susie Olson, Deb Fulton and Suzanne Steidl were also present to answer questions. They feel it would be very beneficial to students, parents, teachers and the community to go with All Day Every Day Kindergarten. Teachers currently have only 2.5 hours per day to try and teach these students and try to meet the districts/states expectations. Their days are jam packed. Students need the extra time in their day to provide additional support. The ultimate goal of the program would be to develop competent 5 & 6 year olds who will subsequently be better prepared to meet the challenges of 1st grade. Teachers could better meet the needs of individual students. They would like to see a 3 year pilot starting in the 05-06 school year. There would be 7 sections of Kindergarten. The district would need to hire 3 teachers and 5 additional EA's. Discussion was held between Board & Teachers.

Barb Kalinoski reported on the curriculum committee. They discussed reviewing the district math program. There need to be a seamless program between the buildings. Carol Ihle reported on standards work that needs to be done.

Harry Nelson reported that the OSHA team will be here Wednesday and Thursday of this week for an orientation. ESG will come the following week to set up a schedule for the districts energy survey. Harry reviewed resolutions on the agenda.

Irv Peterson will be attending the MSBA Conference in Mpls. this week. On February 2nd a negotiating seminar will be held in TRF. Irv encouraged board members to check the Lobby Line regularly to stay current on what is happening in the legislature. The # is 1-800-864-6722.

A board retreat to be set up for February 7th or 8th here at the DSC to review the districts goals and mission statement and to review the district budget.

New Neighbors

by Tate Sorvig

The cold hard smells of wind-weathered stones and tawny, dried grasses wafted up the draw and gave my nose a little love-tap. I was posting behind a stunted juniper bush just below the narrow mountain road that wound its way precariously up to our cabin. Situated on the side of a steep, rocky ravine, a spot I picked so that I could see far up its course, thereby increasing my chances of sighting the deer coming down from the slopes to feed on the rich crop land below in the valley. Every evening they made the journey to the flats and every morning they headed back up the mountain to bed down on its isolated slopes. It was upon this habit that I was counting as I squatted in the shadows of my juniper bush peering up into pines that lined the draw. I breathed in the fresh piny scent of the juniper and, as time dragged on, my mind began to wander.

My thoughts always begin to move slowly, gradually gathering momentum until they resemble the model of an atom, whirling and spinning in a blur of perpetual motion. I think about the meaning of life, the order of the cosmos, and of course the one question that has baffled and broken both simple and learned men since the first cave-man got shut down by some snobbish cave-lady: how to win a woman's heart. For some reason, these topics seem to grip my brain with a gleefully sadistic intensity that always drives me to frustration, confusion, and despair before I finally am able to surrender and crawl away on my belly leaving a trail of tears and dashed hopes in my wake. I was nearly to this point when I saw a large white diesel pickup pull up to the end of our road.

It parked alongside the rest of my party's vehicles which were left at the base of the hill due to the snow factor. At this point in the winter, there was perhaps three inches of snow on the ground, which was a blessing for tracking animals, but a hindrance to transportation, especially on sharply-graded mountain roads such as ours. My eyes narrowed as I realized that this truck did not belong to any of our neighbors who were in our good graces.

The passenger side of the truck was the side facing me, and I watched as a short, tomato-shaped woman climbed ponderously from the high cab. She argued briefly with the driver before slamming her door and walking to the side of the truck bed. She stood there, poised for a moment, looking as Bambi's mother did before she entered the meadow. Curiously, I leaned closer, as if moving an inch or two would reveal to me the secret of the situation. Then, faster and more fluid than a tiger strike, she dropped her drawers, grabbed a hold of the bed rail, and squatted.

I felt my mouth drop open in shock and I stared mesmerized, unable to drop my gaze. This was the first time I'd ever seen a woman's naked rump in real life and it wasn't exactly living up to my expectations. Several seconds passed before I finally managed to wrest my eyes away from the spectacle and look at the bare dirt beneath the branches of the juniper bush which had suddenly become incredibly interesting. After a few minutes, I took a quick glance at the truck and saw that she had completed her business and she and the driver were apparently reading themselves to climb up the road to my cabin – the road which curved about five feet above me.

As they began to pick their way up the road, I knew I had to make a decision – either break cover now and escort them up the cabin or cower in the shadow of the juniper and hope that my old-fashioned camouflage would hide me from their wandering eyes. My conscience, guilty over the scene I had just witnessed, prodded me to opt for the second option. I brooded for a moment, said a quick prayer, and burrowed deep into the scanty cover that the juniper offered. My sweat glands decided I was too hot and so began to release their cooling perspiration. Beads of sweat rolled slowly down my spine causing chills to roll back up it. What if they saw me? What would I say if the man stopped on the road five feet away and poked my back with his walking stick or worse yet, what if he grabbed a hold of my belt and dragged me out of my juniper like a political campaign dragging mounds of dirt out of their opponent's past? My breath quickened as I heard their casual, light-hearted voices approaching. The sound of their slow trudging footsteps crunching through the thin brittle crust of the snow grew closer and closer until I tensed every muscle in my body and concentrated on being invisible. I held my breath as they passed just above me and didn't let it out until they were around the next bend when it exploded in a great sigh of relief. I shimmied out of the juniper bush and sat back on my post. For some reason, I was completely exhausted. I had no idea being invisible was that difficult.

I waited there until dark and, after seeing no deer, struck along the path the strangers had traveled only an hour or two before. I puffed my way up to the cabin and found my father and my uncle kicking back on the porch and enjoying a couple of "icy cold ones". We went through the customary, "Didja see anything? O shoot, well maybe next time. Yeah I gotta good feeling about that spot. Course if they didn't go down that way they probably went down in the next draw over. Maybe you should try there tomorrow morning." Then, I asked them about the strangers.

"Well," my dad began, "they're our new neighbors that just moved here from Tennessee. Seems they bought the lot right below us at the base of the hill. They are . . . how would you say it, Tim?"

My uncle sipped sagely for a moment on his beer and replied, "Goofballs."

...My dad laughed, "Yup, that about sums it up, but why don't you go on in and meet them."

I felt my face flush and told them about my little experience on post and of course they thought the whole thing insanely funny. Amid their strangled laughter, I pushed through the big oaken door to the cabin and stepped into its warmth and light. Everyone was inside now except my father and uncle. My uncles and my grandpa were at the big wooden table my grandpa made, attempting to teach the strange woman how to play poker, while Hank and my two cousins Cody and Brian were sitting over by the wood stove talking with the strange man.

The cabin was built by my grandpa and my uncles of rough-hewn pine logs almost 20 years ago. It was a large building, easily providing room for the 12 men that slept within its walls, especially with its roomy loft which hung over half the room. The wall opposite the loft was encrusted with horns and antlers from bulls, antelope, deer, elk, moose, and caribou, but at its center hung a large wood-burning portrait of a Mexican cowboy with his six-shooter in one hand and a beer in the other.

Everyone greeted me with the customary,, "Heeeeeeeey!" and I walked over to shake hands with the strange man. He was tall, probably about 6'4", lean and rangy, and obviously someone who knew his way around a fight. He looked as though the world had given him a tumble and he had sprung back up, kicked the world in the kidneys, and taken its milk money. As I was thinking this and trying not to stare at the man, there was a chorus of groans from the card table as the strange woman threw down her cards and cackled while she raked in a pile of quarters. My cousins and Hank scurried over to the table to see what had happened and I was left alone with the stranger whom I shall refer to as "Mr. Tennessee". An awkward silence persisted as he grinned down at me from "tall people land" with a mouth which lacked several teeth. He held out his bottle of vodka and made a gesture as though I should drink some, but I smiled painfully and shook my head, to which he shrugged and gulped down the foul liquid like water. As he licked his lips I searched for something I could say to the man to break the silence.

"So . . . you're from Tennessee, huh?"

"That's right," he replied with a thick southern, backwoods drawl.

"Cool . . : so . . . why'd you leave Tennessee?"

"Too many foreigners."

"Foreigners?"

Mr. Tennessee tipped the vodka bottle back, swallowed, decided it wasn't quite enough, and tipped it back again, "Yeah, well, first it was them damned Mexicans." He paused to take another swig of vodka while my jaw began to drop, "Then them dammed niggers got all uppity, and if that wasn't bad enough, them damned sand-niggers come along and we decided it was time to get the hell out of Tennessee."

I tried to comprehend the words that had just casually popped out of Mr. Tennessee's mouth as he again sipped on the vodka bottle, but the only thing that came through my muddled mind was, "He said nigger!"

He must have noticed my virgin ears bleeding because he looked at me and asked, "What?".

I shut my mouth with a snap and mumbled something unintelligible.

He squinted at me and tried make sense of what I had said through his semi-drunken haze.

Right then, my cousin Cody turned back toward us and said to Mr. Tennessee, "Wow, that's a nice gun; do you wear it all the time?"

He was referring to the large silvered pistol holstered at the man's belt.

"This here is my best friend – my Colt .45. 'Course I carry it all the time."

A moment of silence ensued, and then Cody asked, "Why?"

"Well, snakes mostly, but if I see a coon and we're all alone, I'll shoot the bastard."

"I hate raccoons, too," Cody responded.

Mr. Tennessee laughed uproariously, swilling some of his vodka on the floor as he swung his arms out to keep his balance, "Not raccoons, coons – niggers! The black man, my friend, the black man."

The black man. So strange how simple he made it sound. The mam is black, therefore he does not deserve to live. I had never met with this sort of racism before. Sure, I had seen it in those videos you watch in social class, but it always seemed so old and far away. This was a perfect prejudice. This was really happening. And it was standing four feet away from me, calmly sucking down the remainder of the vodka. I was numb. I felt nothing toward this man. There was no anger, no pity, just nothing. Because he was nothing Without a word, I turned away from the large nothing and walked slowly over to the ladder that stood steady and solid below the loft. I grabbed a hold and climbed up. I crawled into my sleeping bag, cuddling into its smooth coolness. I slept.

The Not-So-Average Bear

by Kelsey Hoglo

Beary Bearington sat on Green Grass Hill, looked out onto Large Lake and sighed.

"I wish I could catch fish, like a normal bear. My tenth birthday is in three days, and if I don't know how to catch fish, my family will disown me."

You see, Beary wasn't a normal bear at all. He was born with only his left front leg, but he was right handed. His hind legs were normal... until he turned three. Beary grew an extra hind leg on his third birthday. There was only one thing good about having a third hind leg: the cubs at school couldn't call him names because all bears have four legs, even though Beary's were in the wrong spots.

There were many other things wrong with Beary. His right eye was in the middle of his cheek, which made it hard for him to see straight. The one thing that made Beary stand out most from other bears was the color of his fur. Beary had shiny blue fur instead of coarse brown fur, like his parents. Cubs at school called him 'Bluebeary'.

Beary stood up on his first and third hind legs and headed toward his cave. He was walking through Hags Hollow when his friend, Tula the Tiger, leaped out from behind a pine tree.

"Beary, why do you look so sad?" Tula asked.

"Because," Beary replied, "I'm the only bear in Forestopia who cannot catch a fish! The worst part is my tenth birthday is in three days!"

Tula looked at Beary as if he was on berries. "Why is your tenth birthday the worst part? I always thought it was supposed to be the best! And why do you need to catch ten fish for your birthday?"

"It's a bear ritual. On any bears tenth birthday, he must go out to Large Lake and catch ten fish. After he catches the required amount, he brings them to Smokey's Squat Pad and a séance is performed while cooking the fish to congratulate the bear on turning ten years old."

"I think I know how to help you. I have a friend, Lee the Lion, who teaches handicapped bears how to fish. He is at Large Lake right now."

Tula and Beary walked to Large Lake and were just about to walk over to Lee when some of Beary's cubmates from school started to torment him.

"Hey there Bluebeary! Wow everyone look at Beary," a black cub said, "he's got himself a friend!"

"Be quiet, Ralph... or I might just ralph!" Beary said.

The group of cubs raised their eyebrows at Beary's response. "Umm, yeah Beary. You do that," Ralph shouted back.

Beary and Tula approached Lee the Lion, and Lee said he would be pleased to teach Beary how to fish. When Beary said he needed to learn how to catch fish in three days, Lee the Lion said, "It's going to be tough, but I think I can do it."

Lee said that Beary could balance himself on his outer hind legs while he caught fish with his extra hind leg.

The three days went quickly. Beary learned how to catch all sorts of fish, and was very excited for his birthday to come.

On his birthday, Beary went to Large Lake and caught ten gigantic fish. He traveled ten miles to Smokey's Squat Pad where everyone was waiting for him. Beary's mother and father filleted the fish, and his grandfather performed the séance. All of the lions, tigers and bears—

"Oh my! We forgot to give Beary his cake!" Beary's mother exclaimed.

As I was saying: All of the lions, tigers and bears of Forestopia were at Beary's birthday celebration, and they all lived happily every after. Even Beary, the blue furred, 3-hind-legged, saggy eyed bear.

Last Thoughts

by Stephanie Liden

A green, scaly, plastic mass stands high over a deep, blue, glossy pool. The noise of a speaker crackles across the steady stand-still of girls. Heavy pulses beat as the slow moving stretch to hang on to the edge is taken. Eyes focus intensely on what lie ahead. The product of many hours of work and pain, to be carried out in a single event. The outcome is uncertain. The air is thin.

"Ladies, this is a whistle event, twenty lengths of the pool...take your mark..." The official announces these instructions delicately with a touch of warning to all false starters. My temples pound as muscles tighten. One last breath is released from my heavy lungs. The buzzer sounds.

An Exerpt From "Life In Meters"

by Bill Kezar

If at any point in my life I wasn't paying attention, could I have said something? People are always asking me to speak up or to repeat myself. But I don't remember saying anything. It didn't occur to me that my mouth was moving or that my vocal chords were vibrating. So, were they?

This is what I am thinking about as the stewardess hands me a warm bagel, accompanied by cream cheese, corn flakes and eight ounces of one percent milk. All inclusive in this packet are a knife, spoon and a banana. Orange juice is to follow, and I manage to contain my excitement.

Kentucky. Louisiana

A whole four ounces just for me. Out of my window, fields change from squares to circles. As the farther south we move, irrigation becomes increasingly important.

Speak up, they say.

I stare down at the open country we, as Americans, as humans, have divided up to show our worth. To compete and show our importance. These plots that are nonexistent until seen from the air. By foot, this concept is irrelevant. We could care less that our properties are split up into exactly one square mile plots. Perfectly aligned next to each other.

Could you repeat that.

I look out of my window at mountain ranges arranged on the ground like iron filings on a magnet. Winding below I see the St. Croix.

Mississippi.

Missouri.

Soon to come; the Pacific.

You never know how much you have until it's taken away.

That's why the Wright brothers were so hell bent on building their flying machine. I look down below.

Iowa.

Colorado. The vast mountainous regions of where ever.

Excuse me. What did you say.

The plane could crash, and we could all die. Burn right to the bone. We could lose our names and all be given the same number to be broadcast on the news.

Flight 116.

Outside, Ohio.

MP3

DVD.

Businessmen of the utmost importance stroll about the plane. Even now they have somewhere to go. I scrape my fingernail across my face and fill it with dead skin. Rivers bleed into lakes and lakes dry up into shores.

Montana.

Utah.

Somewhere down below, someone is looking up at me looking down on them. This is how life has always worked. I sit. I wait. With countless other martyrs feeding corporate America.

Lap tops. CD Players. Ticket stubs. Itineraries.

Kansas.

The Rockies.

"Excuse me sir, what was it that you wanted?"

I speak to the flight attendant for the first and only time in my life and whisper, "Coke."

Carpe Diem

by Sara Kalinoski

I sit outside, watching the daylight fade and the snow fall,
My mood darkened by thoughts on the cold,
And how much I hate when people stomp around in a new snowfall, dimming its beauty

Under my porch, I escape the wet drift from the descending dome

I gazed out at the familiar things in my yard, seeing a new horizon.
My winding sidewalk is rippled with snow, hints of yesterdays shoveling in the raised white that had crashed up against either side.
Our family apple tree is suffering from the punitive weight of the ever-drifting fall.
All the visible imperfections are covered celestially, a new existence.

The sun, mood and stars direct the porch chimes in dance,
Composing a theme song to my enlightenment

My eyes focus on tracks in the snow,
And suddenly I am diving, stretching for home plate
I land on my back, seeing only the illuminated omnipotent stadium before me.
I connect the dots to from dolphins, giraffes, and seagulls.

Inspired, I raise my arms and thrust my legs in parallel motions, embracing life.
I stand up carefully, and find my way back to my initial seat.

I looked over my creation as I rested, and decided it was good.

My First Kiss

by Ana Olson

After a "yawn," his arm was around me.
How cliché.
I tasted like cough drops.
I was on cold medicine,
it made it better.
Like it wasn't really happening.
In a darkened theater, with sticky floors and broken seats.
By the light of "The Animal."
It was wasted.

Nostalgiation, Revelation

by Ryan Josephson

Long ago, I made a solemn promise that became lost.
My inquisitive hands rifle through
My med. school stethoscope. Dusty...
As I revel in reminiscence
Thought I'd lost this helmet in the war...
In this, the homecoming of my past.
Old boxing gloves from my glorious youth....
Recollections of abandoned realms.
My climbing equipment...
I feel a sick rejuvenation of the mind.
I was married? I'd left behind so many things...
And the hollow heart of the wayward specter.
God, how I loved this gun, and the badge above it...
Resurrected lives surge into me.
Oh, the days in the courtroom...
Many careers.
This obituary doesn't lie, as I have...
Different faces.
Espionage: a good sample, but apparently not good enough.
Diverse identities.
What else is in this box, I wonder... ?
Whose are they?
No, please... I wanted to forget this...
Surely not mine.
I know all of these, but I know nothing...
For I am just a chameleon
I feel all of these, but I feel nothing...
Without a color
My mind is full, my soul is starving...
Of his own.
Ah...
I hold the memories.
Now I remember my promise to myself...
But do I keep them?
To forget...

Walkaway Fish

By Tate Sorvig

I was jarred from my thoughts by the voice of my friend.

"Okay, so...if our compass points North, does that mean that compasses in the Southern hemisphere point South? Like, you know, do they have a big "S" on them that they point to instead of a big "N"? Wow...that'd be cool. I want one of those."

I just stared at him for a few seconds, turned back to the window, and resumed zoning. I was riding shotgun in his beat-up, old truck. What a nutcase.

"Seriously though dude, wouldn"t that be so cool?"

I nodded absently, noting the slight anxious edge to his voice, as though he were wondering if he was a nutcase, too. I didn't care. Someone would tell him sooner or later. For now, he was getting me to where I was going. We were headed North on some godforsaken highway that lead to some godforsaken town where I was supposed to rehabilitate.

"Hey man, how "bout this one?" It's real deep; I just read this in a magazine the other day. Okay, so do you think fish feel the same way about water as we feel about air? I mean, like, does water to a fish feel like air feels to us?"

He paused a few moments as if to let the thought sink in on my side of the truck cab.

"You see what I"m saying man? We like, can't feel the air around us, so is that what water feels...like...to...fish?"

He trailed off as I fixed him with an icy stare. I don't care. Screw the fish. Grill them all and let them rot. Dry up all the lakes and rivers and let them flop bewildered and gasping for air on the hot sand. Screw the fish.

"Dude, you gotta let it go, man."

Screw you, too.

"Seriously, you used to be so much fun. You used to laugh. You used to talk. Now, I mean, it was a terrible tragedy, I know, but..."

How the hell could you know anything about it you friggin' nutcase?

He suddenly slammed on the brakes, brought the truck to a screeching halt, and shouted, "Dammit! What's it gonna take to bring you back to reality, man? Huh? What"s it gonna take?"

I climbed out of the truck and shivered uncontrollably in the cold rain. When did it start raining?

"Hey man, I'm sorry. Get back in the truck."

Wow, that rain really is cold.

"Come on, seriously, get back in the truck."

I wonder if it's really raining, or if I'm just experiencing what a fish feels when it's pulled out of the water. An alternate perception. A near-life experience.

I turn back toward the truck and gaze dumbly in to where my friend is moving his lips and frantically gesturing for me to get back into the truck. I smile. Then, I point my nose at the big "S" and start walking.

Driver's Test

By Ana Olson

"But it seemed so far off in the future. . ." is her excuse but here she is, on Easter Sunday maneuvering between orange reflectors as if her life depended on it.
Hours of practice, temper tantrums anxiety fear and then the "what ifs?"
"What if I hit the curb?
Or a cone?
Or a small child?
Will I still pass then?"
"You'll be fine," they reassure her
"you'll pass; and if you don't, it doesn't matter."
But their eyes say differently.
"Get some sleep."

She does, but even in her dreams, she is parking and backing up trying desperately not to hit any cones in-between dream sessions, her eyes dart towards the red light
2:48
3:21
4:37
4:56
5:14
5:32
6:13
and then, finally 6:30. . .

In the car, waiting for the examiner,
she hurriedly gets rid of all evidence of possible "driving distractions?
cd player, cds, and her morning juice.
He approaches.
She gives a smile.
It is left unreturned.
After a slight argument about whether or not the insurance card is valid or not, they are ready.
"Turn right here.
Parallel park here and DON'T hit my poles."
Oh-so-carefully, she swings the car into place.
It works.
She looks at him, hoping for some hint that she did a good job.
None.
He checks his watch.
"When you're ready.
Right.
Left.
Left.
Pull over here, get ready to corner back.
Any questions?"
"Well, actually, yes. I was wondering, should I use my four-way flashers for this part?"
"I Don't Care. Any Other questions?"
A look at him, and she swallows the others, "Umm. . . no."
"Then do it."
Lining up the side of the car with the cone, she says a prayer,
resists the urge to close her eyes,
cramps the wheel,
and gently pushes down on the accelerator.
It's a bit close, but nothing hits.
Thank god.
"Left.
Right.
This test is SUPPOSED to be taken at regular town speeds. Can we do that?
Left. . . . Left . . . . Right.
Pull over and stop here. . .
This park was very poor.
You are practically on the street."
A final check mark.
"Here's your permit back.
"You passed."
She sighs,
then laughs,
and thanks him.
"Have a nice day!"
Her answer is the cold slam of the door.

The Wings Of Celebrity

by Ben Willis

Back at home, Harvey felt special. But in the big city, his ability to fly went largely unnoticed. He made his move a month ago, when he decided that his parents were getting on his nerves.

"Harvey, why don't you stop flying around and make something of yourself?!" yelled his dad one day. "Ever since you discovered that 'talent' of yours, you've done nothing to further your life!"

"You're a burden on the family!" sobbed his mother, clutching a tear-stained cloth to her chest. "I don't know how to cope with this!"

Harvey rolled his eyes. He knew they were jealous. They thought 'Why couldn't that recessive gene been passed to me?! ME?!' He was tired of their greed, and shamed by it. He drifted away from his parents' berating to the 7-11, where he could always count on a complimentary slurpee. Jack, the old, fat owner, loved novelty. He collected rubber chickens and newspapers with misprints in them. When he learned that Harvey could fly, he was overjoyed. He treated him like a king, and made him the mascot of the store.

"Hey Jack," intoned Harvey, floating past the rack of packaged pastries.

"Harvey!" yelled Jack, abandoning the customer to whom he was showing where he could find the motor oil and keychains. "How's my favorite superhuman doing today?"

"Not so hot," replied Harvey. "My parents think that I'm a burden because I quit school so I could just fly around all the time."

"Well, you have to understand their position, Harvey, you know they can't possibly understand how it is to be so special. They are but normal people, living their flightless lives and resenting those who can do more than they can"

"I know that, Jack, but how is it that you understand me so perfectly?"

"Some of us are just special that way," admitted Jack, as he rung up the order for a short man wearing a rumpled corduroy jacket.

"Say," said the man, "Are you that boy who flies?"

Harvey looked down at his feet that were hovering a good four feet off the floor, about even with the man's chest, and replied, "no, I'm not. It just looks that way because you're stupid." And then he giggled until he couldn't breathe anymore.

Jack guffawed three huge times, and then turned to the man and said, "Of course he is, mister, do you have some business with him?"

"In fact," the man said, licking his cracked lips, and rubbing his sticky hands together, "I do. You see, I'm a traveling businessman, and I hear about special things from all over the land. I go from town to town, and when I find something profitable, erm, unique, I try to capitalize on it, or rather, make it known to the world."

And so, Harvey, who had never left the small town of Littleton, moved to the bustling city of Largetropolis. And while the man had promised his media coverage and riches, he was arrested as soon as they got there for eight counts of forgery, and three counts of ripping tags off of mattresses,

So what is a lazy, chubby 19 year-old kid with an eighth-grade education supposed to do? He turned to a life of prime.

County Fair

by Jillian Larson

Missing the county fair this year-- where the dirt by the ferris wheel sprays up with the clapping of flip-flops and crouches in shadows between pedicured toes forming an grainy film over summer feet unnoticed under July stars and a dome-sky enclosing this small piece of world and allowing the sugary-boiled-confection-bakery-funnel cake aroma to resonate like the echo of the folk fiddler in the grandstand playing for flannel shirts tapping pointed boots on nickel colored bleacher benches and the grimy confetti-purple-shirted voice auctioning rigged games for high prices and prizes of hollow teddy bears and girls with quotas swing cut-off pockets left and right toward the circles of boys with shiny faces and humid sweat from turbulently twirling tilt-a-whirl carts in the dense blurry air and then it is over;

the rides rust in sleak shiny silver bullets of rain and the dirt by the ferris wheel sprays up with the clapping of slippery slick flip-flops in its muddy puddles and the sweaty boys offer the swinging cut-offs rides -- no harm done

as July stars will shine down on grandstands again next year.

Going Nowhere

by Kelsey Hoglo

I walked into the old house and her mom shouted, "Abbi's upstairs!" I kicked off my shoes and ran past the dirty-dish-filled sink, food-caked table-tile-cracks, and rusted green refrigerator. As I ran up the scum-stained maroon carpeted stairs, I wrinkled my nose at the strong scent of dirty litter box. I wanted to gag, but Abbi walked around the corner. I put on a fake smile and asked, "How's it goin'?"

"Pretty good," she replied. "Sean gave me another note...."

"Really? What's it say this time?"

"Well, I wish he'd stop bothering me," she said with a smile. "He tells me I'm beautiful and all that crap. How he just wants to hold me, and that he has never felt this way about anyone," Abbi stared at me with a smile that said you have to care.

"What a creep," I pretended to care.

"Yeah! And there's this guy Aaron from the cities...I met him online. He's really cute!"

"Whatever happened to Rob?"

Rob was just another internet boyfriend of hers. He didn't matter, just like everyone else in her life.

"Who cares? Besides, Aaron lives closer. I'm going to meet him when I go down to my dad's this summer." She sat down at her computer desk.

I just smiled. I don't know why she treats people the way she does. Maybe she thinks the world revolves around her? I don't think anyone knows.

I remember when I first saw Abbi, in fifth grade. She was trying to melt the ice on the bus window by blowing on it. She took her time. I wish she'd still give something the time of day. She doesn't care about anything. If she wants something, all she has to do is ask her filthy rich dad for it and she gets it. It doesn't last more than a month in that house. She neglects things, and she neglects people. I wish she'd get over herself and give people some respect. She treats everything like a dirty litter box. And her conceited little looks and snide smiles really get to me sometimes. I know she means for them to. Does it give her some sort of thrill knowing that her awful words have the power to hurt somebody? I wish she would take the time to think about all the important people in her life, think of what they've done for her and do just one good thing for them. Where is she going to end up if all she cares about is herself? Being self-centered and inconsiderate doesn't get anybody anywhere.

"Hey, Ellie!" I petted Abbi's dog as she trotted up to me. She pooped on the carpet and trotted back out. Abbi looked at the pile, shrugged her shoulders and went back to surfing the internet for more online relationships.

"So, are you finished with your research project yet?" I asked, still disgusted by the fact that she had not cared about her dog taking a crap on the floor.

"No, when is it due?"

"Friday, I think."

"I haven't even started it," she laughed. "You should do mine for me."

I forced a smile. When she turned away, I rolled my eyes. Why did I even ask if she was almost done? She never went to school. She had been gone at least a fourth of the school year, and it was only the middle of the second quarter.

"Are you coming to school tomorrow?" I rolled my eyes again—what a stupid question.

"Probably not. I'll be tired, and my mom doesn't care if I sleep in," She gave me that you have to care smile again.

"Oh, cool," I lied. If she kept up at this pace, she wouldn't have enough credits to graduate.

I sat by myself on the edge of her bed for another hour as she talked to people she'd never meet. I became so overwhelmed with boredom and the smell of dirty litter box that I decided to leave.

"Hey, I'm gonna go. I've gotta finish up my forensics homework or I'll bomb the test," I lied. "See you tomorrow maybe."

"I doubt it, but bye!" She called over her shoulder. I stepped over the dog's land mine as I walked out of her room and shut the door behind me.

I just shook my head and walked home as fast as I could. I suddenly appreciated my life a whole lot more.

Left Behind

by Kasey Iverson

You're the one who left me behind so many years ago, yet expect me to give into your needs to increase your already full ego.

What you did in the past may one day be forgiven, but never forgotten,
this life you forced us to live.

You may be my father by blood, but you're a stranger in my heart.
One day long ago,
you promised we would never be apart.

Now as time passes,
talking only a few times a year.
You still haven't changed, as it had one time appeared.

You are now only a half forgotten memory.
You were too obligated to care about me, or stick around to watch me achieve my dreams.

Don't tell me I never tried to contact you when I made time, because you were the one who never tried.
You gave up when you left me behind.

Outcast

by Kasey Iverson

He's on his own;
an outcast.
He wakes up each morning wondering if it will be his last.

He dresses into his baggy clothes and combs his green streaked hair, all the while thinking
if another day he can bare.

Entering the school,
he is instantly ridiculed.
He tries to walk on by,
but his feet seemed to be glued.

A blow to the face,
another to the side.
He falls to the ground;
wanting only to hide.

But he's on his own,
an outcast.
He woke up today and knew it would be his last.

Trick-Or-Treat

by Tammy Mehrkens

Retreating from the dark of the night to warm their small fingers, Goldilocks and the three little bears scurry to the small confines of their van. Two new passengers arrive and try and try to force themselves into the already too small compartment. The tightly packed arrangement of superheroes, bears, and "regular" people soon become just too much for the vehicle to hold. They fall out, like projectile vomit, to the freezing cold ground. Goldilocks grasped her pink pumpkin pail, and impatiently waited for the three little bears (her brothers) to find their purple pumpkin pails and accompany her to the ghostly white house. The superheroes brought up the back, protecting all from sudden invaders.

A sudden knock-knock, followed by "trick-or-treat," and small rewards are placed into the empty pumpkins. Smiles race across the faces of Goldilocks and two of the bears—the third has no idea what is going on a she is being carefully held by his forebear—as they receive the starting rewards of the busy night. They search their pails to see what they little goody is, hoping they will not have to wait before they can consume their newest possession. The bears are only drawn away from their pails by a furry little creature slowly trotting across the linoleum floor. They drop their pails and scurry toward the overly friendly feline as their hungry faces become excited. The eldest bear reaches his paw forward to tough the new friend, but hesitates at the last minute to shrivel in fear. They scurried back to the cage-like vehicle they had arrived in, leaving Goldilocks, the baby bear, and their forebear to fend for themselves. The superheroes helped the bears into the van as the others slowly accompanied them. One superhero in the back with a bear and Goldilocks, while the rest forced their way to the front. The eldest bear tries to dig his way out of the cage, but is unable to force his way out of its impenetrable walls.

They went to many different houses where they received their trophies. After their pumpkins were full, their forebears brought them back to their den where each bear was unzipped, washed off, put into pajamas, and sent to their beds with a hug and kiss from their parents. Goldilocks was allowed to enjoy a little candy before she was cleaned off, put in her pajamas, and was sent to bed with a kiss and hug. Goldilocks and the three little bears had had a very busy night transforming, hunting, making the long trip back to their warm den with the treasures they worked so hard for, just to change back to the children they usually are, and be placed into their loving beds.

The Apparent Obviation of Reginald, Which Presents Unanswered Questions Intended to Supersede Presumptions

by Ben Willis

After a long run, Reginald poured himself a glass of water.

He took a long drink and then set it on the counter.

A moment later, he reached for the glass without looking at it, and felt nothing.
He looked down to where his hand should have been grasping the cool, smooth surface, and saw nothing.
He was surprised.
He searched for his hand,
but he could not locate it.
He decided to start searching at his shoulder, and then work his way down the arm to find those illusive fingertips.

This strategy was halted when he could not locate a shoulder either.
He tried to spin his neck around, but was unable to do so.
As he was momentarily distracted from the search for his limbs, it was suddenly apparent that he had no longer had any visible surroundings.

He glanced about in the darkness, at least he thought he glanced about, but he felt no movement where his eyes should be,
and was not optimistic about their presence either.

He thought about his situation, and could find no possible explanation.
So puzzled was he by this, he developed a headache.
Well, he felt that he should have a headache
. . .from the rigorous thinking, but then he could no longer discern whether he actually had a headache, or if the illusion of a headache were there because he imagined it.
If he had no head to ache, how could he possibly have a headache?

Thinking on that subject made the pain dissipate.
Did this mean that there was no pain to begin with?
Or did the thinking alleviate it?

As he thought, he imagined that he could feel the axons firing as to transmit his thoughts, but were they too, ignis fatui, overactive will-o'-the-wisps?
He did not know whether he had any discernable physical value.
And was there more to value about him than the physical?

The axons and dendrites that so dutifully connected in order to make his mental existence possible are also physical.
Did he actually have metaphysical properties?

He had always assumed that he had a soul, because he felt that he had a soul, but was that merely an attachment that his weak human mind had to create to ensure purpose?

Is the human mind so desperate for some divine or superterrestrial existence that it would create this metaphysical incarnation of itself inside itself?
Would that make the metaphysical incarnation real if it is believed to be real, when there is no way of proving it false?
If there are no intangible facets to humans, is the time they spend internalizing and pondering and philosophizing on themselves wasted?
Countless hours, days, years, effete for no good reason while the physical world crumbles in atrophy?

Two People

by Serena Kopecky

Two people died last night.
Over the freeway median and into the semi-truck.
He changed lanes a little too fast.
He spilt the beer.
She dropped the weed.
He let go.
She screamed.
Only God knows what they've seen.
Last night was a mistake.
Feeling high and happy she whispered, Interstate?
He turned and floored the pedal.
A tire came loose and cracked the window.
Her body was ejected from the passenger's seat.
At a party, Friday night, two people embarked on a road trip.

My Little Apricot

By Alissa Langan

I babysit the girl next door.
She is sweet like an apricot.
Tonight she wants to play.
Tonight I have homework to do.
I give her a snack to keep her occupied.
A juicy orange apricot.
She sucks on it.
I do my homework.
Splat.
An orange sticky blob on my paper--yuck.
I toss the apricot back with a grin.
You can keep it.

Following the market fluctuations

Seven times out of 10, the best prices are offered early in the season, so now might be the time to start taking some shots at the market.

by David Hill
Editor

Seven times out of 10, the best prices are offered early in the season, so now might be the time to "start taking some shots at the market."

Michael Swanson, agricultural economist for Wells Fargo Economics, presented a primer on market factors to a group of interested farmers, ag lenders and businessmen in Thief River Falls Wednesday, March 2, at the Black Cat.

Swanson reviewed key factors, such as interest rates, core inflation, the treasury yield curve, energy, and commodity markets. At least two important bits of advice came out during the discussion - sell some of your soybeans and wheat if you have some in the bin ("not all in one fell swoop"), and prepare realistic budgets after looking closely at unit or per acre production and costs per unit.

Don't bet against Alan Greenspan. Swanson said Greenspan has said key interest rates will go up, and because they have, the prime rate follows. A better than anticipated job creation (2.2 million jobs last year), and an increase in core inflation, said Swanson, are the basic reasons for the increase in the key interest rate, so don't bet against Greenspan.

Borrowing. Why should farmers care that the treasury yield curve is flat or trending up? Swanson said anyone who has utilized variable rate financing, which is tied to short-term government money, will see that the curve is getting flat. As a result, variable rate financing, which has been very attractive in the past few years, will not be as attractive.

Mortgage rates have been at record lows and people have been fairly aggressive. Swanson noted that there has been a lot of home construction and more aggressive ag land deals. However, inflation bears watching, because as inflation goes up, so too will mortgage rates.

Energy. Energy stocks are higher than they were a year ago, yet prices are higher. Swanson said that fear - fear of the future is currently driving high prices. He stated that now is not the time to panic and buy.

High natural gas prices are important to farmers because natural gas is used in making fertilizer. Stocks of natural gas are also higher than they were a year go, but prices are higher. In fact, these prices are at historic highs too. Again, Swanson advised farmers not to panic and not to buy more than they need.

Swanson said that a positive

Daffodil Days

Paula Craig and Debbie Larson, clients at Falls Developmental Achievement Center in Thief River Falls chipped in on Monday to help package daffodils. Daffodils, representing the gift of hope, will be available at many churches, SuperOne, Kmart, Best Western, and Handy Farms in Thief River Falls during various times. Donations for the flowers help support American Cancer Society cancer research, education, program services, and advocacy. A bunch of 10 may be obtained with a donation of $7.

Daffodil Days spread message of hope

The American Cancer Society is raising money for cancer research, education and patient services through its annual Daffodil Days. Proceeds from Daffodil Days support the American Cancer Society research program that has made a healthy future possible for so many.

The little yellow flower, which represents so much hope for the future; can be obtained a several sites in Thief River Falls this week, March 7-13. Sixteen churches in the community will be offering bunches of flowers for a donation of $7 per bunch on Sunday. Several also will be offering the daffodils on Saturday.

In addition to locations at churches, daffodils will be available:

- on Friday, March 11, at SuperOne and Kmart from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.;
- on Saturday, March 12, at SuperOne from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., and at the Best Western from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.
- on Sunday, March 13, at Handy Farms from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., and at the Best Western from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Air subsidy falls short?

Federal proposal may force TRF to pony up $70,000

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Proposed $52 million cuts to Essential Air Service (EAS) may impact the city of Thief River Falls.

The EAS program was created after the airline industry was deregulated. It was established so that small communities could continue to have a basic level of air service.

Under the program, the federal government provides a subsidy to the city of Thief River Falls in order for Mesaba Airlines to provide passenger air service to the Thief River Falls Regional Airport (TRFRA).

Last year, the TRFRA received $707,000 in EAS funding, according to City Administrator Jodie Torkelson. Under President George W. Bush's proposal, the city would be required to contribute 10 percent of the cost for EAS, which would amount to $70,700.

If the proposal passes, city leaders would have to find a way to cover that $70,700. "It's not something the city plans for," said Torkelson, who noted TRFRA is the only Minnesota airport receiving EAS funding.

In the event Congress passes the proposal, what would the city of Thief River Falls do? Raising the property tax levy by one percent would raise approximately $17,000, said Torkelson. "If we had to cover it by raising taxes, the levy would have to increase 4-1/2 to 5 percent."

According to Public Works Director Ron Lindberg, 4,300 passengers used the TRFRA last year. "We can't afford to get rid of any

S.D. 564 looks at tests

It's changing our schools and the way teachers teach

by David Hill

The addition of Minnesota Comprehensive Assessments, and more directly, Northwest Evaluation Assessments, have had a significant impact on School District 564. Though the tests are taken by students, School District 564 has had to become more deliberate and purposeful in its goal setting, and open to different ways of teaching.

Carol Ihle, curriculum director for School District 564, presented an update on the District's testing program to the Board of Education for School District 564 Wednesday, March 2.

The District's testing program includes state mandated tests, known as Minnesota Basic Standards Tests (BST) and Minnesota Comprehensive Assessments (MCAs), as well as Northwest Evaluation Assessments (NWEA) - Measures of Academic Progress (MAP) tests.

Ihle discussed a number of changes being proposed for several of the tests. In 2006, the MCAs will become the MCA II, which may include a growth model, and will be based on new standards instead of the old Profiles of Learning. (NWEA tests are considered to be a better measure of student growth. One of the chief complaints about

AmericInn plans opening date for first quarter of 2006

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

For years, rumors have circulated about the possibility of an AmericInn in Thief River Falls. Residents now have an answer to that question.

The target opening date will be in the first quarter of 2006, said John Seibert, president of JCS Development in the Twin Cities and a partner in the Thief River Falls AmericInn. Construction would start this summer or fall.

The AmericInn will be built southeast of The Lantern, said Thief River Falls Community Development Director Mike Moore. He noted the property is currently zoned commercial and owned by Bill Morrow.

The AmericInn will offer a meeting room, pool and whirlpool, said Janel Clark, director of public relations with AmericInn International LLC. It will also offer specialty rooms with fireplaces and whirlpools.

"We're trying to create a home away from home atmosphere," Seibert said.

Some suites will be geared toward those traveling on business. Those suites will have oversize working desks for the corporate traveler, Seibert noted.

"I'm not ashamed to say I'm a virgin," said Miss Thief River Falls Sarah Zak to a group of Lincoln High School students Feb. 28.

Zak, who will relinquish her crown in June, talked about her platform of abstinence before marriage. "I decided at a young age to wait to have sex before marriage," said Zak, who brought her message to students in Helen Anderson's health classes.

About her own virginity, Zak said that it is a special gift she'll give to her future mate. It is a way to protect herself from heartache. It helps her avoid the guilt and disappointment she might feel about having sex, and enables her to respect herself. It also keeps everyone healthy, emotionally and financially, she said.

At the same time, Zak admitted it's a decision the students have to make on their own. "It truly is a personal choice," she said.

It may not be an easy decision to make. "It does take a lot of respect and integrity to say no," said Zak, noting that everyone is tempted.

Not giving into that temptation may help students avoid sexually transmitted diseases (STDs). STDs affect four million teenagers each year, Zak said.

If a person had sex with seven lovers and each of those lovers had seven lovers, Zak said, it would be like having sex with 56 partners. As a result, there would be increased risks of AIDS, herpes and pregnancy. The risk is four times greater to get an STD than it is to get pregnant, she noted.

"Let's think ahead to 10 years from now, guys, you've found the woman of your dreams and you get down on one knee," Zak said. While handing the woman an engagement ring, the man tells her he has genital warts. He also tells the woman she'll probably get genital warts and she may get cervical cancer from human papillomavirus (HPV) - the virus that causes genital warts. Even though genital warts may be treated, HPV will remain in the person's body.

21 people died on state's roads February

On March 1, the Minnesota Department of Public Safety (DPS) announced preliminary Minnesota State Patrol traffic crash reports indicate 21 people died on the state's roads in February and 26 were seriously injured. One-third of those killed and almost one-half of those seriously injured were not wearing seat belts. To date in 2005, there have been 61 traffic deaths compared to 58 at this time last year.

In February, eight motorists died in the metro region and 13 died in Greater Minnesota. One of those deaths occurred in Pennington County – Travis Steven Flont, 16, Thief River Falls, was killed after his snowmobile collided with a truck.

There were six deaths in the south central region alone — five in Blue Earth County and one in LeSueur County. There were three fatalities in Hennepin County and two fatalities each in Carver and Wright counties. There was one death each in Cass, Dakota, McLeod, Nobles, Ramsey, Scott and Steele counties. There were no deaths in the northeastern corner of the state.

Among the 21 deaths, seven were not belted, and 12 of the 26 motorists seriously injured were also not wearing seat belts. Four of those seriously injured were people outside their vehicles assisting other motorists when they were struck by a vehicle. Impaired driving accounted for two deaths and four serious injuries. There are six additional fatal crashes and six other serious injury crashes under investigation to determine if alcohol was involved.

"In a majority of these crashes, motorists simply lost control of their vehicles and went off the road, or in some cases, into oncoming traffic," says Col. Steve Mengelkoch, chief of the State Patrol. "These deaths serve as a reminder to slow down, stay focused and buckle up."

Males represented 14 of the fatalities and 14 of those seriously injured. Motorists ages 29 and younger accounted for nearly half of the deaths and injuries.

Of the 19 fatality crashes, 10 were single-vehicle crashes while nine of the 13 serious injury crashes were multi-vehicle crashes. The crashes occurred at all times of the day.

Wittenberg joins TRF Police Department

Vern Wittenberg

Vern Wittenberg has joined the Thief River Falls Police Department as a police officer. He began working for the department Feb. 22.

Wittenberg is not the only person in his family working as a law enforcement officer in Thief River Falls. His brother Dick is a captain with the Minnesota State Patrol.

"It seems like a nice community, atmosphere to raise a family," said Wittenberg, who grew up in Gonvick.

Wittenberg received his two-year law enforcement degree from Hibbing Community College in December 2002. Before working as a Thief River Falls police officer, he worked for the Clearwater County Sheriff's Office as a sheriff's deputy, jailer and dispatcher for one year. His past work experience includes working as a police officer with the Leech Lake Police Department.

Wittenberg decided to work in law enforcement because he grew up with it, he noted. His mom was a corrections officer for Clearwater County.

Accepting the Thief River Falls job means being closer to home and family, and it offers him everything he wanted in a law enforcement career, Wittenberg said.

"I think he's going to be a good addition," said Thief River Falls Police Chief Kim Murphy.

Wittenberg and his wife, Lara, will be living in Thief River Falls.

One less tax headache: Find vehicle registration taxes online

Every year at tax time, Minnesota's Driver and Vehicle Services Division (DVS) receives calls from hundreds of people trying to find out how much they spent last year on vehicle registration taxes. Getting the answer used to be complex and time-consuming.

Now, the answer is simple: www.mndriveinfo.org.

The DVS Web site offers a "Tax Information" link that displays plate numbers, expiration years, and amounts and payment dates of registration taxes when users enter their driver's license number or license plate number. It also provides phone numbers for the Minnesota Department of Revenue and the IRS and explains how registration fees are deductible on federal taxes.

Patricia McCormack, director of DVS, said that the registration tax information has been available on mndriveinfo.org for about three years. "And we've added new services," she continued, "such as the crash reporting service. Those who haven't visited the site recently should take another look."

Online services currently include tab renewal, crash reporting, road test exam scheduling, office location finder, access to driver's manuals, forms, fee information and more. Customers who acquire a personal identification number (PIN) at their local driver's license office can also perform private transactions online.

Mn/DOT solicits comment on draft of transportation plan

Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn/DOT) – District 2 Northwest, is inviting public comment on its draft 2006-2008 Area Transportation Improvement Program (ATIP).

The public comment period for the ATIP is from March 8 through April 8, 2005.

The ATIP is a three-year program for state and federally funded transportation investments of regional significance. The ATPs integrate state and local priorities within their areas and submit for inclusion in the draft State Transportation Improvement Plan (STIP) which is a statewide document.

Karen Thygeson represents Legion Auxiliary

Karen Thygeson, a member of the American Legion Auxiliary from Thief River Falls, was in Washington, D.C. recently and lobbied for issues that affect American war veterans.

Thygeson, the alternate national committeewoman of the Minnesota American Legion Auxiliary, was one of a delegation of 27 Minnesotans in Washington, D.C.

The delegation met with every Minnesota representative and senator. Included in the lobbying efforts were:

- Fighting the cuts in Veterans Affairs funding. President George W. Bush's budget calls for less money for VA health care and also an increase in drug co-pay and a fee of $250 annually for some to use the system.
- Making veterans health care funding mandatory. Like Social Security and Medicare, veterans health funding through the Veterans Administration should be mandatory and not subject to yearly cuts and debates, they said.
- The Flag Protection Amendment. This measure had been introduced in both the House and Senate. The bill calls for an amendment that would allow protection of the U.S. flag from physical desecration.

The delegation spent four days in Washington, D.C., and attended informational sessions. There are 53,000 members in the Minnesota American Legion Auxiliary.

Random Acts of Kindness activities were held at Franklin Middle School February 7-11. The purpose was to help students see how they can impact those around them in a positive way. Throughout the week students were encouraged to write thank-you notes to friends and family, do kind acts for others, and make donations to a wide variety of organizations. The students wrote letters in their Communications classes to school staff who had impacted them in a positive way. Other activities included theme days for each day of the week, a diversity scavenger hunt through the Media Center and cultural trivia contests. Donations this year were light bulbs and toilet paper given to the Violence Intervention Project, food items for the local food shelf, a quarter collection to the Red Cross for tsunami relief, and postage stamps donated to Project Support Our Troops. The donations and activities allowed students to see the small things they could do that had a big impact on others. (Submitted photo)

Penas bill would allow funds for bridges in small cities

Rep. Maxine Penas (R-Badger) has introduced legislation that would allow state transportation funds to be used for the design and preliminary engineering of bridges in smaller cities.

"Smaller communities don't have the dollars to finance these important projects," Penas said. "Many of the bridges and culverts along local roadways throughout Greater Minnesota need to be replaced, and the city councils can't afford to do it. It's a huge public safety issue. This would put qualifying cities under the same rules as townships."

If approved, the bill would allow the state's transportation commissioner to award grants to cities with populations of 5,000 and less, and a net tax capacity of less than $200,000 for the design and preliminary engineering of bridges on city streets. The total grant amount per cities cannot exceed $200,000.

"Minnesota is a network of smaller communities that need the infrastructure to get from place to place," Penas said. "This legislation will be one more tool for small cities to use."

The value of developing partnerships

by Ron Dvergsten
Dean of Management Education
Northland Community and Technical College

Northland Community and Technical College Farm Business Management Department began a partnership eight years ago with the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers (MAWG) and the Minnesota Barley Growers. The start of this partnership came as a result of cosponsoring an annual educational conference for the members of the organizations. The vast majority of our Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) Farm Business Management (FBM) students are members of these commodity organizations. It seemed to be a natural fit to join efforts to present a topnotch conference.

At the conference, NCTC FBM instructors deliver several educational breakout sessions, and the FBM Department provides a considerable amount of the technical equipment needed for the events. The commodity associations are responsible for the advertising, sponsor solicitations and take the lead in the overall conference planning. NCTC will have at least one instructor on the conference planning committee. In the eight years of this partnership, conference attendance has grown from 175 attendees to over 425 attendees at the 2004 conference.

In addition to the Prairie Grains Conference, MAWG was very instrumental in coordinating efforts in establishing Commodity Marketing Groups throughout northwestern Minnesota. From the relationship that developed, MAWG came to NCTC FBM for the instructional expertise to deliver a structured educational program for Agriculture Commodity Marketing. MAWG surveyed its membership as to the interest and willingness to enroll at NCTC in a new Agriculture Commodity Marketing Program (ACMP). Six instructional locations were established with over 100 farms enrolling at NCTC in the FBM ACMP. At the present time, there are 12 instructional sites in northwestern Minnesota delivering the ACMP with approximately 200 farms involved. This past summer, the NCTC FBM staff developed additional curricula in commodity marketing to meet the needs of its students.

This month, NCTC and MAWG have started a similar effort to deliver Precision Ag Technology education. The grain grower organizations will again survey their members to find if an adequate number of farms are willing to enroll in the Precision Agriculture Program at NCTC. The curriculum in Precision Ag has been developed over the past two years as a result of feedback from farmers attending the Prairie Grain Conference as well as from feedback from NCTC FBM students.

Several other joint activities are worked on among these groups on an ongoing basis.

As I write this article, the theme from "A Field of Dreams" surfaced in my mind – "build it and they will come." In my opinion, we have accomplished just that, we built a needed education [illegible] and the students came. I believe [illegible] opportunities are available [illegible] Minnesota.

PARENTING TIPS
Reading Stories to Pre-schoolers

To have a really successful experience when reading to a young child, forget about reading the words and read the child instead. Watch to see what interests your child, what does she understand or not understand. The first time through the book may consist almost entirely of conversations about the pictures.

The most useful questions and answers are those that invite the child to participate actively and give you clues about what he wants and needs to find out. Move through the book as rapidly as your child desires. As much as possible use his own vocabulary to introduce new ideas.

Speak and read with expression. Use your finger to point out and demonstrate what is happening. Animation makes the reading more interesting and provides clues to the meaning of pictures and words.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk about the pictures in the book. Be aware of your child's level of understanding.

Are memories of bad weather growing shorter?

There were enough warm spells and cold spells in the past months to allow people to remember this winter however they want. Optimists can remember the rain in February. Pessimists can point out the cold snap in January.

My weather memory is short. I can remember baseball games, rosters and statistics from 30 years ago, including where I was sitting when so-and-so hit a home run to pull the Twins out of fifth place, but I have no grip on the weather from the past.

Last summer, we had cold night in August which froze a lot of crops. I still remember that. However, the next day, an old-timer in the clinic waiting room reported to me that the last time it froze that early around here was on Aug. 15, 1964.

I was so amazed at the man's feat of memory that it took me an hour or so to realize that Aug. 15, 1964 was the day I was born. Mom and Dad had rushed to Fargo, N.D., in the middle of the night where I arrived without incident.

Given the circumstances, I figured Dad might remember if there had been frost on the windshield that August morning. I asked him, but Dad huffed that the weather wasn't exactly on his mind at that point.

So, I'll just have to assume the old-timer knew what he was talking about.

Part of my problem remembering past winters is that the year changes in the middle of the winter. For example, which winter are we in right now? The winter of 2004, or the winter of 2005?

The now-legendary winter of 1997 isn't a problem because most of the bad stuff happened on the 1997 side of New Year's. But few people remember that in January of 1996, we had a stretch of 40 below stuff that lasted over a week.

I remember that cold snap because I was in California at the time. I called home to gloat several [illegible] week. If I had actually lived through that cold spell, I suppose I would have blocked it out of my mind like everybody else has.

Memory is a funny thing. One's view of the past can change with one's present mood.

On a good day, I remember my childhood as a blissful, carefree time of building forts, climbing trees, riding bike, vandalizing property, killing small animals and listening to baseball games on a transistor radio tied to the handlebars of my bike.

On a down day, my recollection of childhood turns into a nightmare of abysmal failure at sports, getting beat up by the playground bully, falling off the merry-go-round, puking during health class, and enduring a consistent pattern of parental abuse in the form of music lessons.

Old-timers tend to remember the weather, I think, because it affected them more than it affects us today. Imagine seven years of drought without federal bailouts, or a four-day blizzard with starving cows out on the back 40. No wonder some of them still have post-traumatic stress.

But even memories of tough times can be filtered through rose-colored glasses, for those lucky enough to own a pair.

My 93-year-old Aunt Olive has lived through a lot, but to hear her tell the story of the last century, it has been one big long party - from the time she saw Charles Lindberg fly over their farm to the school programs in the old one-room school - it all sounds like great fun.

Oh, there was the time she ran out of money while attending Moorhead State Teacher's College and laid in bed so she wouldn't use up energy and have to eat the few remaining macaroni noodles in the cupboard.

But she laughs about that now. And for all of her years, I have never once heard Olla mention the weather of years past.

"It was all for the best," is her standard ending for any memory, which might contain a hint of unpleasantness. Not a bad way to remember things, both pleasant and unpleasant, whether you're 93 or 39.

...Never Boring

Living in northern Minnesota is never boring. If nothing else is going on, we can always expect something new and exciting in the weather department. Lately, it's been just a thrill to get up in the morning to see whether we're going to be in a happy mood or not, depending on what type of weather the new day brings. We never know whether there will be sun and spring-type 70 degrees, blizzard conditions of snow and blowing, or something in between the two.

How many of us wore winter coats to work in the morning a week or so ago only to go home with our coats over our arms? Not only that, but how many of us, figuring that spring had sprung, were dressed in cool, light clothes with little summer jackets the day that the temperature plummeted to 10 below zero again?

Speaking of clothes, I would guess that we in northern Minnesota are some of the few people who find it necessary to carry warm jackets and winter boots in our cars at least nine months of the year. Not only do we have our cars full of extra clothes, but we also lug around winter survival kits stocked with flares, candles, high energy foods, sandbags, folding shovels and instant beverages, as well as a couple of warm quilts. I bet that most cars around here are still fully loaded with those necessities right now - just in case the weather takes a turn for the worse and we see a March blizzard (which is highly likely and has happened before).

Lately, the big weather question has been whether to snow or not to snow. In the blink of an eye, the countryside has been obliterated with fist-sized snowflakes, and then, just as quickly, the sun will come out full force and melt it all, leaving sloppy streets and muck. Poor little shoots of grass and budding leaves must be having a heck of a time figuring out whether it's time to pop or not, especially since they've been sealed in that thick cocoon of ice most of this winter.

I've never seen such a bewildered bunch of birds as this year. The poor things look positively puzzled as they hop around looking for worms or last year's seeds in ice-crusted yards or huddle together under sodden branches uttering pathetic little peeps as they peer out at falling snow. I wonder if they are planning their nests yet, or planning to forget about it and fly south again.

The best thing about the weather now is that in spite of everything, spring will be forced to take a stand sooner rather than later and the temperatures will rise and stay that way. Green things will begin to come out of the ground, and birds will be searching for places to build nests and sing their happy songs. But don't think for a minute that northern Minnesota will be normal. Summertime brings other exciting weather developments, like thunderstorms, hail and tornadoes. And in case you forgot, it also brings bugs. Ugh.

Life after high school

What do you want to do when you grow up? As a senior in high school, I get asked this question on a daily basis. The worst part is, I still haven't come up with an answer.

What do I want to do with my life? I'm not really sure. Apparently this is okay, I'm not supposed to know yet. But if I'm not supposed to know yet, then why do so many people ask what I plan on doing, and if it's okay that I don't know, why does it feel so scary?

It's a comfort to know that many of my friends feel the same way I do right now. However, there are always a few people who have everything planned out. The people who already know where they are going to college, what classes they will be taking, and what they will be majoring in. These are the people that make me wonder - do I need to hurry and get my act together?

My situation might not be as bad as I think. Maybe I'm only scared because I've always known just what I'm doing in life. Today I'll go to class, bring my brother to hockey after school, tutor, pick my brother up from hockey, eat dinner, do homework, and end my evening watching "Sex and the City." I like knowing where I'm going in life and exactly what I'm going to be doing. That is why I'm so confused: if I'm such an organized, on-track person, why can't I decide what I want to do after high school?

It may seem like I haven't put much thought into my future, when in reality, I think about it all the time. There are many things I'd like to do; I want to paint, illustrate a children's book, maybe even write for a magazine someday. Unfortunately, when I tell people my ideas, their typical reaction is, "Well, it's good to have such wonderful dreams." Apparently dreams, or the ideas I have for my future, don't qualify as plans.

Could this be the reason some people are sick of their jobs by the time they turn 40? Is it because they choose plans over dreams? If I were to choose plans over dreams, would it lead me into a life of unhappiness? If this were the case, I'll keep my dreams and forget about making any plans. I might not know exactly what I want to do with the rest of my life, but I do know one thing - I'm going to be happy.

Projects to test ways to serve families with difficult needs

Eight projects have been selected by the Minnesota Department of Human Services to receive a total of approximately $9 million over the next three years to develop programs that integrate services for low-income families who have serious and multiple challenges. Funds to develop projects have been awarded to Anoka, Chisago, Crow Wing, Hennepin, Ramsey, St. Louis, and Washington counties, and the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians.

The projects involve public human services agencies and nonprofit organizations. Several projects link services across county boundaries. Projects range in cost from about $60,000 to $700,000 annually.

All of the projects are focused on improving economic and family stability for Minnesota Family Investment Program (MFIP) participants with multiple health, educational, social service and employment challenges.

About 44,000 families receive cash and food support through MFIP every month. Most families leave welfare after a relatively short period of time. However, families with an array of challenges generally work less, earn less and remain on MFIP longer, in part because of their struggle to cope with multiple and conflicting requirements of the different programs intended to help. The projects are aimed at finding better ways to integrate those services, according to Minnesota Human Services Commissioner Kevin Goodno.

"Our current fragmented service delivery system does not work well for low-income families whose needs extend across multiple government and community services. These projects will test whether more holistic approaches that integrate governmental and community resources can lead to more positive outcomes for these families," Goodno said.

All eight projects are expected to begin work this spring. About 2,000 people are expected to receive services through the projects in the next three years. An intensive evaluation is planned to determine which of the models was most effective in improving long-term outcomes for families.

Free credit reports available for Minnesota consumers

Credit scores are not only used to make lending decisions, but also to predict the likelihood that someone might file an insurance claim. To make sure that credit scores are based on accurate information, Minnesota Commerce Commissioner Glenn Wilson is strongly recommending every Minnesota consumer take advantage of a new law that allows free access to credit reports.

A credit report contains information on residence, how bills are paid, and whether there have been any legal actions such as arrests or bankruptcy filings. Credit information is often reported by banks, credit card companies, collection agencies, or a court clerk.

A credit score is a number based on a consumer's credit history and current credit worthiness. The number is the product of a formula developed by a consumer credit reporting firm or other company.

"If you have applied for a mortgage or other type of loan, you know the importance of a credit score. It has proven to be very predictive and other uses for credit scores are now common place," said Wilson. "Many insurance companies use credit scores, in part, to determine the level of policyholder risk and to set premium rates or decide whether to issue a policy. Some employers will check your credit score before they hire you and landlords are now using this information when deciding to rent property. That's why it is important to check your credit report every year, and as of March 1, you can do it for free."

A recent amendment to the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act requires each of the nationwide consumer credit reporting companies to provide a free credit report, by request, once every 12 months. The Web site is www.annualcreditreport.com. More information is available from the Federal Trade Commission at www.ftc.gov.

"When you get your credit report, make sure it is accurate and contact the credit bureau if you find an error or mistake," said Wilson. If you report an error, the credit bureau must investigate and respond within 30 days.

Credit scores are affected by bill paying history, number and type of open accounts, outstanding debt, late payments, collection actions and other credit experience.

"Monitoring your credit report is crucial because so many decisions are now based on how you manage your finances. Now you have another tool to manage your credit score to your advantage," said Wilson. "We can be proud that credit scores for Minnesotans are among the highest in the nation."

Experian, one of the nationwide consumer reporting companies, ranked 20 major U.S. metropolitan areas by credit score. The average consumer credit score for Minneapolis was 707 - the best in the nation. The average Minnesota score is also 707, compared to the national average of 678. It can range from 330 to 830 with a higher score indicating a lower credit risk.

Otto Bremer Foundation Supports Early Childhood Initiative

Minnesota's commitment to early childhood development took another step forward – the Otto Bremer Foundation recently provided a $70,000 grant in support of the early childhood initiative in areas of greater Minnesota where Bremer Banks have a significant presence.

"We are pleased to partner with the Otto Bremer Foundation to help rural communities strengthen resources for young children and families," said John Ostrem, president, Northwest Minnesota Foundation. "This effort will significantly benefit families, businesses, and communities for years to come."

The Otto Bremer Foundation funds will ensure continued emphasis on issues surrounding early childhood care and education in Greater Minnesota. Throughout the past 20 months, the Initiative Foundation, Northwest Minnesota Foundation, Southern Minnesota Initiative Foundation, Southwest Minnesota Foundation and West Central Initiative have developed 36 grassroots early childhood coalitions and are directing the statewide effort. As a result, an early childhood coalition network has been created, which serves as an avenue to impact early care and education public policy throughout all of Minnesota.

The 36 communities were selected to participate in the Minnesota Early Childhood Initiative because of strong local partnerships, existing early childhood education programs, and an expressed interest in strengthening the well being of young children and families.

The Minnesota Early Childhood Initiative receives assistance from Ready 4 K, a school readiness advocacy group, in organizing and engaging participation in the metro area and throughout the state.

The Northwest Minnesota Foundation is a public charitable community foundation that invests resources, creates opportunities and promotes philanthropy to make the [illegible] region a better place to live and work.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: Are any disabilities automatically approved for Social Security benefits?

A: All disability benefits within Social Security, or the need based Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program, have requirements in addition to actual medical health. Social Security requirements involve work history; SSI has income and financial resource issues. Decisions on these non-medical issues are made by local SSA office employees. Once those factors are met, a medical decision is needed. Medical decisions are made by state employees using SSA guidelines. There are not automatically approved disabilities. There are, however, several very severe illnesses and injuries where medical approval, while not automatic, is very likely.

Q: Can child's Social Security student benefits be paid if home schooled?

A: Benefits to children are an integral part of Social Security retirement, survivors and disability programs. In summary, child's benefits are payable on the record of an insured retired, deceased or disabled parent [illegible] 18. [illegible] schooling [illegible] Payment to a severely disabled adult child is possible if his or her disability existed before age 22.

It is important to note that child benefits are based on the relationship of child to parent, not of the parents to each other.

Coming to your question, an otherwise eligible home schooled child can receive Social Security benefits as a student if very specific requirements are met. These include meeting federal standards for full-time attendance (FTA), having the state recognize home schooling with all state requirements met, and of course, meeting all other SSA requirements.

Minnesota January unemployment rate is down

Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development Commissioner Matt Kramer has announced that Minnesota's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for January was 4.4 percent, down from December's revised rate of 4.6 percent.

Coinciding with this release of January's figures, the figures for 2004 were revised based on more complete data. This revision resulted in the year showing stronger job growth than originally reported - over 38,000 new jobs between December 2003 and December 2004 rather than 23,400 as first reported.

The month of January showed a slight drop of 0.2 percent (-5,600) in seasonally adjusted number of jobs. The largest job losses were seen in professional and business services (-3,900), manufacturing (-1,700) and construction (-1,700). However, employment increased in financial services (+2,300) and government (+2,900).

"Although employment declined slightly in January, the total number of jobs is up 1.3 percent from one year ago," said Kramer. "With this upward movement, I am very optimistic about Minnesota's economy."

Northwest Area I Envirothon scheduled April 27

It may be over a month away, but the date has been set for the Northwest Area I Envirothon competition. The competition will be held April 27 at Lake Bronson State Park Interpretive Center.

Envirothon is a national event which is an outdoor hands-on competition for students in grades nine through 12. In 1992, it began in Minnesota.

In the setting, students are tested in five areas. This year's areas are soils, aquatics, wildlife, forestry and a current events topic, which is cultural resources this year. Participants also have to prepare a 10-minute oral presentation on a cultural resources topic. At the end of the day, the team with the most points will be declared the winner and earn a chance to compete at the State Envirothon later in the spring with a time and place to be determined at a later date. Schools can enter as many teams as they would like. The top three teams at the event will earn a trip to the State Envirothon competition, which will be held at Mille Lacs Kathio State Park in May. Prizes will be given to all participants.

Last year in Northwest Area I Envirothon competition, a total of 37 teams of 172 students participated on teams from several local schools, including Kittson Central in Hallock, Tri-County in Karlstad, Lincoln High in Thief River Falls, Grygla, Warren-Alvarado-Oslo, Roseau, Greenbush-Middle River, Badger and Stephen-Argyle. Lincoln High School teams placed first, second, and third and traveled onto the State Envirothon, which was held in May at the Minnesota Zoo.

Envirothon is sponsored by Soil and Water Conservation Districts (SWCDs) statewide. Each SWCD helps sponsor the event and asks for donations from businesses and organizations from around the area.

In SWCD Area I, which covers 10 counties in northwest Minnesota, three Envirothons are held. Presenters may include employees from SWCDs, the Natural Resource Conservation Service, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, Minnesota Board of Soil and Water Resources, the University of Minnesota Extension Service and various other governmental agencies. Some presenters may include members of the general public.

Envirothon began in Pennsylvania in 1979 as a natural resource problem-solving event for students to gain some knowledge of environmental education.

TRF angus breeder recognized nationally

Carlsons Angus of Thief River Falls has been recognized nationally by the American Angus Association (AAA) for having four registered Angus cows included in the association's 2005 Pathfinder Report.

Only 2,055 of the more than 34,000 AAA members are represented in this year's report, according to John Crouch, executive vice president of the association with headquarters in St Joseph, Mo.

The Pathfinder Program identifies superior Angus cows based upon recorded performance traits that are economically important to efficient beef production. These traits include early and regular calving and heavy weaning weights, reported Bill Bowman, association director of performance programs. More than [illegible] eligible dams were examined to determine Pathfinder status. All registered Angus cows that meet the strict Pathfinder standards are listed, along with their owners, in the Pathfinder Report that is published annually by the association.

The 2005 Pathfinder Report lists 8,400 individual cows and 221 Pathfinder sires. It is published in the April issue of the Angus Journal, and limited copies are available from the association. The reports appear on its Web site (www.angus.org). The largest number of Pathfinder cows from a single herd this year is 75. Started in 1978, the Pathfinder Program continues to recognize outstanding breeders participating in the Angus Herd Improvement Records Program.

Peterson introduces bill to expand investment in renewable energy

Congressman Collin Peterson (D-Minn) has introduced legislation that would provide expanded incentives for public power and rural cooperatives to use renewable energy sources, including wind energy systems.

"We want to maximize the use of alternative and renewable energy sources in our rural communities," Peterson said. "This bill will make it easier to invest in renewable energy technologies."

The Renewable Energy Production Incentive Reform and Reauthorization Act improves and reauthorizes the Renewable Energy Production Incentive (REPI) program run by the Department of Energy. The program was started in 1992 to provide incentives for investments in renewable energy sources, such as wind, solar, geothermal and biomass generation systems.

In recent years, the REPI program has been under-funded, and authorization for the program expired in 2003, making it impossible for additional organizations to apply.

The bill re-authorizes the REPI program and provides up to $30 million per year to fund the program. It also allows cooperatives that invest in systems using livestock waste to generate electricity to qualify for the credits program.

"Minnesota has been a leader and innovator in the use of renewable energy technologies, and I hope that this bill can help to continue that progress," Peterson said.

Extension Service points the way in changing economy

Minnesota communities will have a new tool available to them to assess opportunities and foster economic and community development. The University of Minnesota Extension Service will introduce the new tool, called retail trade analysis (RTA) reporting, at five workshops statewide.

The introduction of the RTA tool is part of a workshop offered by the Extension Service and entitled "U and Your Economy." The workshop is designed to aid business and community leaders in understanding long-term economic and demographic shifts, such as changes triggered by the baby boom generation. In turn, those leaders can help to prepare and position their communities for the future.

A local workshop will be held April 7 in Crookston. It is scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., and prices to attend any of the workshops range from $30 to $50. The registration deadline is March 28. Call or e-mail Joan Sigmundik at (612) 624-7714 or sigmu001@umn.edu to find out the location and address. For more information, visit www.extension.umn.edu/uandeconomy or contact Sigmundik.

RTA reporting utilizes sales tax data from a community to determine the viability of several retail categories within that community. The report separates sales tax revenues into 13 retail categories, including building materials, automotive, food, apparel and furniture.

"The RTA report can pinpoint retail opportunities," said Michael Darger, who leads Extension's community economic programs. "Businesspeople and economic development officials can use these measures to determine the need and feasibility of new or expanded retail businesses."

Featured workshop speakers include Tom Stinson, Ph.D., Minnesota state economist; Laura Kalambokidis, Ph.D., speaking about Minnesota's approach to business taxation; and Steve Taff, Ph.D., will discuss land use, development and the changing tax. Stinson's presentation – "Baby Boom Retirement: A Looming Fiscal Crisis?" – will describe the fiscal impact the baby boom generation will have on public revenues and the tax system in Minnesota.

Customized RTA reports will be available to Minnesota communities in March. RTA reporting was first demonstrated by Kenneth Stone, professor emeritus of economics and Extension economist at Iowa State University. He developed the retail trade analysis program to help businesspeople and city officials determine the strengths and weaknesses of their retail sectors. Stone was the first academic in the U.S. to conduct studies of the economic impacts of shopping malls, discount department stores and "big box" building materials stores. After reviewing the RTA tool at the "U and Your Economy" event, Extension staff will present a program titled "Success Strategies for Small Stores." Based on Stone's research, these practical strategies can provide small retailers with ideas about coexisting with larger mass merchandisers.

may be made easier by AmericInn employees. "We generally create anywhere from 15 to 20 jobs," said Seibert, who noted the AmericInn will have a full-time equivalency factor of eight because it will employ both full-time and part-time workers.

The AmericInn will be owned by Morrow; his son Dave; and Seibert. Bill Morrow is the primary investor, Seibert said. The three men are from the Minneapolis/St. Paul area. Seibert, who will also serve as the site's developer, noted they may add a local investor.

A franchise agreement has been signed between AmericInn and Thief River Falls Lodge LLC pertaining to a Thief River Falls AmericInn, Clark said.

Seibert and Bill Morrow are partners in other AmericInns, Seibert said. For his part, Seibert is a partner in 14 AmericInns.

Seibert said the Morrows and Seibert have been planning an AmericInn in Thief River Falls for the past two years.

MCA tests, which are required, is that they only show how a student did on a particular day, and do not show growth. The Adequate Yearly Growth requirements that affect schools, however, are based on MCA results.) Ihle also mentioned plans to have all of the MCA tests on computer by 2008.

The data now becoming available as a result of the testing is also having a significant impact on schools and how they teach students. Ihle said that sometimes it may feel like it's too much, but the tests are a great tool.

It was announced at the school board meeting, that School District 564 Superintendent Irv Peterson has been named president-elect of the Minnesota Rural Educators Association.

Peterson said he's happy to be a part of that organization and hopes that his participation in this organization will help this part of the state.

During the school board meeting, Peterson also presented certificates of appreciation to the representatives on the board of education. Peterson said the certificates of appreciation were presented during this, School Board Recognition Week, in appreciation for their time and energy expended in behalf of children in this district. "I'm extremely proud the board I work with and for," said Peterson.

The next meeting of the board of education will be at 6 p.m. on Monday, March 14, in the conference room of the District Service Center.

Air subsidy falls short?

flights right now," said Lindberg, adding that the city basically provides essential air service with two passenger flights per day.

"We still have the costs," said Lindberg, who noted the city still has to provide and staff a fire truck 15 minutes before and after each flight.

The proposal would not affect freighter planes, which also land at and depart from the airport. Each day, four freighter planes serving Arctic Cat and Digi-Key depart from the airport, Lindberg noted.

Both freighter and commuter planes provide a vital service, Lindberg said.

Almost every state has an airport that receives an EAS subsidy, said Torkelson.

"I don't think it's worth panicking over," added Torkelson, who noted there has always been some EAS threat in every federal budget.

The city of Thief River Falls and other cities receiving EAS funding have received some support. With a bipartisan group of senators, U.S. Sen. Mark Dayton sent a letter to leaders of the Senate Budget Committee. Dayton and the other senators asked that EAS funding continue at a minimum of $102 million – the current budgeted amount.

This is not the first time the senators have seen a proposal to cut EAS funding to $50 million. Bush proposed a similar action in 2004, and it was defeated in Congress.

About this year's proposal, Lindberg said, "We're hoping Congress is on our side."

Ask eight questions while managing a retirement portfolio

Invest adequately and regularly, diversify a portfolio, and keep tabs on investments. According to the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants (MNCPA), these time-tested principles of investing are key to managing a retirement savings portfolio. To help put these principles into action, the MNCPA suggests addressing the following eight questions:

1. Is there a plan in place for investing regularly? The key to a successful retirement saving strategy is to make systematic investments throughout working life. The easiest way to do this is to make saving automatic. With an employer-sponsored retirement plan, contributions may be deducted from paychecks, leading to regular saving. If a workplace retirement plan were not an option, consider setting up an individual retirement account (IRA), Keogh, or Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) automatic investment program with a bank, brokerage or mutual fund company.

2. Are investments being made with long-term growth in mind? Investment choices are just as important as investing regularly. Retirement saving means investing for the long term. Historically, stocks have had the best chance of achieving high returns over long periods. Over the years, inflation can erode the purchasing power of portfolios that are too highly weighted in bonds and certificates of deposit (CDs). Keep these facts in mind while determining the best way to allocate assets.

3. Does the [illegible] know his or her tolerance for risk? Risk is the price that is paid for potential return. Generally, the more risk [illegible] with money, the [illegible] the potential [illegible]. However, the less risk that is taken, the lower the potential return and the [illegible]

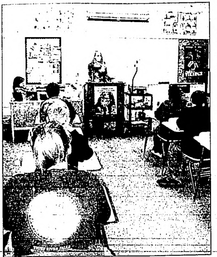
4. [illegible] of investments – stocks, bonds and cash equivalents – can have a more significant impact on return than the actual stocks and mutual funds that have been chosen. Remember, no one mix of assets is right for everyone all the time. Each investment should be part of an overall asset allocation strategy that is tailored to the investor's specific goals, risk tolerance and financial situation.

5. Is the investor's portfolio diversified? Diversification is a risk-management technique that takes asset allocation one step further by ensuring a balanced portfolio within each asset category. This is especially important in stock portfolios. Stocks should represent different sectors, industries, companies and geographic areas. In a fixed-income portfolio, investments can be further diversified by structuring investments so that they have differing maturity dates.

6. Is there sufficient liquidity? It's generally a good idea to set aside a portion of retirement savings in a money market fund or savings account. Should there be an extended bear market, investors would then be able to withdraw cash from liquid investments rather than sell off assets at an inopportune time.

7. Is the portfolio being monitored and rebalanced? Active, regular portfolio review is essential for evaluating the performance of investments and determining whether any actions are necessary. Investors should monitor the companies in which they have invested. Bear in mind that as some asset classes perform better than others, asset allocation can become unbalanced. For example, let's suppose 50 percent of savings was allocated to stocks, 30 percent to bonds, and 20 percent to cash. If, after 12 months, stocks have grown to become 55 to 60 percent of the portfolio, it's time to rebalance.

8. Consult with a CPA. Managing retirement assets is a [illegible] process that will evolve [illegible] a CPA [illegible]



Students in Helen Anderson's health classes at Lincoln High School listened Feb. 28 to Miss Thief River Falls Sarah Zak's presentation about abstinence before marriage. Zak, whose platform centers on that topic, will relinquish her crown in June.

MATHCOUNTS winners announced

The winners of the Feb. 18 MATHCOUNTS competition have been announced.

DEED to take on role of Minnesota Project Innovation

The Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development (DEED) has taken on a new leadership role in seeking federal grant funding for early-stage technology companies. Minnesota Project Innovation (MPI), a private nonprofit corporation, had performed these duties for more than 20 years. The MPI Board of Directors officially transferred the program operations to DEED on Monday morning.

Since its creation in 1984, MPI has functioned as Minnesota's primary focal point for assisting high-tech entrepreneurs and innovators in obtaining federal grants through the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) program and the Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) program. Through these programs, MPI helped to identify funding opportunities and obtain high-risk capital for start-up, early-stage and existing companies to commercialize technologies into new products and services. Over the years, the organization helped funnel more than $250 million to Minnesotans, spurring the creation and growth of several publicly traded businesses as well as numerous privately held companies.

Betsy Lulfs, who joined DEED in early February, will coordinate and expand the SBIR/STTR programs by tapping into DEED's broad statewide network of Small Business Development Centers, regional business development representatives and business service specialists. She will also expand the program through partnerships with organizations like Medical Alley/MNBIO, the University of Minnesota and Minnesota State Colleges and Universities. Lulfs formerly worked with a similar program in Ohio.

"By taking on and expanding the role of Minnesota Project Innovation, we expect to achieve greater success than ever in seeking and obtaining federal funding for emerging Minnesota companies," DEED Commissioner Matt Kramer said. "As successful as MPI has been over the past 20-plus years, we're confident that we can kick it up a notch and continue to leverage the ingenuity and inventiveness of small companies to create [illegible] jobs and opportunities."

Jim Runquist, [illegible] of the MPI Board of Directors, [illegible] Board decided it [illegible] interests of both MPI and Minnesotans [illegible] ments to fold MPI's functions and operations into DEED's business [illegible]

"Wh[illegible] we were very committed to making sure this valuable Minnesota business resource stayed alive. We all had a vested interest in keeping it going, and the decision in placing MPI at DEED under Commissioner Kramer at this time made good business sense for all parties."

Runquist, who is president and CEO of Temple Mountain Energy Inc. in Eagan, said SBIR/STTR funding offers a significant boost to emerging companies as they explore and develop the commercialization potential of new technologies. "To me, this is a good bet," he said. "If you're betting your own dollars – as all small high-tech companies are – this program provides a mechanism that validates your technology as you work to get it to the commercialization stage."

When MPI was created in 1984, Minnesota ranked 35th among all states in the number of SBIR/STTR grants. Since the end of fiscal year 2002, the state's national ranking has risen to 14th with more than 100 Minnesota companies pursuing and winning approximately $30 million in SBIR/STTR funding for research and development efforts.

In her new capacity as coordinator of DEED's MPI program, Lulfs said she expects those numbers to continue to rise. "We're taking what was essentially a one-person shop and expanding its operations across DEED's entire statewide network," she said. "By broadening our efforts in this way, our goal is to offer Minnesota companies vastly increased exposure to these federal funding opportunities."

Through SBIR/STTR grant programs, the federal government sets aside more than $2 billion a year to invest in high-risk, high-tech feasibility studies to explore the potential for commercialization and spur new development. Approximately $10 billion is earmarked from fiscal years 2004-08 to support research in science and technology in areas like nanotechnology, genomics, proteomics and bioinformatics.

Federal agencies participating in the funding program include the departments of Defense, Commerce, Energy, Education and Transportation, NASA, National Science Foundation, United States Department of Agriculture, the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Institutes of Health.

Examples of publicly traded Minnesota companies that have received assistance from MPI in obtaining SBIR/STTR funding include Ballistic Recovery Systems, SurModics, NVE Corporation, APA Optics, CyberOptics and CNS Inc. Privately held companies that received assistance include [illegible] Medical, [illegible] QRDC, Gel Del [illegible] Discovery Genomics [illegible] influence may be the fact that there are large stocks of natural gas in foreign countries. This might increase foreign trade and lower costs of fertilizer.

Following the market fluctuations

Agriculture markets. The weaker dollar will support exports because commodities grown in the United States will be less expensive on the world market. Swanson sees the strong economic growth as another positive aspect of the commodity market.

Swanson is skeptical about the soybean market. Brazil, a strong competitor, may be having some problems, but it's still in a strong position. As for U.S. production, he's offering a "middle of the road forecast," but sees rising input costs as a negative influence.

"If you held on to soybeans, now is the time to sell," said Swanson. Seven times out of 10, he said, the best prices are offered early in the season. While he didn't suggest selling all in one fell swoop, he did say that "it's time to start taking some shots at the market."

Swanson is hearing reports that production of wheat will only be slightly higher, and usage flat. But, Swanson said he's seen the best winter wheat conditions he's seen in a long time.

Supply and demand will play a key role in the price of wheat. A couple of years ago, there was a major failure in wheat production. As a result, supply dropped and prices increased. The conditions are not the same at the start of this growing season.

Exports of wheat are also flat or down, but growers will get some relief from a weaker dollar because that may increase exports.

Again, Swanson advised that prices are at pretty good historic levels, so now may be the time to sell some of that wheat still in the bin.

Land values are going up, and for many reasons, Swanson said. He urged landowners not to be emotionally attached to their land, but to make decisions on whether to sell parcels based on an analysis of how productive the land is. He urged farmers to find out what their cost per unit is, and make budgets based on that information. If the land is marginal, sell it and invest that money elsewhere.

When asked about the impact on farmers if the Bush administration's proposal to cut ag subsidies goes through, Swanson was philosophic. Because of support for ag subsidies by Congressmen and Senators, he said he didn't think the cuts would be approved - at least not as much as is proposed. Swanson offered that he believes the administration may be making this proposal now to limit future increases.

Your farm's survival depends on good transfer, estate planning

by Gary Hachfeld,
U of M Extension Service

A recent survey completed by Successful Farming magazine found that two-thirds of U.S. farmers have not yet named a farm business successor, and more than half don't have an estate plan. So farm families need to be concerned about the future of their farm business. Its survival depends on proper transfer and estate planning.

There are several steps involved in establishing a farm transfer plan and an associated estate plan. First, farm families must be clear about their farm business, family and individual goals. If goals aren't thought out and firmly in place, the transfer process will not succeed.

Second, it's very critical to determine if the farm business can generate enough income for more than one family. The transfer process can take several years, during which time multiple families must live on the income generated from the farm. If this isn't sufficient, that farm business can be in jeopardy. A related issue here is whether or not the retiring generation will have sufficient retirement income to live on.

Assuming goals are in place and the farm business can support more than one family, you can begin to decide on the strategies for the transfer process. Strategies can range from farming together as a trial period, to the formation of a Limited Liability Company (LLC) to an outright sale. The strategy or strategies selected depend on a number of issues, including the finances of all parties, tax issues associated with each strategy and treatment of other non-farm heirs. All must be addressed.

Once the transfer process has been established and written out in rough draft form, an associated estate plan must also be drafted. This is a critical part of the process because the estate plan, including the will, outlines what the wishes of the retiring generation are and how the transfer will take place.

A common example here is the inclusion of a buy-out provision in the will for the succeeding generation with the goal of keeping the farm in the family. It would state that the succeeding generation can purchase the farmland at a given value under specified conditions. Again, this is done to meet and fulfill the goal of keeping the farm in the family.

The combination of a strong transfer plan associated with an estate plan can enable a farm family to meet their farm business goals. This is a detailed process and requires the help of professionals. Once the transfer and estate plan have been roughed out, other professionals need to be involved to complete the process. Those professionals include an attorney, an accountant, a financial planner, the family's banker and others.

For more information, go to www.cffm.umn.edu and find "New Farm Management Publications" at the bottom of the page. Then click on "transferring the farm" and on "estate planning." You'll find several University of Minnesota Extension Service fact sheets that outline how to draft farm transfer and estate plans.

Report calls for increased private funding of long-term care

Minnesotans should plan for financial security in their old age, says a report from the Department of Human Services (DHS) that went to the Minnesota Legislature this week.

As the baby boom generation ages, the numbers of older persons needing long-term care will rise dramatically, especially after 2020, and will create challenges related to long-term care, according to the report. While it is estimated that younger boomers will be able to afford health and long-term care expenses if they increase savings now, a large number of current elderly and older boomers, especially single women, will not have adequate retirement income to pay for their health and long-term care.

"Government, both nationally and in Minnesota, pays for about 60 percent of the total cost of long-term care," said DHS Assistant Commissioner Loren Colman. "Boomers should plan now and purchase insurance where applicable to help prevent public programs from being overwhelmed."

The report recommends a new mix of public and private approaches to long-term care financing, including:

- A comprehensive strategic plan for helping Minnesotans plan for retirement and old age, involving the state as well as a broad coalition of employers, employees and those that develop and market insurance and financial products.
- Implementation, if approved by the federal government, of limitations on asset-transfer methods people use to become eligible for Medicaid.
- Incentives for private payment of long-term care, including financial incentives targeted to individuals most at risk of using Medicaid;
- Articulating a clear message about the level of personal responsibility for long-term care that is expected and the level of assistance the public sector will provide;
- Intensifying efforts to support family caregiving, the dollar value of which is estimated at $4.58 billion in Minnesota;
- Preventing disability that causes the need for long-term care; and
- Increasing the number of "age-friendly communities" that have transportation, volunteers, nutrition and other services that allow elderly people to stay in their own homes.

The report says there is no single option for increasing private financing of long-care care.

This spring the University of Minnesota will provide recommendations to DHS on the types of specific incentives that would be most effective to increase use of various financing options, including:

- Long-term care insurance;
- Coverage for nursing facilities as a Medicare benefit;
- Health insurance options that combine health and long-term care coverage;
- Life insurance options including long-term care coverage;
- Reverse mortgages;
- Family loan and line of credit options; and
- A proposed long-term care "partnership" that would make purchasers of long-term care insurance eligible for Medicaid once they exhausted those insurance benefits.

The report is available at http://www.dhs.state.mn.us/main/groups/aging/documents/pub/dhs_id_025734.hcsp

B/G-MR girls fall 62-54 in 8A finals...

Title goes to Greyhounds

Fosston's offense shifted into a higher gear in the third quarter Friday as the Greyhounds raced past Badger/Greenbush-Middle River 62-54 in the Section 8A girls high school basketball tournament championship game at the University of Minnesota-Crookston.

The undefeated Greyhounds trailed the once-beaten Gators 28-24 at halftime. But four 3-point baskets fueled a 24-point third quarter that turned the game around for the No. 2-rated team in Class A.

A base line drive by Kelly Landsverk two minutes into the second half put Fosston ahead 33-32 – a lead the Greyhounds would never surrender.

It was a 46-37 difference when Kayla Bugaason hit a 3-pointer with 1:42 left in the third quarter. The nine-point spread, matched three more times in the final period, was the biggest lead of the game.

The Gators battled, however, and pulled within 46-43 when Missy Bruggeman hit a running short jumper; Kierah Kimbrough finished off a fast break, then Liz Schenkey came up with a steal and lay-up.

Fosston's Kristi Lucken finished the quarter with a pair of free throws and Bagaason opened the fourth quarter with a pair of baskets as the lead shot back to nine, 52-43.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River could get no closer than five points down the stretch. Kaley Mekash scored off her own rebound and Cassy Campbell made two free throws to keep the Gators in it at 54-49 with 2:37 to play.

Fosston kept Badger/Greenbush-Middle River at bay the rest of the way by making free throws. The Greyhounds' last field goal came with 3:55 on the clock. They were 8-for-10 at the line over the final 1:53, with Landsverk getting four of those; Bagaason three; and Shelly Francis one.

The Gators' fading hopes were still alive when two Kimbrough free throws made it 56-51 with 67 seconds remaining. But two sets of free throws by Landsverk and Bagaason created another nine-point gap, 60-51, with only 43 seconds showing.

A 3-pointer by Schenkey closed out the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River scoring with 30 seconds to play, then single free throws by Bagaason and Francis iced a state tournament trip for Fosston.

The loss ended a 28-2 year for the Gators, who opened the season with 22 straight wins before losing to Red Lake Falls.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle was cruising this winter until late January when an injury to Mekash and a bout of mononucleosis for Bruggeman created a major problem for a team whose depth was not a strong suit.

Mekash and Bruggeman were back in the line-up at season's end, but not at the same level before being knocked out of the line-up, according to head coach Tom Neibauer. "This was a game we could have won," he said. "They wore us down. We just had too much sickness and injuries. We wore down in the second half. They knocked down some threes, got the lead and we weren't able to come back."

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River enjoyed early championship game success. The Gators shattered a 13-13 tie with a 5-0 run to close out the first quarter on a long jumper by Bruggeman, a basket from underneath by Kimbrough and a free throw by Kimbrough.

The Gators led by as many as six points on three occasions in the second quarter – the final time on an inside bucket by Kimbrough for a 28-22 advantage with 1:48 remaining.

A final-minute possession that could have given the Gators an even bigger edge at intermission instead resulted in a turnover that was followed by a Carin Sundbom basket from the side for the 28-24 difference at the break.

Kimbrough and Bagaason, who will be teammates at the University of North Dakota next year, led their teams with 29 and 24 points, respectively. Landsverk added 18 to the Greyhounds' offense; Bruggeman contributed 14 to the Gators' attack.

"Kierah shut down Francis and Missy did a great job on Bagaason in the first half," noted Neibauer. "They got some switches on us in the second half that we didn't react to very well, and that's when they got their points."

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shot 48 percent from the field (20/42) and went 13-for-19 at the free throw line. Fosston shot 43 percent from the floor (19/44) and had a 19-for-27 free throw night. Rebounds were even at 25-apiece. The two teams combined for an unusually high 34 title game turnovers – 21 by the Gators; 13 for the Greyhounds.

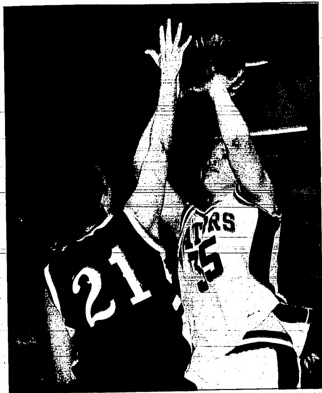
Fosston - Jen Johnson 1, Kristi Lucken 4, Shelly Francis 6, Kelly Landsverk 18, Kayla Bagaason 24, Carin Sundbom 7.



Kierah Kimbrough of Badger/Greenbush-Middle River shot the ball over Fosston defender Shelly Francis during Friday's Section 8A girls high school basketball tournament championship game at the University of Minnesota-Crookston. Kimbrough scored 29 points in her final game for the Gators, but the Greyhounds earned a state tournament trip with a 62-54 win.

Grygla-Gatzke gets title shot

A much-anticipated match-up materialized Saturday when Clearbrook-Gonvick and Grygla-Gatzke easily advanced to the Section 8A East boys high school basketball tournament finals.

The undefeated Bears, the No. 1-ranked team in Minnesota Class A basketball for the past month, overwhelmed Fertile-Beltrami 78-47 and the twice-beaten Eagles, a top-five ranked team, handled Win-E-Mac 69-52 in a semifinal doubleheader at the Ralph Englestad Arena in Thief River Falls.

That set up a Tuesday trophy showdown at the same site for the right to play in the state tournament-qualifying Section 8A championship game Friday, March 11, at the University of Minnesota-Crookston.

Clearbrook-Gonvick and Grygla-Gatzke were seeded 1 and 2, respectively in the Section 8A East bracket.

Fertile-Beltrami was the No. 4 seed. Sixth-seeded Win-E-Mac advanced after upsetting No. 3 Kelliher/Northome 54-48 in the Thursday quarterfinals.

To take away any momentum the underdog Patriots might have picked from their win over Mustangs, Grygla-Gatzke coach Vern Johnson felt it important for the Eagles create an early scoreboard spread. They did, leading 21-6 at the first quarter break.

"We got off to a good start," confirmed Johnson. "We played good defense, and that fueled our offense. We caused some turnovers and that created some breakaway opportunities."

Additional fast break opportunities arose when the Eagles were able to break the Patriots' press. With lay-ups a big part of the offense, Grygla-Gatzke turned in a 66 percent 29-for-44 shooting performance from the field

The Eagles maintained a 32-19 halftime spread and opened up a 52-33 third quarter gap.

"We played a very solid game," said Johnson, whose team is 25-2. That's the most wins in school history – breaking a 22-victory mark set twice previously. The Eagles saw a 19-game winning streak snapped in a regular season ending 45-40 loss to Warroad but promptly returned to the win column by beating Red Lake County Central 63-49 in the Section 8A East quarterfinals.

A balanced Grygla-Gatzke offense featured five double figure scorers as Robbie Anderson netted 14 points, Tomas Loberg 12, Andrew Holte and Tim Polansky 11 each and Adam Sparby 10. The Patriots were led by Aaron Cook with 19 points and Bobby Strom 10.

Win-E-Mac shot 42 percent from the field (22/52) and had a quiet 2-for-4 showing at the free throw line, where Grygla-Gatzke was 10-for-16. The Eagles more than doubled the Patriots on the boards, 30-14. Win-E-Mac topped the turnover charts 14-8.

| Win-E-Mac | 6 | 13 | 14 | 19 | 52 |

Top seeds in 8A West are beaten

Top two seeds in the Section 8A West boys high school basketball tournament bracket were both beaten in a Saturday night doubleheader at the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls.

No. 1-seeded Stephen-Argyle lost a 45-44 first-game decision to No. 4 Tri-County, while No. 2-seeded Norman County West dropped a 38-32 contest against No. 3 Marshall County Central in the nightcap.

The results put the Wildcats and Nordics into Tuesday's finals in the same building. The winner will move on to the University of Minnesota-Crookston for a Friday, March 11, Section 8A title game shot.

Marshall County Central won by combining a fast start with strong defense. The Nordics scored exactly half of their points in the first quarter, then relied on their defense to do the rest.

A game-opening Norman County West defense left Jay Maurstad virtually uncovered and the Marshall County Central guard took advantage of the opportunity by hitting three quick baskets to propel the Nordics to a 19-5 lead. A change in defensive strategy by the Panthers made points harder to come by the rest of the way.

"They switched defenses and took some things away from us," explained Marshall County Central coach Jake Rantanen. "They took away our transition game."

The Nordics had a 19-11 lead at the end of the first quarter, but the advantage was just 23-22 at halftime. Defense took over the in the second half as the two teams combined for just 25 points over the final 16 minutes.

Marshall County Central was clinging to a 31-27 lead at the third quarter horn. Norman County West led 32-31 and had the ball when Dustin Monsebroten came up with a steal and a lay-up with 2 1/2 minutes to play to kick off a 7-0 game-winning finish for the Nordics.

"That play by Dustin was big," acknowledged Rantanen, whose team sewed it up at the free throw line.

Monsebroten finished with 13 points and Maurstad had 11 while center Andrew Johnson put together a 10-point, 10-rebound double-double. He also blocked four shots.

"Andrew was a force inside," noted Rantanen. "We got good pressure from our guards, and if they did penetrate, Andrew was there to stop them."

Brian Ziegler of Norman County West led all scorers with 19 points, but Stuart Borne, who averaged 18 points per game during the season, was held scoreless by a rotating defensive trio of Andy Brons, Andy Kragness and Monsebroten. "I thought we played great defense," confirmed Rantanen.

Marshall County Central was 13-for-32 from the field (41 percent) and 9-for-10 at the free throw line. Norman County West was just Matt Stuckey (left) of Thief River Falls signed a national letter of intent recently to play football at Bemidji State University, where he will be used as a tight end/fullback by the Beavers. Jeff Mumm (right) said in his 20 years as the Prowlers head football coach, Stuckey is just the fourth player to sign with a scholarship-granting NCAA Division II program. He joins a list that previously included Matt Myers and Trent Christensen at the University of North Dakota and Joe Field at the University of Minnesota-Crookston. "Not that many kids get the opportunity," acknowledged Mumm. "It says a lot about the player and our program."

Six Prowlers wrestle in individual portion of state tournament

A team-record six Thief River Falls wrestlers qualified for the Class AA individual portion of the 2005 Minnesota state high school wrestling tournament Feb. 24-26 at the Xcel Energy Center in St. Paul.

Reporter/photography Scott DCamp of The Times and Northern Watch attended the tournament to cover the Prowlers. His stories, detailing Thief River Falls results, appeared in earlier publications. Today we offer a shot of each Thief River Falls wrestler – seniors Zach Anderson (140 pounds) and Adam Lian (171); junior Dan LeDuc (152); sophomores Kyle Iverson (125) and Andrew Peralta (heavyweight); along with eighth grader Jordan Engen (103) – in state tournament action.

LeDuc was the top state meet finisher for the Kenny Geiser-coached Prowlers with a fourth place performance.

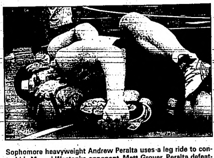
Adam Lian sets up a front headlock takedown against Matt Toren of Rocori in their 171-pound wrestle-back match. Lian won 9-6.



Sophomore heavyweight Andrew Peralta uses a leg ride to control his Mound-Westonka opponent, Matt Grover. Peralta defeated Grover by fall in 3:03 to advance to the second round of competition.

Ramstorf DNR award recipient

Mike Ramstorf of Thief River Falls was the first recipient of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources Division of Enforcement Education Achievement Award during an program held recently at Camp Ripley.

Over the past five years, Ramstorf has demonstrated an exceptional commitment to education within his patrol areas and as a district supervisor. Not only did he attend all classes in his areas, but when vacancies occurred in neighboring stations he attended many of those as well.

Ramstorf's use of local media, as well as speaking engagements with local civic and sportsmen's organizations, are just a few examples of his exceptional efforts to provide quality safety educational opportunities to Minnesotans.

Tom Hemker, a conservation officer stationed in Winona, was named the 2004 Minnesota Conservation Officer of the Year during the same ceremony.

Hemker, a Winona native, joined the Minnesota DNR in 1994 after serving several years as a game warden in Indiana. After completing the Minnesota DNR Enforcement Conservation Officer Academy at Camp Ripley, Hemker was stationed in Osseo from 1994-1996 and Owatonna from 1996-2003. He has been assigned to the Winona station since April 2003.

"Over the course of Officer Hemker's career, he has proven himself to be an exceptional conservation officer, well rounded in all respects, as well as an exceptional person," said Minnesota DNR Chief Conservation Officer Mike Hamm. "Tom is well known for treating people he encounters in a manner that leaves them with a lasting positive impression that reflects highly on himself, all conservation officers, the DNR and the state."

Officer Hemker has volunteered and served with distinction as a field training officer, officer candidate background investigator, waterfowl task force officer and special investigations unit investigator. Fellow conservation officers feel these "extra" commitments are over and above the normal duties and require a high degree of professionalism.

"To be successful in these duties an officer must possess qualities such as adaptability, intuitive thinking, creativity, determination and the ability to work with people in a variety of circumstances," Hamm said. "In this profession it is not enough to merely possess the skills to execute the job, you need officers that can read people, adapt and make critical decisions. Officer Hemker can do this with the best."

Boat and Water Safety Achievement Award was presented to Karl Hadrits of Crosby. The honor is based on demonstrated leadership abilities and outstanding achievements in boating safety education, Boating While Intoxicated (BWI) enforcement, and service to other law enforcement agencies. Hadrits was also the 2004 recipient of the Minnesota Chapter of The Wildlife Society's Law Enforcement Award.

Kurt Nelson of Glenwood was the recipient of the prestigious DNR Waterfowl Enforcement Achievement Award. His patrol area has many state and federal wildlife management areas, shallow sloughs contained totally on private property, as well as numerous shallow water "duck lakes" in West Central Minnesota's, Prairie Pothole Region.

Nelson continually uses waterfowl laws, waterfowl identification, waterfowl habitat issues and hunter ethics to inform and educate youth and adults during the waterfowling seasons.

The Willard Munger Wetland Achievement Award was presented to West Metro District Supervisor Lt. Scott Carlson, who had an outstanding year protecting wetlands in Scott County. Carlson is always willing to meet with local government units and DNR hydrologists to discuss violations and take action when warranted. The award is named after the long-time legislator who died in 1999 leaving a 43-year record of extraordinary environmental activism to the people of Minnesota.

Deer management talks continue

Deer hunters who attended one of three public meetings recently held in northwest Minnesota generally agreed they want to see more mature bucks. Discussion continues, however, on the best strategy to achieve that goal.

The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources conducted the meetings, the second phase of a public input process to discuss quality deer management (QDM) regulations in northwest Minnesota. Last year's telephone survey of 300 firearms deer hunters also showed a desire for more mature bucks with a similar mix of opinions on how to achieve that goal.

"Hunters want to increase the number of mature bucks in the deer population," said Lou Cornicelli, DNR big game program coordinator. "Clearly, discussions on how best to achieve that goal will need to continue."

About 56 percent of hunters supported the idea of a regulation that would increase the proportion of antlered deer. More than half (55 percent) supported eliminating the two-buck regulation that is unique to northwest Minnesota. Although no regulation received majority support, nearly half (47 percent) of the hunters surveyed showed some support for antler-point restriction regulations.

The meeting agenda included a presentation of last year's telephone survey results, advantages and disadvantages of QDM strategies, and a population model demonstrating deer response to antler point restrictions. At the conclusion of the presentation and public comment period, hunters answered the same questions posed in last year's telephone survey.

"We were pleased with the dialogue that occurred," Cornicelli said. "Deer hunting is a passionate issue and a lot of those emotions really come to the surface when you go out and ask people how they feel about change."

Regulations that were opposed by a majority of hunters included:

- ■ Ending buck party hunting (60 percent opposed).
- ■ Establishing a lottery for buck permits (62 percent opposed).
- ■ Earn-a-buck restrictions that require hunters to kill an antlerless deer before harvesting an antlered deer (68 percent opposed).
- ■ Moving the firearms season outside the rut (69 percent opposed).
- ■ Reducing the number of days hunters could hunt bucks (81 percent opposed).

Seventy-one percent of the hunters indicated that they would participate in an antlerless-only season in addition to the regular firearm season.

The next step in the process will be to conduct a larger public survey that will be more detailed than the surveys that have been used previously.

"Basically, we'll design the survey so that it is more than just yes/no," Cornicelli said.

"We'll be looking at more of a choice-based survey. We'll ask which of the suite of regulations could hunters support under certain conditions."

Dogs chasing and harassing wildlife a serious problem

Conservation officers from the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources are receiving a growing number of reports about dogs chasing and harassing deer.

Minnesota DNR Chief Conservation Officer Mike Hamm suggests that most dog owners are not aware of what their dogs are up to when the dogs are out roaming. And, he added, they're not being kind to the dog.

Conservation officers believe that people underestimate the potential for their dog to get into trouble. Many people do not believe that their dog would chase wildlife.

"People think it's great that their dogs can run," Hamm said. "But they don't know what the dogs do when they are out of sight. Because the dog is well mannered when the owner is around, the owner underestimates the potential for their pet to chase wildlife.

In reality, the dog is out there doing what dogs do - following a scent and chasing down prey. Single dogs are usually not much of a problem to wildlife, but when they team up with neighbor dogs and form packs, the hunter/killer instinct surfaces and they become a serious threat to wild animals.

Domestic dogs chasing deer is a recurrent problem in Minnesota, according to Hamm. And it is particularly hazardous at this time of year - for both the game animals and the dogs.

"Winter is an appropriate time to talk about the problem because big game animals are expending every bit of energy to stay alive and have a difficult time running through deep crusted snow," Hamm said. "Many does will also abort their fawns if too much stress is placed on them."

Hamm points out that a dog chasing game animals is especially bad for the wildlife when it is cold out. The dog is frisky, full of food, and ready to go. However, wildlife is out there 24 hours a day, burning a lot of energy just to stay alive.

"When dogs are loose, they naturally chase the wildlife," Hamm said. "It's devastating what a dog can do to an animal, especially when they kill it. The dogs are usually well fed at home, so most kills are not made because the dogs are hungry, but rather because of instinct and frenzy."

However, dogs do not always kill the animals. Dogs, in their domestication, have lost many of their instincts for making quick kills, and instead chase, harass and terrorize wildlife until the chased animal collapses in exhaustion.

For example, if a dog chases a deer, the dog often does not know what to do with it once they catch it, said Hamm. "Wolves are efficient killers, but dogs will bite the nose off and chew ears," he said. "The animal really suffers when the dog is just playing around."

The owner of a dog that kills or pursues a big game animal is guilty of a petty misdemeanor and is subject to a civil penalty of up to $500 for each violation.

According to state law, any conservation officer or peace officer has the option of killing a dog that is caught wounding, killing or pursuing in a manner that endangers a big game animal. In reality, this means the penalty to the dog can be death.

Between Jan. 1 and July 14, a person other than a peace officer or conservation officers may kill the dog. The officer or person is not liable for damages for killing the dog.

"People should be aware if their dog is loose, it could get shot by a neighbor who is unhappy about it running loose," Hamm said. "It may seem immoral, but sometimes people decide to take care of problems themselves. So there is not only a threat to wildlife, but the dog could get shot."

Hamm said that only after all efforts to contact a pet owner have failed would the dog be shot and killed by a conservation officer. "I hate to do it; I love dogs," he said. "I would rather issue a citation to the owner first."

The last thing a conservation officer wants to do is go talk to someone about controlling his or her dog, Hamm said.

"If people make a little extra effort, we wouldn't have these problems," he said. "The DNR doesn't perceive this as a dog problem. We perceive it as a people problem."

Tests reveal no CWD in Minnesota

No positives were found in tests for Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) of nearly 13,000 lymph node samples taken from wild deer harvested during the 2004 deer season, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources announced.

CWD testing of hunter-harvested deer is complete. Since 2001, the DNR has tested nearly 30,000 wild deer for CWD. The disease has never been detected in the state's wild deer herd.

"After three years of intensive sampling, we're very pleased not to have found CWD in any of Minnesota's wild deer," said Lou Cornicelli, DNR big game program coordinator. "We're also grateful for the cooperation we received from hunters, volunteers and organizations throughout this extensive testing process."

CWD is a fatal disease that attacks the brain tissues in deer and elk causing lethargy, disorientation and emaciation. CWD was detected in two farmed elk in Aitkin and Stearns counties in 2002 and 2003, respectively.

Efforts to monitor for CWD in wild deer will now focus on collecting samples from deer that are found sick or displaying symptoms consistent with CWD. "Although we're relieved that our statewide surveillance has not found CWD in wild deer, we need to continue long-term monitoring efforts," said Mike DonCarlos, DNR wildlife program manager.

The 2004 CWD effort involved more than 500 people from DNR, University of Minnesota College of Veterinary Medicine and College of Natural Resources, North Dakota State University, Minnesota Conservation Corps, St. Cloud State University, Vermillion Community College, Fond du Lac and 1854 Authorities, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and other universities and volunteers. The Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory at the University of Minnesota is conducting all the tests.

Hunters who volunteered a sample this year received a DNR cooperator patch and were placed in a drawing to win one of several firearms and bows being offered by Gander Mountain, Minnesota Deer Hunters Association, Cabela's, the Minnesota State Archery Association, the Minnesota Bowhunters Inc., Sportsmans Warehouse, and Austin-Halleck muzzleloaders. MDHA has completed the drawing and the winners have been notified.

"I'd like to thank the organizations for their generous donations, the hunters for donating the samples, and the many volunteers who stepped up to help", Cornicelli said. He said that the cooperation was outstanding and he is encouraged that statewide surveillance has been completed.

CWD testing results by permit area are available on the DNR Web site at http://www.dnr.state.mn.us/mammals/deer/cwd/testingresults2004.html.

DNR QUESTIONS

Q: Minnesota has a number of species on the state endangered, threatened or of special concern list. How far have we come in helping to protect and re-establish these populations? Are we close to removing any from these lists?

A: Minnesota has a total of 96 endangered, 101 threatened and 242 special concern species. The management and recovery of Minnesota's listed species is a major responsibility of the DNR, and species such as the gray wolf, trumpeter swan, peregrine falcon and bald eagle are recovering in response to these efforts. Additional populations of some listed species, such as the threatened Blanding's turtle, have been discovered; and the endangered Higgin's Eye Pearly Mussel has a brighter future thanks to captive breeding and subsequent release into restored habitats. Active management programs are also underway for recovery of the Karner Blue Butterfly, Timber Rattlesnake, Topeka Shiner (minnow) and many other plant and animal species. As some species rebound, others, such as the piping plover, continue to decline due to a loss of habitat. Federal funds and private landowners are key to the success of many programs. Donations to the Nongame Wildlife Checkoff are used to match federal wildlife grant and endangered species funds to protect Minnesota's endangered and threatened wildlife species.

- Richard Baker, DNR animal research coordinator/zoologist.

Q: In the past hunters and trappers had certain exceptions regarding all-terrain vehicle (ATV) use during their specific seasons. How does the 2003 legislation requiring the DNR to reclassify all state forests as "limited" or "closed" impact these uses?

A: The answer regarding cross-country travel in state forests depends on the classification that is being proposed. Forests proposed as "limited" would still permit hunters and trappers to operate ATVs off of forest trails when lawfully using their machines for hunting big game or constructing hunting stands during October, November and December; retrieving harvested big game in September through December; or trapping during open seasons. These exceptions for hunting and trapping do not allow operation of ATVs in state forests that are "closed" to motor vehicles. When operating an ATV for these activities it is illegal to cause erosion or ruts, or to injure, damage or destroy trees or crops. ATV legislation has been introduced this session and current regulations are subject to change. Additional information regarding forest reclassifications, and trail and road designations can be found on the DNR's Web site at www.dnr.state.mn.us.

- CB Bylander, DNR Division of Fish & Wildlife Outreach Section manager.

DNR names Alexandria couple as Snowmobile Instructors of the Year

A husband and wife team, who have given much of their time to enhance snowmobile safety and education in Minnesota, have been named the 2004 Minnesota snowmobile safety education Volunteer Instructors of the Year.

Earl and Sonya Anderson, Alexandria, have more than 40 years of combined snowmobile safety instructor experience. They have instructed nearly 2,200 students and since 1993 have averaged at least 130 students per class.

"Earl and Sonya have worked diligently for many years to improve snowmobiling and snowmobile safety in Minnesota," said Gene Merriam, commissioner of the Department of Natural Resources. "Without the help of people such as the Andersons the task of providing snowmobile safety education by this agency would be significantly greater. The DNR thanks this year's winners and all the other citizens and organizations who work to make snowmobiling safer in Minnesota."

Most snowmobile incidents involve operators who have not received snowmobile safety training. That reality is more than enough reason to keep the Andersons involved in providing snowmobile safety training.

"Each snowmobile safety training student who has successfully completed the course did it themselves, we just provided the opportunity," Earl Anderson said when the couple was thanked for their special efforts.

The award was presented Feb. 12 during the [illegible]

Mike Carroll

Mike Carroll has been named Northwest Region director for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR), by Commissioner Gene Merriam, effective June 1.

Carroll is currently the DNR's Forestry Division director. He and his family live in Park Rapids. His new position will be based in the DNR's regional office in Bemidji.

"Mike has done outstanding work as our Forestry Division director during challenging times," Merriam said. "His experience makes him ideally suited to direct our work in northwestern Minnesota. He has a keen understanding of our regional issues."

Carroll is a 25-year DNR veteran who has served in a variety of forestry positions, including area forestry supervisor in Park Rapids, superintendent of the Badoura State Forest Nursery, Forest Resource Management Program supervisor, and regional forest health specialist.

"I look forward to working with the dedicated staff and cooperators of the northwest in conserving the diverse natural resources of the region," Carroll said. "I will draw heavily on my Northwest Initiative and Blandin Community Leadership Training to reinforce DNR's role as a neighbor and long-term contributor to the economic, social and environmental health of the region."

Carroll holds a bachelor's degree in forestry from Syracuse University and a master's degree in entomology with academic distinction from the University of Missouri-Columbia. In 1995, he served as Minnesota chair for the Society of American Foresters. During his DNR tenure, he has received numerous awards for outstanding achievement.

Carroll replaces acting regional director Roger Tietz, who will return full time June 1 to his job as the DNR Enforcement Division's regional supervisor in Bemidji.

Conservation officer academy begins its ninth set of classes

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources Enforcement Division started its ninth Conservation Officer Academy Feb. 9 at Camp Ripley.

Eighteen conservation officer candidates are participating in the 12-week training program about state natural resource laws and how to enforce them.

"As a conservation officer, you enforce fish and game laws to ensure that hunters and anglers abide by the seasons and limits, have proper licenses, and use the proper equipment," said DNR Chief Conservation Officer Mike Hamm.

"Officers also investigate complaints, arrest violators, prepare reports and present evidence in court," Hamm said. "Some investigations are completed in a day while others require extensive detective work and modern technology."

The 2005 academy candidates and the station they will be assigned to are: Timothy Collette, Cass Lake; Joseph Stattelman, Mankato; Pat Znajda, Roseau; Robert Geving, Mankato; Mary Manning, Grand Marais; Adam Block, Prior Lake; Shane Osborne, Montevideo; Michael Fairbanks, Virginia; David Schottenbauer, Princeton; Daniel Malinowski, Fosston; Brett Oberg, Maplewood; Jason Peterson, Eagan; Eric Schettler, Fairmont; Sarah Backer, Cambridge; Thomas Walstrom, Warroad; Darrin Kittleson, International Falls; Randy Hanzal, International Falls; and Chad Polecheck, Roseau.

The recruits will learn everything from using a laptop computer to collecting evidence to arresting and interviewing suspects. The idea is to allow the conservation officer candidates to become familiar with the variety of challenges confronting officers who protect the state's natural resources. "Upon successful completion of the academy, the candidates will spend 16 additional weeks learning from, and being evaluated by, veteran conservation officers before receiving their first assignment.

"The training will be both physically and mentally challenging to [illegible] they're prepared for the [illegible]

The weather in northwest Minnesota keeps hanging around with the zero degree on the thermometer most every night, especially during the full moon that we've had this past week but days with no cloud cover. The sun manages to get it far enough above freezing to melt some snow. I see a 2- foot long icicle hanging from the porch roof on the south side of the house. It glistens in the sunlight like a huge crystal so I won't remove it at this time.

Tuesday morning--Another day with the thermometer way below zero! The sun is shining on new frozen snow, making the whole yard sparkle like diamonds. It reminds me of Doris Mountain in Montana near our home when the sun shone on it when it was really cold.

Yesterday, I had to go to the dentist and after a week of thinking how painful a root canal was expected to be, I was crippled to do any writing' My brother Isaac Thompson took me to TRF, knowing full well that I would not be in any condition to drive home. After two full hours of dental work, if it was the dentist and his assistant, or prayers, I was impervious to pain. If I had know I was going to live this long, I would have taken better care of my teeth.

Several churches have been quilting this winter and the season for the women to collect them and send them to various places that need help and each church provides the high school graduates from their congregations with a gift of a beautiful quilt hoping they will go on to higher learning and make use of them.

On Wednesday, Pearl Thompson, [illegible] Marie Johnson, Betsy Thompson and [illegible] were [illegible] at the [illegible] Church [illegible]. They have [illegible] done this winter and would have finished but ran out of filling with 7 tops waiting for filling to arrive from a company. Then they will quit that for this year. Many go to Alexandria where they are distributed.

Judy Kleinvachter and June Severson had Sunday dinner at Irene's Cafe and enjoyed the "Smorgasbord". This type of service began in the Scandinavian countries and it seems to bring a healthy appetite to all generations. Of course, there is the Tuesday ritual that has gotten a hold on so many of us and that is Irene's famous potato dumplings! Judy and company seldom if ever miss going there for them. Visitors at her house this week were Marie Stellon, Joan Gerhis and grandson Austin, Vance, Kelly and Amanda Lofrooth, and Larina Berggren and Paulina.

Danny and Becky Johnson took Pearl Thompson to Greenbush as a guest for a lovely dinner. On Saturday, Pearl was the guest of LaVonne Johnson and Phaela Thompson at the Black Bear. Sunday evening after church she attended the birthday party for Marie Johnson.

Thanks for the comments from the Madsons in Iowa who say they keep track of friends and relatives by reading about them in the news.

Editorial opinion published under this heading is intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. Unless specified otherwise, the editorials are written by Editor Dave Hill and do not represent opinion of other staff members. Opinions in items from other publications may not coincide with the editor's own views but are offered for their general interest.

REA lives up to its billing as a tremendous asset

Flexibility is a highly sought after asset. People, and facilities, are no longer given the freedom to specialize in just one activity. If you've been employed during the past 10 years or more, you know what I mean - you're now doing the work of what was once the job of two or more people.

Public facilities are also coming under that kind of scrutiny. Facilities that sit idle for long periods of time are seen as wasteful; so, it's nice to see that staff and volunteers were able to convert the Ralph Engelstad Arena - Thief River Falls (REA-TRF) from a top-notch hockey arena to a top-notch basketball arena.

The buzz during the recent basketball games has been how impressive the facility is and how well it functioned as a basketball arena. REA-TRF and its staff serve as valuable ambassadors for this community. The fact that this particular experience was so successful, must give local leaders who went through the process of building this facility, a great deal of satisfaction. Once again, REA-TRF has demonstrated that it is a tremendous asset to this community on many levels.

In such situations, we would be remiss if we did not give credit where credit is due: Congratulations to the staff of REA-TRF. By living up to the REA benefactor's reputation for excellence through hard work, all your planning, hard work and effort paid off.

Information is an important currency, even here

There may be a time when information becomes a kind of currency. Paul K. McMasters, First Amendment ombudsman, said there may be a time when it is used for bartering, brokering, managing, safeguarding, and hoarding.

In response to a question about predicting market trends, Michael Swanson, Wells Fargo economist, said he likes to respond like Sgt. Schultz of Hogan's Heroes, a popular show from - well a long time ago. When confronted with a juicy tidbit of information, Schultz would suck in his breath in shock and say: "I know nothing." It became a popular, and humorous part of the show. Swanson, the economist who visited Thief River Falls last week, was making a funny point about fluctuations in financial markets: markets are fickle, you can't predict what's going to happen. In the media, and in this democracy, however, what you don't know can hurt you.

> If we choose, as Sgt. Schultz did, to "know nothing," then it's our choice.

Would citizens of northwestern Minnesota be very happy if no one knew about the forest trail proposal for Beltrami Island Forest? Would citizens of your community be well-served by a police department that decided that you didn't need to know about a sex offender in your community? What if there were several burglaries taking place in your community, wouldn't you want to know about that? What if local government decided that it really didn't think it was necessary to tell the community about spending thousands of dollars on a local improvement project? What if a local government official started accepting bribes?

These are all things we demand to be told about. They are things we feel are important - important to us personally, and important to this democracy.

Sometimes we take our access to government data for granted. Sometimes we wish those stories would go away, especially when we know the people involved. Sometimes we might feel that we're being told too much. But in a democracy, citizens have a choice, and in a government for the people and by the people, we demand to have a choice. If we choose, as Sgt. Schultz did, to "know nothing," then it's our choice. We can turn off the television, put down the newspaper, or turn off the radio. You can even stop reading this editorial. Or, we can choose to be informed citizens.

In reality - our reality, not the costumed and gaudy lives of actors on-screen or stage - not knowing can prevent us from making good decisions and policy. It can hurt government accountability. It can cause real harm.

Choose to know.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for supporting the NCTC Foundation

To the Editor:

So many nights we just head home after a long day, but not so on Fat Tuesday, Feb. 8. Over 130 community members came out to show their support for the Northland Community and Technical College Foundation at "Cruising with Northland on the USS Swenson" event. By the end of the evening, the Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) Foundation had raised $5,000 toward student scholarships at NCTC simply through the generosity of individuals and businesses in our area.

It was truly inspiring to see the level of support these individuals and businesses provided to make the NCTC Foundation fundraising event a success. The NCTC Foundation would like to express its gratitude to all the people who attended the event on Feb. 8. By purchasing items on the silent auction, playing games or making a donation, you showed your commitment to NCTC Foundation's mission to recruit area students through scholarships, and support NCTC. The presence of the NCTC criminal justice students for valet parking and the NCTC Phi Theta Kappa students for serving mocktails were great examples of the commitment of NCTC faculty and students, too. Thanks to each of you for taking part in the event.

Secondly, the NCTC Foundation would like to thank all the area businesses and organizations that so generously donated valuable items when NCTC Foundation board members came to their place of business with a request. Over 60 businesses and organizations contributed merchandise and/or cash donations! What a show of support from our community and the surrounding area for higher education and for the students of NCTC.

Lastly, all the entertainment for the evening was donated by the musicians involved: Joe Kezar and the Woodpics, Catherine Hagen, Philip Hoks, Taryn Pream, and Jane Anderson. The NCTC Foundation is extremely thankful that these artists would donate their time and talents to make the cruise event hum with music from the South. The entertainment was superb. "Cruising with Northland on the USS Swenson" was a success because of the support of the community of Thief River Falls and the surrounding area. The NCTC Foundation looks forward to another cruise next year and hopes you won't miss the boat.

Margo Peterson
Executive Director
NCTC Foundation.

Postal service in TRF could be better

To the Editor:

In regards to the letter sent in about our postal service:

We have street signs at my county road and numbers on our mailboxes, and I have lived at the same place for 50 years and yet my mail goes astray.

My niece in Washington state sent me a card. It came all the way to the Thief River Falls Post Office and was sent back to her stamped "No Such Street Number." She put it in an envelope and put the same address on it as was on the card, and I got it. What was the difference?

My health insurance was canceled due to no payment and I had sent in the payment two weeks before I had received that notice. It only goes to Minneapolis. I went to the bank where the cashier check was made and telephoned the insurance company. The bank told them I had the slip saying when I had sent the money and that they had made out the cashier check at their bank. I had to make out another cashier check and send it again because it was my fault it got lost in the mail. This time I sent it by certified mail and they got it. My health insurance was reinstated. It has been a year since and the first check has not been received and it never came back to the bank. Where did it go?

Some of my bills have been sent back to the sender, too with "No Such Address" stamped on them. People call and ask if I have moved.

I called the Grand Forks Post Office and the lady in charge couldn't believe all the problems I was having. She said maybe it's the mail carrier.

Don't blame the mail carrier. He's doing a fine job. Put the blame where it is supposed to be - at the Post Office here or in Grand Forks, N.D.

P.S. I'm not the only one complaining about our mail service.

Inar Mikkelson
Thief River Falls

Who really built the first snowmobile?

To the Editor:

I would like to tell you a story because you are a public forum, and in this forum, I believe the truth can be told though it may be hard for some to swallow. There are some facts to be shared in this story, and I think Thief River Falls has made a long story very short. It doesn't end there though because the whole country has fallen for it.

The official Thief River Falls visitor's guide offers the following statements:

- "Today the city continues its entrepreneurial spirit preserving and respecting the past."
- "Thief River Falls is the birthplace of the Arctic Cat snowmobile - Arctic Cat."
- "Snowmobiling in Pennington County, the birthplace of Arctic Cat snowmobiles."

Well, OK, I can [illegible] statement that it is the [illegible] Arctic Cat [illegible] in Minnesota? Is my math wrong? You say [illegible] How come I [illegible]

Then, there's the rumor that "birthplace" is explained by the statement that Edgar Hetteen was born here. It's also stated that he started Arctic Cat and then moved to Roseau to start Polaris. Will someone help me fill in the blanks? Wasn't the first Polaris built in 1954, the first Bombardier in 1949? According to historical records, sometime between 1921 and 1927, Ford built a snowmobile for the Post Office. But here's one for the Snowmobile Hall of Fame: (I believe he also started water skipping, 100 years ago) Commodore F.M. [Underwood of Toledo, Ohio, built an "iceboat" during the winter of 1905-06.] So, Underwood is my nomination as the inventor of two sports.

Cordially yours,
Michael Holten
Thief River Falls

(According to the Annual Book for American Boys, copyright 1906, and provided by Holten, Underwood built an "iceboat" that successfully reached a speed of 40 miles per hour.)

Dairy

Let's get excited about Minnesota's dairy industry

by State Rep. Greg Davids

It is a time for optimism in Minnesota's dairy industry! We all know the hardships of a Minnesota dairy industry that has seen fewer farms, a loss of cows and shrinking milk production. We must remember that the dairy industry is an important economic engine in rural Minnesota and letting these issues weigh too heavily on us gets us nowhere.

While those indicators are a concern to me as chairperson of the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee (ARDC) in Minnesota's House of Representatives, I have been working hard to develop legislation that improves the outlook for our state's dairy producers. The ARDC recently heard just such a proposal that would provide incentives to dairy producers of all sizes who take steps to modernize their facilities.

I recently had the honor of touring the First District Association in Litchfield. This dairy processing plant is a modern wonder and a testament to the farmer owners of the plant. I saw stack after stack of 500-pound blocks of cheese and thousands of bags of whey protein. These products are headed for such companies as Hershey, M&M Mars, etc. The Litchfield Creamery has come a long way from its beginnings to becoming a national player in the dairy food industry.

While touring the facility, we also had a chance to meet with some local dairy producers and talk about the other side of the equation. We talked about modernization decisions and how farmers wrestle with questions of what is right for their farms. Questions like "Is my lender telling me what he wants me to do or what I should do?" or "If I add 100 cows, will I be able to have more free time to spend with my family?" Questions like that are difficult, and the answer is not often readily apparent. Add to this difficulty some negative sentiments from stories that recount the statistical decline of Minnesota's dairy industry, and farmers often choose to forgo modernizing their facilities.

Even amongst this backdrop, there is hope. Minnesota dairy producers are currently eligible for dairy business planning grants that help producers take a good economic look at their operations and determine what the best modernization steps are for their farms. Farmers can receive a matching grant of up to $5,000 to do this economic assessment. I encourage any dairy farmer to take advantage of this important program. (For more information, contact the Minnesota Department of Agriculture at 651-215-3946.)

Building on this concept, the ARDC considered HF 719 introduced by Rep. Dean Urdahl recently. This legislation would provide dairy producers up to $75,000 in tax credits for modernization efforts on their farms. This proposal passed unanimously and had the broad support of the Minnesota Milk Producers, Minnesota Farmers Union and Minnesota Association of Cooperatives.

By providing a 10 percent income tax credit for producers who build new barns, fences, water and feed facilities, milking operations, or milk storage facilities, the state can hopefully provide enough incentive to spur modernization efforts on dairy farms across Minnesota. The credit could be taken all at once or over a 15-year span.

This spark can help restore some of the optimism that has been lost in some segments of the dairy industry. There is not much like building a new barn or installing a new parlor that gets dairy farmers talking. This proposal has the governor's support, and I am hopeful this proposal will make its way quickly through the Legislature like it did out of the ARDC.

ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR

St. Hilaire, Red Lake County, Minnesota — March 11, 1905

News Items

"The planing mill is again at work this week.

"George Hughes has had a crew of men on the river this week driving piles and has nearly finished the work.

"Thief River Falls has failed to make good and she will not be represented in the Northern league with a baseball club.

"The warm weather we had for a couple of weeks had a bad effect on some people. Down in the central part of the state several people saw robins; Sam Haislet, of the Gazette, saw a snake; and here at home, I. Dahlen saw a flock of ducks. All these signs of an early spring are, however, lacking this week.

"We are having a touch of winter this week. It started on Monday with a light fall of snow and considerable more fell on Wednesday and yesterday we commenced having a touch of cold weather."

Two Years Delay

"Red Lake Falls, if they feel so disposed, can delay the vote on the county seat controversy for at least two years by taking advantage of all the laws' delays,' says Attorney W. E. Rowe, former county attorney and prominent lawyer at Crookston. Mr. Rowe expressed himself in the above manner while here on business last Thursday. He is not connected with the case and does not know what action will be taken but merely gives his opinion of the time it will take to bring the question to a vote by action of the courts.

"In support of Mr. Rowe's opinion the Roseau county case might be cited. The village of Badger started to circulate a petition to move the county seat of Roseau county from Roseau about four years ago and the question is still hanging fire in the courts. This will be discouraging to those who hoped for a speedy and economical settlement of the question."

Change of Route
Soo Extension Will Not Start at Thief River Falls, It Is Reported

"Soo line surveyors, it is reported, have found a change necessary in the route of the extension westward to Kenmare, North Dakota. The country is too swampy west of Thief River Falls and it will be necessary to leave the Winnipeg line at Plummer, south of Thief River Falls, and thence go westward through St. Hilaire.'

"The above article from the St. Paul Dispatch of Monday, March 6th, would indicate that there is more than a possibility that the Soo is figuring on going through this village with their west bound line. There is no question but that their survey west of Thief River Falls has proven so far unsatisfactory. While a line through here would be longer it would have an easier grade and bring the road considerable business which they would lose by going farther north."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

The News, John W. Eastman, Publisher — March 9, 1905
Thief River Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota

Winston Brothers Land It
The Minneapolis Firm Secures the Contract From the Soo

"Winston Brothers, railroad contractors of Minneapolis, were last week awarded the contact for the building of the line which the Soo will construct this year from Thief River Falls to Kenmare, North Dakota. The road will be 290 miles in length and will have to be completed by the end of October. This means that work will be commenced at both ends and it will require a very large crew to do the job. It is one of the largest contracts ever taken by a firm to be completed in one year and the price named is in the neighborhood of $5,000,000.

"The line will run through a well-settled country all the way, and it will give the people of the northern part of North Dakota an east and west road, which will be greatly to their advantage, as now all of the lines run north and south in that section. It will run through the heart of some of the best territory of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific and is going to make railroad competition very keen in that section.

"There will be three division point towns upon the road, Thief River Falls, a town about half-way between this city and Kenmare, North Dakota. This city and Kenmare will also be passenger division points.

"The importance of this road to Thief River Falls is realized by but few people, but the Soo people have promised the citizens here that what they will do for the city is going to result in doubling our population inside of a year. The round house and car shops which will be located here will give employment to about 1,000 men the year round, and as most of these will have families, it will greatly add to our population and result, in a few years, in making us the largest city in northern Minnesota."

The Cost of the Work
Engineer Clausen Gives the Council an Estimate of the Cost of Waterworks

"Engineer Clausen has submitted an estimate of the cost of the building of the system of waterworks to the city council. To have water mains run on Main avenue from First street to Fifth street, on LaBree avenue from First street to Sixth street, and on Bridge street on the East Side [This is now known as First street] to Markley avenue, a 75,000 gallon steel tank 110 feet in height, and 26 hydrants, it will cost $23,600. This is considerably less than the $28,000 in bonds sold and will mean that the council can put in a larger system than it was first thought possible.

"Mr. Clausen also estimates that for $8,500 a system of sewerage could be put in that would cover the same territory. As the sewerage will be paid for by the special assessment, the money voted for the waterworks bonds will not have to be paid out for this improvement."

We Will Soon Talk

"Work of building the telephone line from this city to Plummer is progressing in a satisfactory manner, but, owing to the ground being frozen, Manager Fant says that it is necessarily slow work just at present. After the frost goes out, the digging will be much easier and work will progress rapidly. Mr. Fant says that he expects to have the Plummer line and the Germantown line both completed at about the same time."

Repairing Mill
Lumber Company Getting Ready for the Season's Cut

"Quite a large sized crew of men are at work making repairs upon the Thief River Falls Lumber company's mill here, getting things in good shape for the season's run. The mill will start up when the ice goes out and the company has a sufficient amount of logs in the river to keep the mill running until the logs cut this winter can be brought here. The indications are that the demand for lumber will be as good this year as it was last."

Soo Carries the Mail
New Service Went into Effect on Monday of This Week

"The Soo now carries mail and it has made a complete change in affairs at the post office in this city. The morning mail is delivered to the post office at 7 o'clock in the morning and it is all distributed when the office is opened at 8. The office is open in the evening now until 9 o'clock and letters for the Twin Cities can be mailed as late as that and will arrive at their destination next morning. A Sunday mail is also received.

"This new deal is a great convenience to the public and is greatly appreciated. It makes the hours of the post office employees considerably longer, and they are the only ones that the new service does not benefit, but they are making no objection."

Oklee man pleads not guilty to three counts of murder

Trial expected to begin next week

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

An Oklee man pled not guilty Monday to killing his infant daughter in 2004.

John Russell Heden

John Russell Heden, 33, has been charged in Pennington County District Court with felony offenses of first degree murder (criminal sexual conduct), first degree murder (child abuse), and second degree murder. He pled not guilty to the three counts of murder.

Jury selection begins Monday in Heden's trial, Judge Dennis Murphy said at the plea hearing. Murphy noted the trial is expected to take two weeks.

Earlier at the hearing, Assistant Pennington County Attorney Al Rogalla said the trial may take three to three-and-a-half weeks.

Opening statements are expected to begin Friday, March 25 or Monday, March 28, Rogalla noted.

Besides those matters related to the trial, security issues were also discussed at the plea hearing. For the safety of those involved in the case, The Times has chosen at this time to not report on security information regarding the trial.

Even though the pleas were entered into the court record Monday, two motions were filed in court last year. In December 2004, Murphy denied a motion to change the venue or move the trial to another community. In a written ruling in February 2004, he also denied a motion to withhold statements Heden allegedly made to law enforcement before his arrest. Kristin Hanson and Loretta Hillier, public defenders representing Heden, had filed those motions.

Heden was taken into custody March 1, 2004 and remains incarcerated at the Pennington County Jail. A grand jury indicted him on the murder charges a month later. The criminal complaint alleges that Heden admitted to shaking his infant daughter and inappropriately touching her.

Heden was arrested after the Pennington County Sheriff's Department received a 911 call from Heden's Highlanding

Guard faces another deployment

The formal alert orders have not come down yet, but Minnesota National Guard has notified units throughout Minnesota that they should anticipate deployment in mid to late 2006.

According to a public affairs officer with the National Guard, the announcement was being made at this time in order to give soldiers some predictability to their lives as well as time to prepare. A list of the units affected was not available, but Lt. Shannon Pervis said the 2nd Battalion, 136th Infantry headquartered in Moorhead was included in that announcement. The 1st Battalion, 194th Armor in Brainerd was also notified. In all, approximately 2,000 Minnesota soldiers could be called up for duty. Pervis said their duties in Iraq would include presence patrols and security missions.

Pervis reiterated that this is all very tentative at this time.

County law enforcement projects completed

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

In December 2003, the Pennington County Board of Commissioners took what was the essential first step to improve both the Pennington County Jail and the Sheriff Department's communication abilities when it approved the sale of capital improvement bonds to pay for improvements in the county's law enforcement facilities.

By selling $535,000 in bonds to Bernardi Securities Inc. of Chicago, Ill., the county has been able to finance a new public safety radio tower and related equipment, an upgrade to the county's dispatch facilities and jail improvements.

Jail improvements

When Pennington County sold capital improvement bonds in 2003, it intended to improve both its 911 communication capabilities and the Pennington County Jail. Plans to improve the Pennington County Jail called for an increase in population capacity and tighter security.

Hruby said that it became evident after a couple of escapes that the jail needed to be more secure.

"We were naive to think that because it was minimum security that people wouldn't try to escape," Hruby said in reference to minimum security prisoners who escaped from the jail's recreation yard in 2003. The prisoners, who escaped were quickly returned to custody, but it alerted the department that measures would need to be taken.

Hruby said closing the yard was out of the question, and because of the jail's location, he was concerned about the aesthetic appearance of razor wire. After some searching, the department chose to use the services of a company that hangs razor wire using side mount brackets that can better conceal the wire.

A separate escape incident occurred in 2003, when two prisoners pushed a 200-pound table through jail windows after they managed to remove bolts that fastened it to the floor. Each jail window is now encased in bars.

"We learned a valuable lesson," Hruby said of the escapes, adding that they alerted the department as to some of the changes that would need to be made.

"We looked at everything, staffing, time, policy and this is the result," Hruby said. He noted that the medium/maximum capacity of the jail has increased from 14 beds to 30, plus three holding cells, of which two are juvenile priority.

Other improvements include a bigger booking room that now includes cameras and a state of the art Motorola finger print machine. Electronic finger printing replaces the traditional ink on each finger method. Hruby said when the old method was used, it would take several weeks to determine if a set of prints were taken accurately. Now law enforcement can take accurate prints in a matter of minutes.

Radio system and tower

Construction on a 300-foot public safety radio tower began in July 2004, at a site south of the U.S. Highway 59 and CSAH 7 intersection in Rocksbury Township. The now completed tower will help the Pennington County Sheriff's Department and Thief River Falls Police Department better respond to 911 emergencies.

"A big portion of our radio system was over 30 years old," said Pennington County Sheriff Mike Hruby. "The newest piece of equipment was a repeater we bought in 1992. And we only bought that one because the old one was struck by lightning."

The department's newest walkie talkies were also quite dated at eight years of age. Using the state highway patrol tower located in Thief River Falls, the walkie talkies gave deputies a portable communication range of 12 miles. Mobile communication through squad car radios was better, but with the previous tower, it still could not reach the outer portions of the county. Hruby said that soon-to-be digital mobile reception should be improved and crystal clear, reaching all boundaries of the county. The new tower will also improve portable reception, which will cover up to 15 miles.

"I've been here 20 years and we've never had county-wide communication," Hruby said. He noted that some of the previous limitations were caused by the age of equipment.

Several factors such as a central location, land elevation and proximity to Thief River Falls were considered during the location selection process.

"We found the best chunk of land we could put it on," Hruby said. "We wanted it to be located in the center of the county, but close enough to Thief River Falls to ensure that the Thief River Falls police department could use it too."

Hruby said the tower is completely self contained. It even has a self starting generator that can power the digital repeater for seven to 10 days depending on conditions when needed.

Sabre Communications of Sioux City, Iowa, performed all of the ground preparations for the tower, installed the large concrete anchors

TRF Council approves rezoning land for Wal-Mart

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

At its March 8 meeting, the Thief River Falls City Council approved a rezoning request and conditional use permit for a proposed Wal-Mart site. Decisions about a final plat and developer's agreement were tabled.

Council members unanimously approved rezoning the site, located along Nelson Drive, from agricultural (AG) to General Business District (C-2). Council member Dave Carlson was absent from the meeting. The rezoning request was granted after it met the eight criteria for granting zoning amendments, including that rezoning "will not adversely affect property values of adjacent landowners."

Council members also unanimously approved a conditional use permit for the site, which is approximately 22 acres. Under C-2 zoning, shopping centers are a conditional use. That permit is contingent on several items, including the creation of and adherence to mosquito and trash control plans for retention ponds at the site. It is also contingent on the creation of and adherence to a trash control plan for a line of trees surrounding the Supercenter.

Jake and Anne Barnick, who own the property, requested the rezoning and conditional use permit on behalf of the Wal-Mart Corporation.

One member of the general public attended the council meeting. John T. Anderson, a Thief River Falls resident and former council member, asked Wal-Mart representatives, "How many employees are you going to need with this store?"

A minimum of 300 employees will be employed at the store, replied Darcy Winter, a Wal-Mart representative employed by D.F. Winter & Associates Inc. of Minneapolis. She noted the Supercenter will employ both full-time and part-time workers.

Anderson also asked about Wal-Mart's wage scales.

Wal-Mart has wages comparable to the markets in which it builds stores, Winter said.

Does Wal-Mart meet the U.S. standards for the lowest minimum wage? Anderson asked.

"Absolutely," Winter responded.

Besides following Planning Commission recommendations and approving rezoning and a conditional use permit for the site, the council tabled a decision on the site's final plat. Community Development Director Mike Moore told council members the final plat was "not here for review."

A developer's agreement between the city and Wal-Mart Corporation was tabled as well. That agreement would specify the city and corporation's responsibili-

Two local men have burglary charges pending

Burglary: Two people have charges pending after an investigation into the Feb. 22 reports of burglaries at Dairy Queen and Hardee's. Jeremiah Jacob Altepeter, 19, Goodridge, and Quentin David Schaible, 18, Thief River Falls, have charges pending for burglary. They were allegedly involved in the burglary at Dairy Queen, causing over $1,800 in damage to a door and taking approximately $40 in cash. The two men were also allegedly involved in the burglary at Hardee's in which a door was damaged and money was taken. The total of the damage and theft loss is approximately $900. Evidence, including footprints and a walkie-talkie left behind at Dairy Queen, allegedly linked them to the crimes, according to the report. Altepeter and Schaible already have charges pending in connection with a burglary at SuperOne Foods on March 5, which was noted in the March 9 edition of The Times. Shad Allen Romans, 18, Grand Forks, N.D., also has charges pending in connection with that incident. Nothing was taken in that burglary.

Second degree driving while intoxicated: While on patrol March 8 at 1:18 a.m., police allegedly observed a vehicle traveling at a high rate of speed on Brooks Avenue. The vehicle was stopped. Vikki Ann Marie Hutchinson, 30, Thief River Falls, has charges pending for second degree driving while intoxicated.

Accident: On March 8 at 7:53 a.m., police received a report of an accident near the intersection of Seventh Street and Duluth Avenue. A 1991 Ford Taurus driven by Ashley Noel Jury of Thief River Falls collided with a parked 2001 Dodge owned by Charles Russell Vagle of Thief River Falls. According to the report, the eastbound Jury moved to the parking lane to allow a driver to travel through an area. The report further indicated Jury continued along the parking lane and struck the parked vehicle. Jury's vehicle sustained $800 in damage, and Vagle's vehicle sustained $2,000 in damage.

Theft, obstruction of justice and possession of drug paraphernalia: On March 9 at 4:09 p.m., police received a report of a theft at Hugo's. Someone had allegedly stolen two boxes of Coricidin D, but employees were unable to catch him. However, they recovered the person's bicycle. A short time later, police allegedly found a 14-year-old Thief River Falls male walking near Hugo's. He allegedly told police he had just moved to the area and did not know his address. The juvenile was allowed to leave, but police later discovered he was the alleged culprit. The juvenile has charges pending for theft, obstruction of justice and possession of drug paraphernalia. Upon traveling to the juvenile's residence, police allegedly found drug paraphernalia there.

Fifth degree assault: On March 10 at 5:50 a.m., police received a report of an assault at Northwest Medical Center. Steven Michael Olson, 43, Thief River Falls, allegedly grabbed a woman's arm and shook her. He was cited for fifth degree assault.

A 1999 Chrysler Concorde driven by Jesse Lynn Toren of Middle River rear-ended a 1999 Pontiac Grand Am driven by Misty Leann Olson of Clearbrook. At the time of the accident, the southbound Olson had stopped for a stop sign and was waiting to turn left. According to the report, the southbound Toren attempted to stop, but was unable to stop due to the snowy roadway. Toren's vehicle sustained $1,000 in damage, and Olson's vehicle sustained $700 in damage.

Accident: On March 11 at 11:54 a.m., police received a report of an accident at the intersection of Pennington Avenue and Nora Street. A 1996 Chevy Corsica driven by Judy Marie Peterson of Thief River Falls and a 1998 Ford Taurus driven by Jeremy Scott Underdahl of Newfolden collided. At the time of the accident, both vehicles were southbound on Pennington Avenue. According to the report, Peterson had traveled into the left lane, but her vehicle slid. She attempted to get back into the southbound lane, and her vehicle collided with the Underdahl vehicle. Both vehicles sustained $1,000 in damage.

Underage drinking and driving: On March 13 at 1:55 a.m., the sheriff's department allegedly observed a vehicle with a headlight that was not functioning. The vehicle was stopped near the intersection of Highway 32 and Vanrooy Drive. Thain Norman Abrahamson, 18, Thief River Falls, was cited for underage drinking and driving.

If readers have any information about the aforementioned crimes or offenses, they are urged to contact the Law Enforcement Center at 681-6161.

These reports include names of individuals charged, arrested or cited with various crimes and offenses by police, the sheriff's department or other law enforcement officials. Depending upon the circumstances of a case, charges can be, and sometimes are, changed or dropped by law enforcement officials or attorneys even before the case reaches court. # MDH releases new data about intimate partner and sexual violence

The Minnesota Department of Health (MDH) recently released a data brief, "Self-Reported Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence in Minnesota." The brief summarizes findings from the MDH-sponsored Community Survey of Health and Safety of Minnesota Women conducted in June 2004.

Two thousand women, ages 18 to 44, were interviewed by telephone about their experiences with intimate partner violence (IPV) and sexual violence (SV) during the 12 months preceding the survey. This is the first time MDH has conducted a statewide survey to estimate the number of Minnesota women who are victims of such violence.

About three percent of the women interviewed by telephone said they had experienced IPV during 2003, and one percent said they had experienced SV. For purposes of the survey, IPV was defined as a physical assault by an intimate partners, such as a current or former husband, boyfriend or partner (including same-sex partner). SV is defined as an attempted or completed non-consensual sex act.

If these percentages are projected to the 2003 population, approximately 30,000 women are estimated to have experienced IPV, and 10,000 women are estimated to have experienced SV during that year. These findings are consistent with other state and national surveys. Although nearly three-quarters of the IPV victims reported that they had sustained injuries, only 38 percent sought medical treatment. All women who had experienced sexual violence were considered to be injured, but only 23 percent sought medical care. An intimate partner was mentioned as the perpetrator by about one-fifth of SV victims.

"Thousands of Minnesotans are affected each year by intimate partners or sexual violence," said Minnesota Health Commissioner Dianne Mandernach. "Continuing to collect good data on the scope of the problem can help us better focus the state's prevention efforts."

Victims or individuals with concerns are encouraged to seek assistance or a referral from the Minnesota 24-Hour Domestic Violence Crisis Line (1-866-233-1111) or RAINN (1-800-656-4673), a national sexual abuse hotline that automatically refers to local programs by the caller's area code.

The MDH Injury and Violence Prevention Unit conducted the survey to supplement its other data on IPV and SV, which includes statistics on how many victims seek medical treatment. The data brief also reports on IPV and SV findings of the Minnesota Crime Survey, 2002; the Pregnancy Risk Assessment Monitoring System, 2002; the Minnesota Student Survey, 2001; the Oregon Women's Health and Safety Survey, 2002; and the National Violence Against Women Survey, 1995.

MDH works with numerous state and local organizations to help address the problems of sexual and domestic violence in Minnesota. In collaboration with its partners, the department has developed five-year objectives for health care and public health systems, and a comprehensive sexual violence prevention resource kit for communities, which is available online at www.health.state.mn.us/svp.

Sexual assault prevention activities recently funded by MDH include parent education programs conducted by the Center for Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment, a curriculum and video for Asian youth and adults developed by Asian Media Access; online safety presentations and information developed by the Jacob Wetterling Foundation; and the STOP IT NOW! Minnesota child sexual abuse prevention campaign.

For more information, see the MDH Injury and Violence Prevention Unit Web site (www.health.state.mn.us/injury/pub/).

TRF American Legion to host March 17 blood drive at Eagles Club

The Thief River Falls American Legion Auxiliary will hold a blood drive on Thursday, March 17, from noon to 6 p.m. at the Eagles Club in Thief River Falls.

All healthy persons over the age of 17 are invited to give blood during the drive to help patients in this community.

Donating is safe, simple and satisfying. The human body contains 10 to 12 pints of blood and since the body is constantly replacing blood, the amount donated is quickly replaced.

The entire process usually takes about an hour and only about 5 to 7 minutes for the actual donation. Before donating, a careful medical history is taken. The potential donor's temperature, blood pressure, pulse and hemoglobin level will be checked.

After the blood is drawn, it is typed and tested for diseases, which might be transmitted to the receiving patient or patients. This mini-physical actually benefits the donor as well as the patient, because if any of the tests indicate a need for medical attention, the donor is referred to his or her personal physician.

All the units of blood are broken down into component to help several different patients. Since whole blood must be used within 42 days of donation and some of the components within a few hours, there is always the need for a constant, fresh supply of blood to be donated by volunteers in area communities.

Generally, most healthy people whose age is 17 or older and weigh at least 110 pounds may donate. There are quite a few people who do not realize they are qualified to donate. People who are taking vitamins, hormones, birth control pills, diet pills, or antibiotics for acne may donate. There is no upper age limit.

Every donor must bring an ID to the blood drive. IDs must include the donor's legal name, plus a date of birth, Social Security number, United Blood Services (UBS) assigned number or photo.

Donors who are otherwise eligible to donate are unable to give at this drive because of the following circumstances:

- Donors cannot be accepted unless they know the name of their medications and the condition for which it is taken.
- They have received a blood transfusion within the past 12 months.
- They have not waited three days after their last dosage of antibiotics for an infection.
- Colds and flu, must be symptom-free the day of the donation.
- Ear piercing not done at a licensed establishment and tattoos defer a donor for 12 months.
- Most cancers within the past year. Call UBS for details.

Insulin dependent diabetics may now donate.

"These qualifications may have some effect on persons who plan on donating blood at the next blood drive in Thief River Falls," stated blood drive coordinator Sharon Odegaard. "We encourage other citizens to take the place of donors unable to give at this time."

People who have additional questions on donor qualifications or wish to schedule an appointment may call Annabelle at 681-3412.

Kohl to open AMPI annual meeting

U.S. Sen. Herb Kohl of Wisconsin will outline his plan to extend the Milk Income Loss Contract (MILC) program during the opening season of the Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) annual delegate meeting. The event is scheduled March 21-22 at the Sheraton Bloomington Hotel in Bloomington.

Kohl recently introduced legislation to extend the MILC program for two more years, coinciding with the duration of other Farm Bill programs. The current countercyclical program expires in September. The senator led the effort to create the program, which provides a safety net for dairy operations.

AMPI delegates will also hear from former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and nationally known agricultural economist Terry Barr of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives. Other guest speakers include Carlyle Hansen and Don Gregg, both former AMPI managers, who will be honored as part of the cooperative's 35th anniversary observation.

The annual delegate session will feature a review of the cooperative's financial statements and management reports. AMPI General Manager Mark Furth and AMPI President Paul Toft will present 2004 highlights.

The cooperative's policy-making process will culminate with delegates considering proposed resolutions. The resolutions process gives members an opportunity to determine AMPI positions on issues and policies that affect the cooperative.

Della Zeh Day to be held Friday at TRF Public Library

March is Women's History Month, and the Thief River Falls Public Library is celebrating with a day honoring Della Zeh. On Friday, March 18, the public is invited to the library anytime during regular library hours for refreshments and to view a trio of pictures done by Della Zeh that were recently donated to the Zehlians Club.

The club framed the pictures together and have this collection displayed in the front display window with the other Zeh watercolors and acrylic paintings the Zehlians had donated previously. This new trio of prints came to the club from Lorraine Still, one of the Zehlian members in the 1940s.

Zeh was a cultured woman from the East who followed her husband when he moved to Thief River Falls. Her artwork and flower gardens were known far and wide. In addition, she was an accomplished equestrian.

After her husband's death, Zeh chose to stay in Thief River Falls and devoted her life to enhancing the quality of life in the community. In 1894, she was one of the founding members of the local chapter of the Generated Federated Women's Club. The local club was officially accepted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs in 1895. The club renamed itself in her honor (Zehlians) in 1941.

Today, Zehlians continue to work towards enhancing the quality of life in Thief River Falls with a variety of projects. One example is a 15-year project entitled "Follow the Rivers," which yielded miles of Riverwalk paved in cobblestone, a walking bridge that spans the rivers and a fountain with marble benches.

For more information on this display or on any displays or programs at the library, contact the Thief River Falls Public Library at 101 First St. E. or via phone at 681-4325.

ACTIVITIES

Seasonal Songs

The following spring songs and poems can be sung by your children during the upcoming spring holidays. Enjoy!

Leprechaun

(Tune: "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star")

Leprechaun, all dressed in green,
Smallest man I've ever seen.
You hop around without a sound.
You pick up shamrocks from the ground.
One thing I'd like to be told:
Where'd you hide your pot of gold?

Easter Time

(Tune: "Pop! Goes the Weasel")

Holidays are special days,
Time to celebrate.
Easter time is coming soon,
I can hardly wait.
Friends and family all come 'round,
Filled with special cheer.
I'm so glad that Easter time
Comes every single year!

Bunny

(Tune: "Do Your Ears Hang Low")

Do your ears flop around?
Do you hop along the ground?
Do you look sweet and funny?
Hello, fluffy little bunny!
Do you wiggle your nose?
Hop along the garden rows?
You're a fluffy little bunny.

SCAVENGER HUNT

PARENTING TIPS

Safety

Did you know that accidents are the leading killer of children? They claim far more children's lives each year than diseases. The major unintentional risk for children is traffic injury, whether as a passenger, bicyclist or pedestrian.

Parents are responsible to teach their children about safety. They must then set good examples of safe practices. Parents and those who care for children must insist on buckling all children into seat belts and child safety carriers for even the shortest car trip. They should also teach children to cross the street safely.

If your child is eligible to enter kindergarten in the fall of 2005 and you live in the Thief River Falls School District, you may consider enrolling in the Early Childhood Family Education (ECFE) Safety Town program which will be conducted in May. Call 681-8670 for information. If you live outside of the Thief River Falls School District, contact your local ECFE program for information on safety and parenting.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk about and identify streets, crosswalks, curbs, traffic signs and pedestrians. Talk about what red, yellow and green mean on a traffic light.

(Contributed by the Early Childhood Family Education Department of School District 564.)

There weren't fiddlers on the rooftop, but Franklin Middle School (FMS) sixth graders heard fiddle music Friday at the school. As part of a social studies unit, the students learned more about Lewis and Clark's expedition in the early 1800s. They heard that fiddlers traveled with Lewis and Clark. Musicians (from left) Bonnie Hallett, an FMS teacher; sixth grader Casey Braastad; seventh grader Johnnie Philipp; and Oklee resident Marlyn Haugen performed some music from that time as well.

Please continue to support our military families

by Sen. Mark Dayton

The tragic deaths of 1st Lt. Jason Timmerman, Sgt. David Day, and Sgt. Jesse Lhotka brought to 19 the number of Minnesotans who have been killed in Iraq. After their funerals, I met in St. Cloud with the adjutant general of the Minnesota National Guard, Major General Larry Shellito, and families of other Minnesotans currently serving in Iraq or Afghanistan.

The wives, husbands, parents and children of soldiers deployed in war zones carry extra-heavy burdens; they live in constant uncertainty about their loved ones' safety. At our meeting, one wife told us that after she learned soldiers in her husband's unit had been killed in Iraq, she "fell into the hugest hole," because she was unable to find out whether her husband was among the casualties.

Other wives described losing their jobs because they were unable to juggle working full-time, being single parents, managing their households, and maintaining other commitments. As a result, financial hardships were added to their burdens. Even some who continued to work have encountered financial difficulties because their husbands' active duty military pay is less than their civilian earnings.

Those spouses and their children are making enormous sacrifices while their loved ones serve our nation overseas. You may be able to help them.

If you know a family member or close friend of someone deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan, or anywhere else around the world, please offer a helping hand. Deployments can radically alter the lives of the families who have to endure the experience. Furthermore, Minnesota does not have active-duty military bases where families support one another during their loved ones' absences. Many of our Guard and Reservist families feel isolated, even in their own workplaces and neighborhoods. Frequently, I hear spouses say, "No one understands what I'm going through."

To find out what you can do to help the families of deployed troops, visit my Web site (www.dayton.senate.gov). "Support the Troops" and "Military Families" provide links to agencies and programs that help servicemembers and their families.

Minnesota's First Lady Mary Pawlenty provides opportunities on her Web site to help our military families. Her site (www.governor.state.mn.us/FirstLady) also has links to national organizations serving the families of active-duty military personnel.

If you are the family member of an airman, seaman, soldier, or marine and have questions or concerns arising from his or her deployment, you can contact the Minnesota National Guard's Family Assistance Center at 888-234-1274. The Center provides information on all military matters, such as health care, military pay, financial counseling, family support, and emergency assistance.

If you are not getting proper responses from your military chain of command regarding your loved one's deployment, you can contact my military affairs specialist, Nate Arch, or me at 612-727-5220 (toll-free 1-888-224-9043). He and I will help you get answers and assistance from the enormous military establishment.

All of us owe a debt of gratitude to the men and women who are risking their lives overseas. We can show our appreciation by helping their families while they are gone. Please find a way to extend your helping hand.

AFTER

The sun comes up,
but it must also go down.
We see a child smile,
but we also see a frown.
We see the flowers bloom,
but after, watch them fade,
for how else are other ones made?
We see the sky so clearly blue, but after, watch the clouds form too.
We must remember
there's always the rainbow after it rains, and there's always an answer to all life's pains.
There's always something to learn in everything that goes bad;
there's always a time to be happy, after you've been sad.

Manage your stress

by Danie Packard
FBM instructor, Thief River Falls

We hear a lot about stress, but what is it? Taber's Cyclopedic Medical Dictionary defines stress as "the result produced when a structure, system or organism is acted upon by forces that disrupt equilibrium or produce strain." In simple terms, stress is the result of any emotional, physical, social, economic or other factors that require response or change. Some stress is okay, but too much to handle can cause both mental and physical changes to occur. Stress can provide us with the energy and motivation to meet our daily challenges both at home and at our place of work.

Especially at this time of year, many farm families are faced with greater amounts of stress than other times of the year. There are taxes to be done, year-end records to be put together and next year's planning to be done. All of these things may add to the stress levels that already exist.

What can we do about the stress that we are encountering? First of all, recognize the stress and its warnings. Do you have increased headaches, chest pains, shortness of breath, fatigue, frequent illness, apathy, slowed thinking or racing thoughts, feelings of helplessness? Have your eating habits changed, are you impatient, quick to argue, or withdrawn from family and friends? Are you restless, easily irritated or emotionally fatigued?

OK, so I have stress, but what can I do about it? In many cases, the origin of the stress can not be changed immediately, therefore finding ways to maintain good mental health are important. Laughing is one of the best ways to reduce stress. Share a joke with a friend, read the comics or watch a funny movie. Try to find humor in the things that people do or say. Learn to relax – when you start feeling overwhelmed, stop, take a few long breaths or take a break and come back to the problem or situation later. Eat right and keep fit, give and accept support from family members and friends. Share your situation with a close friend or family member who you know will keep your conversation in strictest confidence. Prioritize and organize your day, realize that you and others have experienced stress before and you have overcome. Find people or organizations that can help you to relieve or lessen the amount of anxiety in your life.

A local Farm Business Management (FBM) instructor can help you get your records in order so that as you meet with your lenders and tax preparers, you are more confident and assured that you know your business and how it is going. Change those things that can be changed, and leave those things that cannot be changed for another day. For more information or assistance, see the FBM instructor in your area, or call 1-800-959-6282.

...Once a den mother, always a den mother

Many years ago, I was a Cub Scout den mother. While I was a den mother, I learned many things that have stayed with me throughout the years, like how to speak to a group of people, how to tie knots (well, square knots anyway), an appreciation for birds, how to carve with a pocketknife, how to tie a tie, how to sew patches on uniforms, how to fly a kite and much more. It was only right that I had to learn how to do something before I asked the boys to do it, wasn't it?

Before I proceed, I want to make clear that I will speak of den mothers in this column since that is what I was. This is simply for the sake of brevity (which is something I am not usually known for) and is not meant to exclude those wonderful gentlemen who are giving their time and talents to the scouting program. Go, gals AND guys!

Now, we can proceed. There is one thing I learned to do as a den mother that has stayed with me through these years and isn't such a good thing. Some people, my children in particular, say I save junk. I say I save good stuff that can be used again. There is a difference, you know. Any den mother worth her salt knows the difference between junk and good stuff. Good stuff is stuff that can be used to make other stuff.

To this day, it pains me to throw away an oatmeal container. Oh, I just know what wonderful things can be made with it. For a while, I saved them and gave them to my daughter who has a "project box." Then I realized, with my affinity for oatmeal, the containers were probably just contributing to her garbage fees, so I stopped. It also hurts to throw away good shoeboxes and handy-dandy plastic ice cream pails. I can't help but remember the times we den mothers would put out a call for mothers to save things like that for us. And those wooden sticks that come with caramels in the fall so we can make caramel apples – I never throw them away. I have baggies filled with them in my kitchen drawer.

I was a den mother several years ago, and it seems to me that we didn't have as many good things to save then as we do now. Nowadays things are plastic and can be washed and saved so easily. In my den mother days, everything was biodegradable and decomposable. (Isn't that a whole new story to write some day?)

Now, we have plastic containers that fast food comes in, all those good muffin and cookie containers from the store, and the covered plates and platters from Christmas goodies, and I could go on and on. I even gaze longingly at the many little yogurt containers with their cute covers – oh what I could do with them. Imagine what could be made with or saved in them - just imagine.

It seems like quantities of anything can always be turned into something else. I remember one Christmas when the rage was to make Christmas trees from little clear plastic cups that were used to measure medicine. I'm sure somebody was bored silly in the hospital and thought up the idea. We would glue the cup bottoms to a cardboard cone and then poke a string of colored lights into a hole we made through the cone and into the bottom of each cup. When they were plugged in, they were beautiful. (Never mind that when we took them out of their boxes the following year, the glue on the cups had given out and they all fell off.) I am glad I didn't have my Cub Scouts make those.

I still remember the first project we did. The theme for the month was "Pirates," and the first thing we did was to carve swords out of paint sticks. After I learned to do it myself, I taught the 8-year-old boys how to use their pocketknives safely. Then I gave each of them a paint stirring stick and sent them home to carve the best sword ever. They did! Some of the swords were works of art. Talk about "putting your eye out," some of them could have done it! What better thing to do when you are 8 years old than to make your own sword?

One mother said her son came home that evening and, after eating supper, went into his room with his knife and his paint stick. She said she sat quietly, within earshot, expecting to hear a scream any minute and see him come tearing out of that room covered with blood. But, worse yet, she didn't hear anything from the room. Imagine her surprise when he emerged some time later with a carved sword in his hand and a big smile on his face. Anyway, his dad was a doctor and his mom was a nurse, so he was pretty well protected.

There will be more next week. I'm sure you can't wait. Maybe I'll tell you about the meeting when the turkey died.

Farther than Fargo

Most people my age have been all over the United States, and a few have been overseas to places like Paris, the Swiss Alps, Jamaica, and the Sahara Desert. I can't say the same for myself, because the farthest I've been from home is Minneapolis; the only other state I've been to is North Dakota (Fargo), and I was once forced to go to Canada for Girl Scouts.

About a month ago, I was asked to go to Europe. The German exchange student, Katharina, was telling me about where she lived and how she frequently traveled to other countries like France, Italy and that she loved going to the North Sea. I said, "Wow, I wish I could do fun things like that." Then she brought up the idea that I visit her in Germany this summer. At first, my thoughts were there's no way my parents will let me go by myself to Europe. But it hadn't hit me that I would be 18 when summer rolled around, and there would be nothing Mom or Dad could do about it. After Katharina suggested that I travel to Europe and stay with her, I couldn't stop thinking about it. I imagined myself at the shore of the North Sea with the waves splashing my toes, standing only a few feet away from the Eiffel Tower, and rowing down a river in Italy. Then I started having doubts about whether I would be able to afford this trip or not.

The only two issues left were money and telling my parents. I thought for a week straight about how to raise money but wasn't coming up with anything. I searched for ideas online and my two best bets were selling lemonade and face painting. Finally, I decided to have a rummage sale with a lemonade stand and face painting this June. It wouldn't bring in a lot, but it would sure help.

When I finally told Mom and Dad about my adventure, they were skeptical at first about my being able to afford it, especially with college starting in August. After twenty minutes they gave up trying to change my mind because they knew there was nothing they could do to stop me from going by myself to a different country. I think that's what scared them the most.

Everyone (except my parents) told me this would be a great opportunity for me to make a small town getaway, not something to waste my money on, and they're right. Yes, there is still that little feeling in the back of my mind that I won't save enough money, but if I keep working hard at it, I know it's possible. My advice to you is: if you ever get an opportunity like this, please take it. If you think of it as something you'll only get to do once in a lifetime, it makes the bumpy road there that much more worth it.

P.S. Send money

Wittman's work to appear at NCTC Gallery during March

Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC) will be displaying the work of Mara Lunde Wittman of Warren during the month of March.

Mara Lunde Wittman of Warren, is primarily a textile artist, but throughout the last 10 years, she has had periods of focused activity in photography, drawing and painting. Therefore, she has chosen to show a diverse colorful range of artwork rather than focus on one medium. As with many artists, her creativity and excitement for learning have allowed her to experiment in many techniques.

She has gained recognition throughout Minnesota, mainly for her woven projects. She stated, "The loom is a peaceful place to spend an evening. The warmth of the wool yarn is comforting on cold winter nights. I enjoy the slow progression of color and pattern as a weaving unfolds. It is a nice break from my hectic life. Art is a way of relaxing and expressing myself after a day of helping others."

The NCTC Gallery is located at Northland College, 1101 Highway 1 E., room 257. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Women's History Month events open to the public

Kelsy Blowers, counselor at Northland Community and Technical College – Thief River Falls, invites the public to Women's History Month events being held at the campus.

On March 23 and 30, a self defense for women class is scheduled with instructor John Leopold. The course will take place from 12 to 1 p.m. Participants are encouraged to attend both sessions. There is no charge for the class, but registration is required by calling 681-0779.

On March 30, the Greenbush/Middle River Drama Department will perform "Smile" at 2 p.m. and again at 7:30 p.m. in the NCTC theater. The production is 35 minutes long and features five ladies who pose for a group photo in the late 1800s. While they "freeze" for a time exposure, their thoughts wander, raising questions about their past, present and future. "Why does Grandmama refuse to face the summer house?" "How did Mama come to lose her memory?" "What are her terrible daughters planning?" "And what does the maid know that the others do not?" All is revealed in a dramatic climax. This show not only depicts the styles of the turn of the century, but also analyzes problems of that era and how they were handled.

The performances are open and free to the public.

The public is also invited to tune into Pioneer 90.1 FM, the college's radio station, at 10 a.m. Monday through Friday, and participate in Women's History Month Radio Trivia. Prizes will be awarded.

Political commentators salivate

Political commentators are salivating at the prospect of a 2008 presidential race between Hillary Clinton and Condoleezza Rice.

It just might happen. Clinton is showing more political smarts since the last election than anybody else in her party. A lightning rod of controversy, she would keep people interested and awake, something the last two Democratic candidates failed to do.

Rice makes other possible Republican candidates look drab. As secretary of state, she'll spend the next three years waltzing on the international stage. By the time of the next election, she'll have faced off with every major leader in the world and have photos to prove it.

Should it be a big deal if two women run against each other for the presidency? Should it be a big deal if one of them is black?

Of course not. But because we've never had a female or black president, it would be a huge deal. And the whole process would shake this country up good and proper.

In 1954, northwestern Minnesota elected a teacher from Oklee named Coya Knutson to Congress. Until two years ago, Knutson was the only woman ever elected to Congress from Minnesota.

According to Gretchen Beito's biography of Knutson, "Coya Come Home," Knutson had political talent coming out her ears. She campaigned from barn to barn across the district, talking shop with farmers as if she were one of them.

But despite making her mark during two terms in Washington, Knutson was defeated when people within her own party became enraged at her independent streak and brought her down. They did it dirty. They duped her alcoholic husband into signing a letter which plaintively begged her to return to her domestic duties.

The letter made national news and Knutson's political career was over. The world isn't fair, and it is particularly unfair to people who try to break the mold.

Fifty years hasn't changed things all that much. Clinton throws political opponents into a seething rage far beyond what any of her political [illegible]. They simply hate her guts.

They are right to be scared of Clinton. She's smart, she's determined, and she's wants the job. Plus, if elected, she'd likely run a tighter ship than her notoriously undisciplined husband.

Meanwhile, Rice has been portrayed by more than a few left-wing cartoonists as a groveling slave of plantation owner George W. Bush. Such offensive racial insults have come from the very people you might expect to applaud the advancement of minorities.

Rice would have to overcome all kinds of prejudices, from left and right, from people who think that citizens of her gender and race are unfit for power, to people who think she has abandoned her gender and race by being a Republican.

The prospect of a Rice vs. Clinton race is so attractive because it would force this country to face down some of its darkest demons. It would make the right people uncomfortable for all the right reasons.

The old boy network would squirm. So would the bigots. So would condescending liberals who think themselves entitled to the loyalty of minorities.

And whatever the result, we'd be in good shape. Both Rice and Clinton are so talented that they would likely glitter once in office.

When Branch Rickey, the general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, brought up Jackie Robinson to the major leagues, it wasn't because Rickey was a bleeding heart trying to help out a disadvantaged minority. He just wanted to win a pennant.

Today, one can't imagine baseball history without Willie Mays, Henry Aaron, Kirby Puckett, Rod Carew and the hundreds of black players who followed Robinson.

In much the same way, the national political life of our country has for too long been denied the use of one half of its talent for no rational reason whatsoever.

The sooner women enter the political big leagues, the sooner we won't be able to imagine how our government ever got along without them.

Eleven of the 12 top salespeople at Franklin Middle School were able to take a ride in a limousine Thursday and given a free lunch at McDonald's. They were the top sellers in the Fall Fundraiser.

Middle School students are taken for a ride

Twelve students from Franklin Middle School (FMS) were given an opportunity Thursday, March 10, to take a ride - in a limousine.

Bob Stenson, Franklin Middle School counselor, explained that the 12 students were given this opportunity, which included a free lunch at McDonald's, because they were the 12 top sales people of the school's 2004 Fall Fundraiser.

For at least the past five years, FMS students have participated in the Fall Fundraiser, during which, Stenson said, students sell a variety of items, including magazine subscriptions. They continue to conduct this event because it is so successful. In fact, this year, students raised about $11,000 for the school.

Of the $11,000, an amount is dedicated to each class, and some to the school: $3,000 to the eighth grade class, $3,000 to the seventh grade class and $1,500 to the sixth grade class. These funds are used to help cover some of the costs associated with class field trips. In addition, $1,000 goes toward the purchase of books for the school, and $2,500 to $3,000 is dedicated to the Prowler Grant Fund. Stenson explained that the Prowler Grant Fund awards $500 grants for projects that benefit the learning environment at FMS. The committee of seven that makes those decisions consists of students and teachers. In the past, those funds have been used to purchase padded chairs for the media center, paint for hallway murals, dugouts at the baseball field, and picnic tables.

"It has been a really good deal for the school," said Stenson.

The students who went to McDonald's for a free lunch in the limousine ride provided by Royal Limousine of Thief River Falls were the top salespeople. They include: Tyler Gagner, Hailey Johnson, Derek Kayser, Kayla Kuznia, Mariah Stenerson, Cody Wolter, Richard Holand, Brittney Holter, Stephanie Jenkins, Corissa Kruse, Josh Kuznia, and Katrina Peterson.

Sons of Norway Granlund Lodge to host international evening

The meeting, which will convene at 6:30 p.m., will include a short business meeting with an attendance gift being awarded.

This is the annual international evening at the lodge and will feature a potluck supper at 6:30 p.m. Parents of the students are also to be supper guests.

Royal Limousines of Thief River Falls provided transportation for Franklin Middle School students.

Goodridge students participate in The Stock Market Game

Students at Goodridge Public School joined more than 8,500 students in 200 schools around Minnesota to compete in The Stock Market Game™ (SMG) this spring. Economics teacher Duane Kjono is advising 65 students as part of the curriculum at the school.

SMG is an interactive educational tool used in grades four through 12 to supplement subjects such as math, social studies, and business education while fulfilling Minnesota graduation standards. BestPrep, a Minnesota based non-profit organization, administers the program to students throughout the state to enhance economics education and financial literacy.

Student teams participating in SMG are given a virtual $100,000 to "invest" over a 14-week period. Each team receives daily portfolio updates on their current holdings, brokerage fees, interest and team rankings. During that period, teachers incorporate SMG's supporting materials into their curricula.

The spring session of SMG will conclude with an awards ceremony at the Earle Brown Heritage Center in Brooklyn Center, where awards will be given to the top two teams in each division. The winning teams will also earn tickets to a Twins game where they will be honored with a VIP tour of the Metrodome.

As part of SMG, students may also participate in the Investment Research Competition. Students demonstrate their academic abilities by creating a project based on research of a publicly traded company's history, products and services. The best project from each grade level division is honored at the awards ceremony. The winning students of this competition also receive tickets to a Twins game.

4-H state ambassadors collect books

During the month of January, Minnesota 4-H state ambassadors from around the state collected nearly 400 books to be used in a statewide community service project.

Kari Johnson, a member of the New Solum 4-H Club and a Minnesota 4-H state ambassador, was the coordinator for the project. Other Pennington County 4-Hers helped with the project as well.

The books were read and recorded on tape by 4-Hers from all over Minnesota during the month of February at Building Leadership and Understanding (BLU). BLU is the title for the weekend leadership conferences where youth in grades six through their freshman year in college experience working with others and learning about leadership hands on. As part of a community service project, the collected books were read, recorded and packaged by the 500 youth participating in the BLUs.

Pennington County 4-H had 27 young leaders attend the BLU conference that was held at the Northland Inn in Bemidji on Feb. 19 and 20. They had the opportunity to participate in this community service and attended workshops on youth leadership and team building.

The books were then delivered around the state by ambassadors to Nursery Crisis Centers so that young children could read and listen to them. Johnson presented books on tape to the Bethany Nursery Crisis Center in Duluth. Johnson attends the University of Minnesota – Duluth.

For more information on 4-H, call the Pennington County Extension Office at 683-7030 or 1-800-681-2116, or visit the Web site www.mn4h.org.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: My husband will retire at age 62 in June. Can he get Social Security in June?

A: Assuming all requirements are met, he must be 62 for the entire month to get benefits for that month so, unless he was born on the first or second of June, benefits will first be payable for July. Payment for a month arrives the next month. For example, payment for July arrives in August. Payment arrival dates vary based on day of birth. In May or June he should call the SSA national number, 800-772-1213, to make an appointment. His local office will actually keep the appointment. He will need at least his birth certificate, earnings estimate for the year, and information about you such as birthdate, social security number and marriage date.

Q: Is there a way to learn if I might be eligible for Social Security or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) without actually contacting an SSA office?

A: Yes, there is. New to the SSA website is the Benefit Eligibility Screening Tool (BEST), a series of online questions to quickly help you find out if you could potentially qualify for Social Security retirement, survivors or disability benefits, or Supplemental Security Income program benefits.

BEST also quickly screens your eligibility for Medicare benefits. BEST is useful as a self-screening tool but is not an application for benefits. It provides eligibility information based on the answers you give to the questions. It does not give estimated benefit amounts nor does it access your personal SSA records. You would need to contact a SSA representative, such as through the national toll-free number, 800-772-1213, or your local office, for more information or to file an application.

You can go to the BEST tool from the SSA homepage, www.socialsecurity.gov, in the center column, by clicking on "do you qualify?" or directly at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/r&m2.htm.

Did you know? Women represent 58 percent of all Social Security beneficiaries age 62 and older and approximately 70 percent of beneficiaries age 85 and older. For unmarried women, including widows, age 65 and older, Social Security comprises 52 percent of their total income. In contrast, Social Security benefits comprise only 38 percent of unmarried elderly men's retirement income and only 35 percent of elderly couples' income. Social Security is the only source of retirement income for 29 percent of unmarried elderly women.

Peterson secures $5.6 million for tri-county route

Congressman Collin Peterson announced that the U.S. House of Representatives passed the Transportation Equity Act: A Legacy for Users (TEA-LU) bill that includes a $5.6 million authorization for the Tri-county 10-ton truck corridor.

"I took this project to House Transportation Committee Chairman Don Young (Ark.) and Ranking Member Jim Oberstar (Minn.-8) and convinced them of its importance," Peterson said. "Because many of our federal transportation dollars are allocated by Minnesota's State Department of Transportation the money doesn't always get out to rural areas like it should. By convincing Chairman Young and Congressman Oberstar to set aside funds for this project, I made sure the federal money would go directly to the Gully 10-ton project without getting sidetracked in St. Paul."

The road sections involved in the 36.3 mile project area include Polk CSAH 2, Pennington CSAH 27 and 28, and Marshall CSAH 54. When completed, the new road will give northern Minnesota a new 10-ton shipping corridor linking northern Minnesota and U.S. Highway 2.

Peterson said, "There's no doubt that improving transportation capacity along this route will be significant for northern Minnesota. Polaris Industries and Marvin Windows, along with the lumber industry, regional gravel companies, local agriculture and related businesses, and other localized industries will be better able to deliver their goods. Having a safe and direct 10-ton shipping corridor should improve economic opportunity in the region."

What is it?

There are many unique and different tools used on farms. This one will be on display at the Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village this summer when the Smithsonian Traveling Exhibit "Barn Again! Celebrating an American Icon" will be at the Village. Guess what this tool was used for.

Answer: This is a bunghole drill and taper reamer for barrels. A bunghole is the opening for filling a barrel.

County law enforcement projects completed

and constructed the tower one section at a time. Hruby also credited Sentence to Serve labor with the construction of the repeater shed and concrete slab that it sits on.

Pennington County law enforcement is slowly transitioning from its old system. When it finally takes place, Hruby estimates that the transition will almost be as simple as the switch of a button.

New dispatch furniture

The county dispatch center now includes two complete work stations utilizing a combination of Watson Dispatch furniture and Motorola radio equipment that were purchased from the state of Minnesota bid.

Each ergonomically correct station is fully adjustable for the standing or sitting height of its user and for the first time, can operate independently from its counterpart. Now dispatchers have the option of sitting or standing for extended periods during a given shift. The height of each work station is fully adjustable, allowing its user to work from a seated or standing position, while keeping computer monitors at eye level.

The new dispatch furniture replaces what was once top of the line equipment.

"In its day in the '70s what we had was state of the art," Hruby said. He added that the old setup didn't offer enough outlets or space for new equipment.

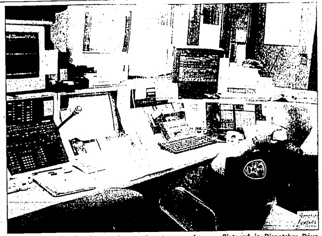
Dispatchers Mark Bruggeman and Frank Bruggeman said they were pleased with the improvements made to the dispatch room. Both independent work stations are using the same computer equipment, with a few upgrades. One addition includes a security monitor that can control all door locks and lights in the entire LEC building.

Mark said the new work stations offer a hands free option for working with the dispatch radio. Frank added that the hands free radio will allow dispatchers to work more economically because more tasks can be accomplished at once.

Frank said working conditions are better in the dispatch center. Aside from the adjustable stations, he was pleased with the installation of a coolant system, that keeps the dispatch room at a tolerable temperature.

"It's a real nice improvement," said Frank Bruggeman of the completed dispatch center. "The dual dispatch center will offer more efficient service to the community."

Frank noted that the transition between the old and new dispatch center went well. All dispatching equipment was moved to a tempo*rary location in an adjacent room.* Equipment was moved one piece at a time to ensure that 911 response was not hindered in any way.



This is how the Pennington County Law Enforcement Center's dispatch looked earlier this year. Pennington County and Thief River Falls outgrew this dispatch furniture after 30-years of use. Pictured is Dispatcher Dave Carlson working behind a crowded desktop of monitors, phones and keyboards.
